House Urged To Outlaw Defense Plant Strikes

Randolph, Costello Denounce Vultee Tieup; Cox Calls Walkout 'Treason'

Labor Roundup

PHILIP MURRAY, elected C. I. O. president to succeed John L. Lewis, hits at Government pressure to bring about "shotgun" peace arrangements between the labor factions. Page 6.

A. F. OF L. LEADERS are skeptical that Murray's election will increase labor peace prospects, but President William Green says the A. F. of L. peace committee will communicate with the C. I. O. group. Page 6.

Defenses Delayed

Congressional action to outlaw strikes in plants having National Defense orders was called for by three House members yesterday. Their talks were directed against the C. I. O.'s ten-day-old tie-up of the plant of the Vultee Aircraft Co., now manufacturing training planes, admittedly the "bottleneck" of the entire defense program.

Branding a strike against the Government or "essential works" of the Government in times of emergency as "treason," Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, declared that "Congress should declare such acts to be treason by legislation adopted at once."

Urges Congress to Act

"I have been expecting at least hoping," said Representative Cox, "that somebody high in the Government would at least give an expression of disapproval of this effort on the part of labor racketeers to interfere with the progress we are seeking in national defense.

"To strike against the Government as labor is now doing is just as much sabotage as for ownership to seek to prevent or break down operations."

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, noted the delay in delivery of Army planes now on order in the Vultee plant and declared:

"I don't set myself up as a labor mediator but it is time that Congress should take steps to see that there is no stoppage in important national defense orders."

YOUNGEST "KEYMAN" of Chest drive, George Gillespie, 5, hands $5 contribution from kindergarten of Barney Neighborhood House to Director Herbert Willett, jr.

Raising $2,000,000 to carry on the work of Community Chest agencies, the Rev. Dr. J. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, said yesterday, "will make many more Washingtonians feel their holy obligation for one another."

"The next few days," he told Community Chest solicitors at the Willard Hotel, "will be critical and the success of the drive will depend on your efforts during that time."

Failure to attain the goal, he continued, would show "ruthlessness and spiritual anemia."

Dr. Glenn declared that "in this campaign, we cannot practice the averted face; we cannot look away. Everybody has got to look and see the conditions and the needs to be righted with the funds raised."

Congress Faces New Battle on Aid to Britain

Neutrality Law Change, Johnson Act Repeal To Be Chief Issues

By the Associated Press

A renewed Congressional battle over assistance to England is shaping up for the coming session of Congress with proposals that American ships be free to carry cargoes into the war zone and that the Johnson Act be repealed apparently destined to become the principal issues.

Several Senators reported yesterday that in the aftermath of the election—in which both parties urged all possible material help to Great Britain—they were receiving quantities of mail urging action to promote the program.

In addition, various organizations which have been in the forefront of the move to help England are busily urging that election pledges be implemented with Congressional action.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, the assistant Republican leader and an influential member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said today that while he had always been for helping England he was "more so now than ever."

Grocery Strike Ends as Chain Boosts Wages

Clerks, Managers Vote To Accept Sanico Offer; Men Return Today

Nearly 1,000 Sanitary Grocery Co. clerks and managers last night voted to accept a compromise agreement with company officials and ended a strike that has shut down 225 stores since last Saturday.

All employes will return to work this morning.

However, company officials at an early hour today said they could not announce when Sanitary stores, closed now for a week, would be ready to reopen for business.

A majority of the clerks, members of Local 639-A, Retail Clerks International Protective Association, and all but one member of the managers' union, No. 1455, voted approval of the agreement involving wage raises, chief bone of contention in the walkout. The amount of the wage increase was not made public immediately.

The employes failed, however, to secure extra vacation periods, the other concession sought from the company.

The vote to end the strike came last night in simultaneous but separate meetings of the clerks and managers at Carpenters Hall, Tenth

Not a 'Spy Hunt'

Defense Commission Employes Investigated by Civil Service

A thorough, and highly personal, investigation of all employes of the National Advisory Defense Commission is being conducted by investigators of the Civil Service Commission, officials of both agencies admitted yesterday.

The admission carried with it the official interpretation that the probe is routine, and not a "spy hunt." Similar investigations, it was pointed out, are under way in other defense agencies, both in Washington and in field offices throughout the country.

A formal statement from the Civil Service Commission said that a published report of a spy hunt was inaccurate.

A spokesman for the Defense Commission said that some of the women employes there had been disturbed and angered at some of the personal information sought by the investigators.

While admitting that the investigation was necessary, this spokesman said he thought some of the investigators might have been too personal, especially in asking women employes to name those with whom they drank and those with whom they had dates.

He said he did not know whether the investigators had asked the women employes to supply telephone numbers.

Steady Raids Blasting Heart Of Bomb-Pitted Birmingham

London, (Saturday), Nov. 23. The German airforce skimmed over London last night and concentrated its fire on two Midland towns during the early hours of this morning.

[In Berlin, a United Press dispatch said the German airforce announced it was battering the great British industrial city of Birmingham again in an "extremely strong" attack, causing fires said to be visible from the north coast of France, 175 airline miles distant.

[Informed Nazi spokesmen said, according to the United Press, the entire city quarters," probably meaning the financial section, as well as the factory areas of the city of more than 1,000,000 population were being "destroyed and gutted."

Attack in Waves

[In a ten-hour raid on Birmingham last Tuesday night the Germans claimed that more than 500 of their dive bombers had dumped 1,000,000 pounds of explosives and hundreds of incendiary bombs.]

In the Midlands the raiders came over steadily for hours and considerable damage is reported.

There was no damage done to military objectives, as far as is known, but it was stated a church and two convents were among the property damaged.

The attack on a West Midlands town was carried on by successive formations of German planes which came in at ten-minute intervals from all directions, unloading high explosives and incendiaries on many districts. The planes were greeted by the heaviest barrage yet heard in the district.

There were some casualties when a hospital received a direct hit. Preparations are now going on to evacuate the remainder of the patients.

London Has Respite

Early reports indicate widespread damage to a residential property.

Two sailors were killed and five other people were injured when a lone German bomber glided over Liverpool late last night and dropped two bombs.

During yesterday and early last night Germany seemed to be giving London a new kind of raid. Sirens blew the warning soon after blackout time, but neither gun, planes nor bombs were heard until

Stores, Machines Left by Fascists Choke Roads, Greeks Report

Athens, Greece, Nov. 22.—Koritza, Italy's most important military base in the eastern part of Albania, was captured this morning by a victorious Greek army which is now advancing rapidly on all fronts. It is said here that 28,000 prisoners have been taken at Koritza.

The town for which a serious battle has been going on during the last week was abandoned by the Italians early yesterday afternoon and immediately subjected to heavy artillery fire by retreating units which had taken up positions on heights to the north.

This shelling continued for the better part of 24 hours while the bulk of the Fascist army withdrew to the shelter of Mount Ivan, where one strong fortification remained in Italian hands.

It is said that a large portion of the strong force which held Koritza retreated toward Mount Ivan. Officials here state that the defeated army totaled six full divisions (72,000 to 90,000 men), with considerable auxiliary units.

[The Italians declared only two divisions were holding Koritza.]

British Uphold Greek Figure

[The British Broadcasting Company, however, estimated last night that there were no less than seven full Italian divisions at Koritza and announced that, according to a Belgrade, Yugoslavia, dispatch, the Italian base at Pogradetz, Albania, also had fallen.

[The Associated Press reported that the ministry of home security in Athens charges that the retreating Italians "laid waste and plundered" Greek villages and mistreated Greek women, taking many as hostages.

[The ministry, the dispatch continued, declared that "the town of Saydes was set afire and the Italians left behind them unprecedented signs of savagery and barbarity."]

Greek artillerymen and machine-gunners, in a fierce attack on Mount Ivan, are understood to have quickly silenced the Italian batteries there.

[A Greek government spokesman, as parading Athens crowds were shouting "On to Rome!" said that "not a single Italian soldier remains on Greek territory," except as a prisoner.]

WILLIAM WILLIAMS has answered his call

By Marshall Andrews.

William is dead.

That is to say a Washington tradition is dead; a Washington institution has passed with the years. Never again will a Washington social gathering be graced with William's ineffable touch.

For 22 years William Williams, in a silk hat that grew rustier with the years, in a green coat that seemed a little greener every season, in white gloves always a little out at the fingers, has called carriages at Washington doorways when big events were doing within. All Washington's diplomatic and social set knew him; the curious who inevitably cluster on the fringes of big events knew him; even the casual passersby who skirted the marquees before Washington mansions at such times knew William's stentorian voice and his commanding figure.

Three years ago William was stricken ill. At his age, illness did not treat him lightly. Afterward,

Shape of Things to Come

British Believe Grand Scale Near East Attack Is at Hand

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Nov. 22.—Britain's military leaders, striving to anticipate the Axis' next major stroke, are trying to piece together its probable outlines.

A military expert said tonight it was likely to take the form of a grand-scale pincers campaign striking at the Suez Canal and Egypt from two directions, designed to end Britain's dominance in the eastern Mediterranean and Iraq's oil fields, one of the war's rich prizes.

GEN. GRAZIANI
Expected to Strike

GEN. WAVELL
Would Meet Thrust

This look into the future assumed that the Axis would have the friendly neutrality if not the cooperation of Soviet Russia—something that remains to be seen. The return of German Ambassador Franz von Papen to Turkey and Germany's efforts to woo the Bulgarians into the ranks of the active Axis allies were interpreted as diplomatic preparations for a military offensive whose success would mean the end of Greece and Turkey

Gen. Pershing's Physician Bars Job as Envoy

Admiral Leahy Reported Likely To Get Vichy Post

Gen. John J. Pershing, selected by President Roosevelt to be Ambassador to France, has been required by his doctor's orders to decline appointment, and Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, retired, Governor of Puerto Rico, was reported last night to have been chosen for the post.

The New York Times, in a copyright article, said that word as to Admiral Leahy's acceptability to the Vichy government was expected momentarily.

President Roosevelt revealed at his Hyde Park, (N. Y.), press conference yesterday that Gen. Pershing had been asked to take the French post but after several days of trying to persuade his doctor to approve, had been compelled to decline appointment with deep regret.

President Roosevelt revealed that he had selected Pershing because he felt that since the general had been associated in the World War with Marshal Henri Petain, now chief of state of France, the two would understand each other.

Word that the commander of the American Expeditionary Force in the World War had had to decline came as a surprise to officials here who knew his appointment had been decided on.

The President told reporters that the resignation of William C. Bullitt, present ambassador, submitted November 7, had not been accepted, but it was taken for granted, in view of the position having been offered Pershing, that it is to be accepted.

Eager speculation on the identity of the man who will succeed him met with State Department silence. Confidence was expressed by one official closely associated with for-

Sofia Expected To Join Axis Despite Soviet

Moscow Reported Frowning on Move By Bulgarians

By the Associated Press

Sofia, Nov. 22.—Russia has advised her little Slav friend, Bulgaria, to steer clear of outright membership in the expanding Axis alliance, a qualified source said today.

Nevertheless, despite underground tension in the country, most observers are convinced that Bulgaria eventually will go 100 per cent for the Axis and the "new order."

Bulgarian leftists—lumping together Communists, liberals, Democrats and agrarians—who represent a large section of Bulgarian public opinion, are arguing that so long as Russia herself is not an outright party to the Axis military alliance Bulgaria should stop short of joining.

Believe Nation Is Too Weak

But although King Boris risks internal opposition to a pro-Axis military policy, diplomatic circles say, Bulgaria is not strong enough, even with Russian backing, to resist other demands Hitler is believed to have made to the King, who recently visited Berlin.

Accordingly, Bulgarian ministers may go to Berlin next week to learn exactly what is expected.

The result, diplomatic quarters say, may follow the pattern of Rumania—gradual introduction of pro-German leaders in key cabinet posts, then complete pro-German control of the government, economic subservience, and finally an invitation to virtual military occupation which the country may be forced to accept unless the Russian attitude changes to more positive opposition to German aims.

As for the reported Russian ad-

Senate to Use Its Old Chamber, House Going to Office Building

By James D. Secrest

The Senate and the House will hold the remaining sessions of the Seventy-sixth Congress in sharply contrasting chambers, it was decided yesterday, while their halls are made safe for the new Congress.

Amid shades of Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun and other statesmen of an earlier generation, the Senate will convene at noon Monday in the former Supreme Court room of the Capitol, which was for 40 years the Senate chamber.

The House simultaneously will meet in the bright and modern Ways and Means Committee room of the New House Office Building, which contrasts as greatly with the Senate's quarters as does the new with the old Supreme Court chambers.

Both Houses adopted resolutions yesterday authorizing the transfers so that David Lynn, Capitol architect, could start work at once on reinforcing the heavy glass and iron roofs in the Senate and House. As the work will take at least six weeks, the Seventy-sixth Congress will adjourn in its temporary quarters.

Workmen yesterday afternoon were replacing long horsehair benches in the Supreme Court chamber with plush Senatorial

Bulgarian Border And Dardanelles Towns Ordered To Black Out

By the Associated Press

Ankara, Nov. 22.—The Turkish government proclaimed martial law tonight in virtually all sections of European Turkey, including Istanbul, "in view of the general political situation."

This step was taken shortly after Germany's ambassador, Franz von Papen, returned from Germany, presumably carrying a virtual ultimatum that Turkey join in the Axis-planned "new European order."

[A New York Times dispatch from Istanbul said that a state of siege exists in the districts covered by the martial law proclamation.]

[The official Ankara radio last night praised the Greek victory at Koritza and said that "the Italians are no longer able to resist alone," the United Press reported.]

[On both sides of the Turkish-Bulgarian frontier, towns were completely blacked out, the International News Service reported from Budapest in a dispatch which added that Turkish military authorities were said to have ordered mock air raid alarms to train residents of Turkish Thrace against surprise bombing raids.]

Dardanelles Included

Sections of Asiatic Turkey, bordering on the vital Dardanelles, also were included in the martial law proclamation.

The order became effective immediately for a one-month period.

A terse announcement said:

"The prime ministry and council of ministers, as a result of its deliberation November 8, have deemed it necessary to proclaim martial law from the day of this announcement for one month in the districts of Istanbul, Kirklareli, Edirne (Adrianople), Tekirdaj, Channakkale and Kojaeli.

"Corps Gen. Ali Riza Artuokalin, commander of gendarmerie, is appointed to take charge in these districts. This step is taken under the authority granted in section 86 of the Turkish constitution."

Gasoline Rationed

The proclamation followed a three-hour meeting of the council of ministers, which also was reported to have approved a bill so strictly rationing gasoline that it prevents use of private automobiles or power boats.

Physicians, embassies and legations were exempted from the gas rationing. Food rationing was reported under consideration.

There were unofficial reports that the government already was studying the problem of possible removal of civilians from Istanbul, Turkey's

Mystery Blast Wrecks Huge Still At Oil Refinery

Eldorado, Ark., Nov. 22 (AP).—The huge No. 4 still at the Lion Oil Refining Company here was demolished by a mysterious explosion tonight. The big tubular distillery was immediately enveloped in flames.

The original blast was felt all over this city. It was followed by a series of lesser explosions, apparently caused when the flames reached each separate coil.

There was no immediate report of any casualties.

The blaze was confined to the single still.

Yugoslavia Likely To Scorn Axis Bids

Armed Neutrality Policy Will Be Rigidly Enforced

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 22.—Yugoslavia will reject without qualification any invitations or suggestions that this government join the signers of the tripartite pact, it was authoritatively stated tonight by a semiofficial source

Moreover, the assurance was given that the government will discourage journeying of many senior ministers or elder statesmen, which might be construed as groundwork for alliances or agreements or "understandings" with any power or group of powers.

It was emphasized that the Yugoslav policy is one of strictest armed neutrality and that it will be rigidly enforced on the diplomatic front as well as the frontiers.

Concern Over Axis

There was increasing concern in diplomatic circles here over the growing Axis bloc, and a persistent rumor, traced to Italian, Rumanian and Hungarian sources, said today an official Yugoslav representative would be dispatched to Berlin early in December to discuss Yugoslavia's position in the "new Europe."

Military circles remained somewhat calmer, and it was pointed out that the Greek victory might tend to delay or even permanently postpone Bulgaria's adherence to the Axis pact. Rumania's signature is considered to be merely a question of Rumanian Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu's arrival in Berlin, appropriate ceremonies and a fountain pen.

Official circles followed with great interest today the Axis press interpretations of Hungary's signing of the tripartite pact as a "group of discouragement" against a further spread of war.

Paramount Question

Bulgaria's attitude remains the paramount question here, the insistent Sofia reports that the Bulgarian foreign minister, Ivan Popoff, and the Bulgarian prime minister, Bogdan Philoff, would go to Berlin next week, and the increasing Bulgarian press agitation for an outlet to the Aegean Sea, are creating an atmosphere which some well-informed Belgrade circles regard as preliminary to compromise. In that case Bulgaria would affix her signature only if Germany agrees to enforce with arms Bulgaria's demands on Greece for an outlet to the sea.

Turkish sources in Belgrade admit the most profound apprehension over Bulgaria's position, and the Turkish blackout, disruption of rail schedules and continued mobilization are cited as unmistakable signs of Turkey's intentions.

Additional reservists are being dispatched to south and central Serbia, and the First, Third and Fifth Yugoslav armies are now fully mobilized along the entire Yugoslav frontiers from northern Slavonia to southern Macedonia and Montenegro.

Victory Predicted By British Leaders

But Speeches Warn Against Relaxing Invasion Guards

By James MacDonald

Copyright by New York Times

London, Nov. 22.—Amid warnings that the fear of a German invasion should not be relaxed, leaders of the British armed forces confidently predicted Britain's ultimate victory in various speeches today.

Sir Cyril Deverell, former chief of the imperial general staff and honorary director general of the Army-Royal Air Force Savings Association, addressing a civic luncheon at the opening of the Huddersfield War Weapons Week, said the last thing Germany wished for was a long war and that they had failed to obtain a short, sharp decision.

"We have to keep on hitting our enemies now," Sir Cyril said, "while preparing in the most thorough manner to deliver at the right time and place the most decisive and best prepared offensive that has ever been launched."

Cites Invasion Peril

At a home guard dinner at Saffron Walden, in Essex, yesterday evening, Brig. Gen. C. G. Charlton warned his listeners against thinking that the danger of invasion was over. He said: "We know Hitler is continually making every preparation for invading this country behind the French Channel ports, and is preparing down to the last man and to the last rifle." Charlton added that it was his firm belief that Hitler is doomed to failure."

A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, speaking at a luncheon today, asserted that the British people face with confidence and determination "the task of making sea power hold on and lead to victory. I am convinced," he added, "that we are going to hold on and win victory."

Must "Teach Germany"

Addressing the annual luncheon of the Royal Navy Volunteer Reserve today, Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, first sea lord of the admiralty, said that the public could be best assured that "neither the first lord nor I have any other purpose than to reach the steadfast goal we have set ourselves—to win this war, to defeat Hitler and his satellites and to make a home in which our people may dwell in peace and security."

Sir Nevile Henderson, former Ambassador to Germany, speaking at Cheltenham on the War Weapons Week, said Britain would never get stable conditions in Europe until Anglo-German cooperation is assured. But he went on to say:

"When this war has been fought and won we can keep Germany down for a time, but you cannot keep Germany down always. You will not get settled conditions in western Europe until the Germans and British can work together. We are ready to do it. The trouble is Germany has to be taught somehow."

Italy Admits Koritza's Loss, Aid Is Rushed

Reinforcements Sent To Check Evzones; Losses Put High

By Camille Cianfarra

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 22.—The Italian high command today announced that Koritza had been evacuated and that two Italian divisions which were in that city had been withdrawn to a new line of resistance formed west of the town. Reinforcements, it was stated, were being rushed up the line to check the Greek forces which have advanced about 12 miles as the crow flies into Albanian territory.

The Greeks broke through after 11 days of bitter fighting, during which the Italians suffered considerable losses, although "those of the enemy are equal if not heavier," according to the war communique. No mention is made of the situation on the Epirus front, an omission which has led many to believe that actions are in progress also in that sector.

This is the first time the Italian people have been officially notified of an important Greek success since the beginning of the war on October 28. Koritza is Albania's third largest town and a valuable military base. Although the Italians stressed that its evacuation does not mean that it has fallen into the hands of the Greeks, they nevertheless admit that its loss created a new strategic situation which, in order to be reversed, will call for a strong effort in the future.

Setback Called "Temporary"

Commenting on the communique responsible Italian circles stressed today that in keeping with the statement made by Premier Mussolini in his speech last Monday, the Italian government was "not concealing unfavorable news" from the people.

The Italian view is that the setback is only temporary.

General Ilio Jori, military expert of the Corriere Padano, offered the only comment on the Greek war. He said that Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, the Italian undersecretary of state and at present commanding the armed forces, is obviously concentrating on the reorganization of the Italian forces and preparing the logistical services necessary for a future offensive.

'Will Fly Through' Greece, Italy Says

[New York, Nov. 22 (AP)—The official Rome radio announced tonight:

"The temporary Greek entry into Koritza means absolutely nothing, because once Gen. Cubaldo Soddu's troops are organized they will occupy all of Greece, literally flying through the entire country.

"It will be foolish to say that the Greeks are not brave fighters, but even they will be helpless against what is to come."

a long time afterwards. The fact that, except for Tuesday night, when hell popped here for a few hours this has been the quietest week the capital has had since the blitzkrieg began.

Although this is a little like the early days of air raids over Britain it is not quite the same because when it is quiet here the people know that some other part of the country is being pounded. Another difference between now and those days of late summer is that then few people here believed that what had happened to Warsaw and Rotterdam would happen here. Now it has and few doubt that the worst is yet to come.

Weather conditions may have accounted for the slackening of the attack against London during the last 48 hours. The British admitted it was too much for them and canceled all bombing operations over enemy territory last night.

However, this morning bombers of the coastal command carried out a heavy attack against the Stavanger airport in Norway causing fires, explosions, and digging up the runways.

[The Associated Press dispatch said the attack on Stavanger was carried out with American-made Lockheed-Hudson bombers. Their performance in the action the British authorities praised highly.]

Two German bombers were shot down during the day. The first was a Dornier-215, flying alone, over Surrey. A second Dornier was attacked over the Sussex coast and crashed in open country near Newhaven.

Italian Asks U. S. to Cease Aiding Britain

Merely Prolongs War, Won't Alter Result, He Says in Article

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 22.—Marius Appelius in today's Popolo d'Italia suggests to the United States that she desist from helping Great Britain, since it would only mean a useless prolongation of the war which will not alter the final results—Axis victory.

He admits that "unfortunately the solidarity of the North American plutocracy renders the struggle longer and harder," but asserts that "mankind is determined to solve once and for all a situation which cannot be solved by half-measures." This situation, Appelius explains, is Britain's world hegemony.

In order to bring about its downfall, he says, the Axis is gradually enlisting the support of the "majority of European and Asiatic nations, so as to form a new international order which will take the general character of a true world-wide united front against Britain.

"In the face of this world-wide front," he continues, "even the North American people will be induced to meditate on their behavior, and the responsibilities of all kind which they are assuming in uselessly prolonging the struggle, which finds the majority of the people of the world aligned against Britain."

Analyzing Russia's attitude, Appelius states that despite Anglo-American efforts Moscow is siding with the Axis and Japan, which "have recognized the existence of the Russian factor with its right to live and expand.

"The inherently anti-plutocratic orientation of this important element of international life," he says, "as well as its geographical situation in Europe and Asia proves that Soviet Russia harmonizes with the "new order" and that she may legitimately revolve around the vital space that will not affect in the least the vital spaces of the new Europe and Asia.

"Russia is a world to herself, but she is also an anti-plutocratic and anti-British world, which finds within the anti-plutocratic and anti-British orientation of the new international order an atmosphere favorable to the completion of its process of internal settlement."

vice to avoid military commitments, officials and the government-supervised press are not commenting on it.

Diplomatic and military circles discredit the idea that King Boris agreed with Hitler in their recent talk on any plan for immediate action against Greece.

In traveling from Bucharest to Sofia I saw no evidence of preparations for the passage of German troops through this country.

Some parliamentary deputies, apparently with the government's tacit consent, delivered themselves during the day of violently worded demands for territories now held by Greece and Yugoslavia.

Deputy Nicolai Nicolaieff, a former minister of the interior, put it this way:

"Nobody will forgive us if we keep our hands folded and expect someone to give us on a silver platter the territories we want."

At the adjournment of the session deputies clustered around Premier Bogdan Philoff asking for information about rumors that Bulgaria was on the verge of general mobilization, was preparing to present an ultimatum to Greece, and was sending negotiators to Germany.

"Everything is going all right," the premier told them. "There's no reason to worry."

largest city and the most vulnerable to air attacks.

Observers believe von Papen might have brought a proposal that pro-British Turkey pledge herself to stand aside if Bulgarian and German troops attack Greece in aid of Italy.

Newspapermen at Istanbul put one question to Von Papen—would "normal relations" between Germany and Turkey continue?

His answer:

Greeks Chase Foe After Koritza Falls

ments of the Greek army took possession of Koritza and hoisted the blue and white flag of the Hellenes over the town hall. It is asserted here that they were joyfully welcomed by the Albanian and Greek inhabitants.

Fleeing Units Taken

Less than an hour after the entrance into Koritza the conquest of Mount Ivan was completed. It is understood that not only the remaining artillery position and fortress was seized but that extremely large numbers of prisoners were taken, including those units which fled to Ivan for shelter when the town was given up yesterday.

[A United Press dispatch states that the Athens radio reported early Saturday that in addition to capture of Koritza a "great victory" had been scored by the Greeks in the Argyrocastro sector where the main body of Italians was said to be retreating rapidly toward Valona.

Defeat a Major Disaster

["This is the only route left open to the Italians," the announcer said, adding that Greek cavalry was in hot pursuit and meeting little resistance, the dispatch stated.

[The Italian defeat at Koritza was termed "indescribable." The radio said one entire motorized unit was "annihilated," hundreds of vehicles strewn along the roadside and "hundreds upon hundreds" of Italians captured.]

The amount of material and prisoners is extraordinarily large, even when not taking into consideration the limited scale of this battle as compared with the German victory in France. No accurate estimate could be established of the extent of the booty, but reliable sources believe important numbers of captives were made today. These informants claim that two-thirds of Italy's motorized equipment in Albania has been seized and enough blankets, stores and small arms, light artillery and ammunition to equip a few Greek divisions. It must be emphasized that these estimates cannot yet be confirmed.

The Italians are withdrawing pell-mell to the west, where it is reported from Rome that two Fascist divisions hope to make a stand with new reinforcements. Information received here indicates that not even this may be achieved. It is said that the Fascist forces are trying to form a new defense line, but their retreat is so disorderly that this move has been forestalled and in more than one instance Italian artillery is perforce firing on its own infantry.

May Stand on Coast

It is possible that Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, the Italian undersecretary of war and at present commanding the Italian forces in this sector, will not be able to make a strong stand again until he withdraws his retreating forces to a line based roughly on Valona and intervening distances to Elbasani.

The feeling of the average Greek soldier tonight is: "Give us arms and we'll push them into the sea." The victory is enormous and Greece has a just right to feel proud. Advances of considerable depth—in some cases as much as 5 kilometers across mountainous territory—were made in at least three other sectors.

Whatever the missing details, it is clear that Italian resistance—in itself a paradoxial term for the invading army—is cracking. The official spokesman tonight said that one of the chief factors holding up the Greek advance was the blockade of tremendous stores and deserted equipment left upon the roads.

A government spokesman said that despite the superiority of Italian arms and numbers "our heroic soldiers are advancing everywhere, and attacking machine-guns with bayonets." He reported that on a southern sector 460 Italian soldiers accompanied by three officers had deserted to the Greek side.

The Greeks feel, too, that they are liberating their sizable minority in Albania. All the territory in which fighting is now going on belonged to Greece for a time after the last war.

Air Force Harries Retreat

Greece's small air force kept right on after the enemy, bombing retreating columns and reconnoitering their hastily improvised positions. The British air arm is cooperating in this phase of the attack.

It is obvious that the British Royal Air Force is helping to harry the retreating Italians, and tonight headquarters here announced that a successful raid was carried out yesterday on the Albanian town of Tepeleni.

Pilots reported that considerable damage was caused in the attack on Tepeleni.

[From Salonika, the Associated Press reported that British bombers rained explosives on the lines of retreat of the Italians leaving the Koritza area and shot down at least 40 Fascist planes in the last few days, according to reports reaching that Greek city.

[Italian communication lines were bombed, this dispatch stated, from Koritza to the Albanian coastal ports, mostly in night operations with the aid of bright moonlight it was reported.]

Commander in Chief Gen. Alexander Papagos issued an order of the day congratulating "the enthusiastic self-denial and purely Greek heroism" of his troops.

"In 25 days," he said, "you have expelled the cowardly invader from our soil. The entire world chants its praise for the indomitable courage of the Greek soldier, and international public opinion admires the greatness of your spirit. God, and the Blessed Virgin of Tinos, bless you in your struggle."

Gen. John Metaxas, whose capacity as a great strategist earned him the sobriquet "Little Moltke" while he was still a military student in Germany as a youth and whose record in the Balkan and Turkish wars has subsequently upheld this estimate, has now crowned his brilliant career. Tonight he issued a proclamation to the Greek people in which he said:

"Twenty-five days ago we were attacked with only aim of stealing from us those qualities which the enemy did not possess—our liberty and our national independence and our honor. All Greece took up arms and the desperate struggle began immediately.

"Our success soon began and it has been followed by one victory after another. Our army, navy and air force have rivaled each other in glorifying the name of Greece. We must thank our brave ally, the British, for their wholehearted help, and for the incomparable exploits of their fleet and their famous aviators.

"During the past ten days the struggle became most intense in the west where a continuous heavy battle resulted in the fall of the Morova bastian and the capture today of Koritza, as well as an advance on all fronts.

"When Mussolini decided to subjugate Greece we took the decision not to be exterminated. We will live and with our ally, Britain, we will conquer. Our path will not be strewn with flowers, but we will face all dangers and we will conquer the enemy.

"We fight not only for our existence, but for the other Balkan peoples and the liberation of Albania.

"We are struggling for ideals whose importance transcends our boundaries and the boundaries of the Balkans, and extends to all humanity. We should thank God whose providence has once more designated Greece as a champion in such a supreme struggle."

Berlin, Nov. 22.—Italy's acknowledgement of the loss of Koritza was received without comment today in Berlin. The press, as usual, publishes the official communique of the Italian high command, but without high-lighting, in any way, the defeat of the Duce's legions.

The Gallup Poll

Voters Favor More Planes For Britain

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 22.—With American aviation plants working to achieve the greatest airplane production in history, one major question popular opinion may have some influence in deciding is—Should we send more to the British?

Regardless of how this question may develop in the months ahead, a Nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows today that a substantial majority of United States voters favor sending more planes to England, "even though this might delay our own national defense program."

"England is the battlefield," Institute interviewers were repeatedly told by voters throughout the Nation. "Now is the critical time. If England wins we may never have to use our own planes."

Although the question of how many planes can be spared is one for the military and defense experts, 60 per cent of those voters with opinions on the question said they would favor sending more planes to Britain.

Voters were asked:

"Should the United States send more airplanes to England, even though this might delay our own national defense program?"

The answers of those with opinions were:

Yes	60%
No	40%

One voter in ten (10%) said he was undecided on the question.

President Roosevelt raised the issue of more planes for Britain in his Boston speech shortly before the election. He announced the Administration was clearing the way for the British purchase of some 20,000 fighting planes of all types in coming months.

The survey shows that Democrats and Republicans are on the same side where planes for Britain are concerned. Sixty-one per cent of the Democrats with opinions on the question said they would approve sending more planes, while 59 per cent of the Republicans agreed.

Closest division of sentiment on the question appeared in States like Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan where an average of 54 per cent of the voters in the survey said they would favor sending more planes. Forty-six per cent were opposed if this should mean scanting American defense production.

Section by section the results were:

Mid-Atlantic	60%	40%
East Central	54	46
West Central	56	44
South	72	28
West	64	36

Near East Attack Believed at Hand

as fre states and the eventual concentration of almost all the Axis forces on beleagured Britain.

This informant felt the bombing of England, gestures of friendship with Spain and feints at the fortress of Gibraltar were merely side issues in a plan of unparallelled military and political activity.

Here is this informant's idea of Germany's new drang nach osten (drive to the east), which he said had been maturing since Italy entered the war.

1. While Italy engages the bulk of the Greek Army, still weak in modern equipment and aircraft, German troops led by famed Panzer (armored) divisions will boil through Bulgaria into Northern Greece, first occupying Salonika and then Athens.

2. Turkey will be asked by Von Papen to allow German and Italian troops to proceed through her territory to Syria and Palestine. Germany's demand will be backed by Russian pressure going as far as a threat of war.

3. Marshal Rodolfo Graziani of Italy will attack Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's Middle Eastern army from Libya in North Africa, simultaneously with the first contact between the Axis and British troops in Palestine. The Italian general's main stroke will be at Cairo and Alexandria, his secondary attack at Khartoum on the upper Nile River in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, seeking to cut the Nile and intercept possible British reinforcements from South Africa.

4. Great Britain will be forced to send a large part of her already outnumbered army into Palestine to protect the Suez Canal and halt the Axis flanking movement toward the oil fields of Iraq. Graziani's blow must be met west of Matruh on the north coast of Egypt.

About to Begin?

There are numerous signs, this informant said, that the military part of some such campaign is about to begin. He argued further: Hungary's alliance with the Axis is "bait" for Bulgaria and Yugoslavia. Bulgaria's masses lean toward Moscow, and the informant asserted his belief that Russia and Germany may be working together.

Yugoslavia is under financial and industrial obligations to Italy.

Turkey, the only strong military power between Germany and Palestine, is the biggest Axis obstacle.

British foreign office officials insist they are satisfied with the position of Turkey, linked to Britain by a mutual aid pact. But there is a strong feeling among some unofficial yet informed circles that Turkey, who otherwise would fight the Axis, would deal with Germany if confronted with the threat of a Russian attack through Georgia and trans-Caucasia.

Furthermore, Turkey's army, whose strength is much stressed in the British press, is weakened by a lack of armored fighting vehicles and aircraft.

Russia's reward for taking part in such a plan would be great. My informant declared she had been offered Athens, a Mediterranean port she has long coveted, a slice of western Turkey, including the Dardanelles and Istanbul, and Iran (Persia).

Not Easy to Achieve

Such an Axis plan, my informant added, has manifest disadvantages. The Axis would operate over extended lines of communication, across mountains, deserts and rivers, with a constant threat of aerial bombardment by the British.

Reinforcement of men and materials in north Africa would be virtually impossible for the Italians as long as the British navy rules the Mediterranean. The British army in the Middle East, although outnumbered, is a fine force, well equipped and trained for Mideastern warfare.

"Nevertheless," my informant commented, "the plan has a chance of success. Germany has, as she had in France and Flanders, the men, machines, aircraft and a plan. Casualties would be heavy, but the goal is great.

"If the fall of Turkey and Greece and the absorption of Bulgaria and Yugoslavia into the Axis seem fantastic, remember that a year ago France was Europe's first military power and Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands and Belgium were free.

"Finally, there is one bit of statistics worth remembering: The Axis will mobilize her eleventh million when Britain mobilizes her fifth."

House Will Rush Defense Requests

Committee to Act Within 48 Hours On Appropriations

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Edward T. Taylor, of the House Appropriations Committee, yesterday proposed 48-hour committee action on all urgent defense recommendations.

Awaiting preliminary budget estimates, Taylor said his deficiencies subcommittee will be held in readiness all through the next Congress to meet any emergency defense needs.

So far as possible, Taylor said, a defense yardstick will be applied to all appropriations and in the case of special defense fund recommendations by the President "our committee will act within 48 hours."

Reorganized for an early start on 1942 fiscal year appropriations, the House Appropriations Committee generally was committed to a policy of close pruning on "normal" governmental expenses as a partial offset to added defense items.

The pace in holding down regular departmental bills will be set by the Independent Offices subcommittee headed by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, which will open hearings December 9, and the Treasury-Postoffice subcommittee, headed by Representative Louis Ludlow, of Indiana, which will start work December 2.

Tax Conferences Planned.

Additional taxes and an increase in the national debt to help carry the load meanwhile will be discussed at the White House conferences beginning November 29. These conferences will be attended by the chairmen and ranking tax spokesmen of the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committees.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee has already declared for a policy of reasonable cuts in nondefense appropriations, coupled with sufficient increases in taxes to "balance" the regular expenses of the Government.

Taylor said his committee is ready to carry out the appropriation end of such a program.

"As nearly as we are able to do so, we should pay as we go," said Taylor. "National defense appropriations, of course, must come first. We must husband our resources as far as we can, and there are a good many otherwise meritorious appropriations that may have to be cut. Everything must be considered in the light of defense."

War and Navy subcommittees handling the regular military estimates will not meet until spring to avail themselves of the latest appraisals of defense needs.

Approach "Normal Budget"

Pending action on the regular War and Navy bills, Taylor said his deficiencies subcommittee, headed by himself and comprising nearly all of the other subcommittee chairmen, will act promptly on emergency requests.

Informal Budget Bureau computations meantime indicated that the Government already is approaching the "balanced normal budget" policy recommended last week by Representative Doughton, and indorsed yesterday by Taylor.

Prospects of some $7,000,000,000 in revenue, partly owing to the two tax bills already enacted this session, may permit the Government to pay out of tax receipts everything except national defense costs. An expected fiscal year deficit of $5,500,000,000 approximates the amount of anticipated War and Navy spending.

eign relations, however, that no "reward" appointment would be forthcoming, in view of the delicate situation prevailing in German-dominated France. He voiced the belief that some one familiar with Europe's political situation and able to impress the United States attitude on the Vichy government would receive the appointment.

This country's keen interest in relations between France and her German conquerors, it was indicated, will be reflected in the selection. The fact that Marshal Petain's government recently has been resisting German efforts to bring about a solid anti-British alignment in Europe has not escaped observers here.

During the earlier months of the German occupation of much of France considerable concern was felt here that France might submit to increasing German pressure. It was said that Gen. Pershing had been looked upon as able to present American views to Marshal Petain in most effective manner.

Considered Logical Choice

The New York Times article said that selection of Admiral Leahy is considered logical, after Gen. Pershing's refusal, because of the French naval question. It pointed also to the general Mediterranean situation, with the fate of Gibraltar and Suez yet to be determined, and the increasing importance to the United States and the Americas of Dakar and other west African ports of the French Empire.

Also, it said, there is the question of the ultimate disposition of the French fleet, which Marshal Petain has assured President Roosevelt will not be surrendered to the Germans, and the question of Martinique and other French islands in the West Indies.

Admiral Leahy is 65 years old and a native of Iowa. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1897. He attained the rank of captain in the World War and from 1927 to 1931 was chief of the bureau of ordnance with the rank of rear admiral. In 1936 and 1937, he was admiral in command of the battle force. He was chief of naval operations from 1937 to 1939, when he retired for age. He was appointed Governor of Puerto Rico this year.

In his career he served in the Spanish war, the Philippine insurrection and was on the China station in the boxer uprising. In 1912, he was chief of staff of the Nicaraguan occupation, and in 1916 held the same position in the Haitian campaign.

Defense Sidelights

Army Names Air Attache To Ireland

Gen. Scanlon, Now In London, to Serve In Dual Capacity

Copyright by New York Times

Increasing tenseness over the question of the possible British use of Irish naval and air bases has prompted the War Department to assign Brig. Gen. Martin F. Scanlon, Military Air Attache in London, to serve in a dual capacity as Military Air Attache to Dublin, it was disclosed yesterday.

SCANLON

The War Department made only a routine announcement of the assignment, but it was learned from State Department sources that the discussion between Eire and Great Britain over the base question has reached a critical stage.

Three other brigadier generals of the Air Corps were assigned to new posts today. They were:

Brig. Gen. John C. McDonnell, now commanding the Third Bombardment Group at Savannah, to command the Seventh Pursuit Wing, General Headquarters Air Force, at Mitchel Field, Long Island.

Brig. Gen. Oliver P. Echols, now commanding the Air Corps Engineering School at Wright Field, Dayton, to duty in the office of the Chief of Air Corps, at Washington.

Brig. Gen. Follett Bradley to command the Thirteenth Composite Wing in Puerto Rico.

Navy Takes Over 2 Coast Guard Cutters

Boston, Nov. 22 (AP).—The Navy took over temporarily today two Coast Guard cutters to assist in mine-laying and mine-sweeping practice off Boston, which has been carried on with several recently acquired fishing trawlers. In war time the Coast Guard becomes an integral part of the Navy, but waterfront circles believed today's action unprecedented in peace time.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—No. 1 man named for Army service at Local Draft Board No. 32 today was John Astor Drayton, a great-great-grandson of the first John Jacob Astor in this country and a nephew of William Phillips, Ambassador to Italy. His order number was 371, but he was the first in his district to volunteer.

President to Make More Defense Inspections

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 22 (AP).—Additional inspections of national defense facilities by President Roosevelt are scheduled before the end of the year, he said today, but he declined to say when or where he would make them. He did say, however, that some of the inspections would be made in December.

He added that he would return to Washington Monday and remain there all next week, and would be in the Capital also for Christmas and New Year's.

Fire Destroys Four M-G-M Buildings

Culver City, Calif., Nov. 22 (AP).—Four storage buildings at the Metro-Goldyn-Mayer studio here were destroyed by fire tonight.

One of the buildings contained scenery from the film production "Tugboat Annie." The other buildings were used to store old sets. The flames did not reach the new concrete sound building but they raced through much of the west end of M-G-M's property.

1,000 Children Attend British Benefit Ballet

'Racketty Packetty House' Staged by 70 Youthful Dancers

The Washington Junior Ballet, with a cast of 70 youthful dancers, presented "Racketty Packetty House" for the benefit of the British Save the Children Fund at the National Theater yesterday. The amount raised to aid war relief work will be announced later, directors of the program said.

More than 1,000 children crowded the theater to see the cast dance the story of the dolls whose "Racketty Packetty" house was imperiled until the fairies arranged for them all to pass into the possession of a little princess. The music of the ballet is by Victor Herbert, the book by Frances Hodgson Burnett. Choreography was arranged by Mary Day.

Critics Praise Dancers

Among those praised for their dancing by older critics of the ballet after yesterday's performances were Marian Rogers, as the Fairy Queen; Eleanor Booth as Peter Piper, Joan Mattare as Ridikilis; Elizabeth Ann Frey, Duchess; Mildred Douglas, daughter of the Supreme Court Justice, as Lady Gwendolyn; Peggy Wilson, Lady Patsy, and Melissa Mossburg, the Little Princess.

The Junior Ballet was assisted by members of the Washington National Ballet.

Sponsors of the performance were Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian; Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes, the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Close; the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Lady Mayer Arrives

Lady Mayer, a representative of the Save the Children Federation, arrived from New York too late yesterday to express the thanks of the organization.

She told newspaper men she wished to express her "warmest thanks to Mrs. William O. Douglas and other ladies of the committee for their kindness in arranging the ballet." She said she wished also to thank the children of the cast "in the name of the children of Britain, their cousins across the sea."

British Consulate Issues Appeal to Subjects in Orient

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—A Domei (Japanese news agency) radio broadcast today said that the British consulate at Tokyo had invited all British subjects living there and at Yokohama to call at the consulate to receive additional "important suggestions."

The nature of the "suggestions" was not clarified. Official sources in London declined to comment today on the possibility that Britons were being advised to leave Japan.

Selects Don't Have to Swear Allegiance

Volunteers Under No Obligation and Must Take Oath, However

A quirk exists in selective service regulations which relieves drafted men of the necessity of taking the customary oath of allegiance to the Government, it was learned yesterday.

While men enlisting in the Regular Army must raise their right hands and vow that "I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America, preserve them against all their enemies . . . obey the orders of the President," millions of selectees will be under no such obligation.

A special regulation referring to swearing in of future members of the citizen armies reads: "They will be informed that they are now (after the reading of the oath by an officer) members of the Army of the United States and given an explanation of their obligations and privileges. In the event of the refusal to take an oath or affirmation by any individual, he will not be required to receive it but will be informed that this action does not alter in any respect his obligation to the United States." (The italics are not used in the regulation.)

Volunteers Must Swear

Explaining the departure from military practice, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, Judge Advocate General of the Army, said selectives are considered inducted by the force of law behind the draft itself. Thus, no oath is in fact necessary.

Volunteers for the Regular Army are under no such obligation to join the service and therefore must swear allegiance.

That saboteurs and espionage agents who might like to gain entrance to the Army without oaths of allegiance to the colors would profit by the clause was unlikely, Gen. Gullion said.

Trainees refusing to take the pledge would be considered in the Army along with the duly sworn selectives. Presumably both would be sent to the same vital defense bases but on the first act of disobedience to officers or other violations the soldier would face the full force of military discipline, oath or no oath, the general said.

Appeals Board Named

Earlier, a ten-man appeals board, vested with supreme authority in deciding disputed selection cases, was appointed, and at the same time local selective service headquarters announced the names of the last 12 of the 51 Washingtonians to be inducted in the first increment Wednesday and Thursday.

National Selective Service Director Clarence A. Dykstra informed the District Commissioners the following ten representatives of law, medicine, business, labor and the citizenry recommended by them, had been appointed by the President:

Board No. 22, George W. Jones, 3010 Adams Street Northeast.

At the same time, officials of the induction center described the last stage in selective service before trainees don uniform.

The induction process, expected ot take from four to six hours, involves comprehensive physical examinations by Washington doctors who have volunteered their services.

Thirty-two Washington selectives will be put through the process on Wednesday while 19 Capital men, 21 Marylanders and 16 Virginians will be inducted Thursday.

Assembling at the induction center a t10:30 a. m. the selectives will see their names chalked up on a slate, then await their turn to be called for eye, ear, internal, psychiatric, and clinical and other tests, designed to reveal the most obscure ailment.

Before the examinations settle down to their routine, however, selectives will be rushed to Army Medical Center, Georgia Avenue at Butternut Street Northwest, for lung X-rays.

Their tests passed, trainees will hear the oath read by Capt. Raymond M. Peak, administration officer, before entraining for Fort Meade.

The examinations will be under the direction of Maj. Seth Gayle, jr., Army Medical Corps, assisted by the following physicians.

On Wednesday, Frank A. Hornaday, internist; William B. Marbury, general surgeon; George V. Simpson, ophthalmologist; Don Johnson, otolaryngologist; Albert E. Marland, neuropsychiatrist; Robert A. Keilty, clinical pathologist, and M. M. Alexander, dentist.

On Thursday, specialists in the same order will be: Caryl Burbank, Fred S. Sanderson, James N. Greear, Harry F. Davies, Andrew B. Evans, Maurice Selinger and Donald H. Glew.

10 Appointed to D. C. Draft Appeals Board

Ten men were appointed to serve on the District Selective Service Appeals Board by National Director Clarence Dykstra. Included in the board members are three physicians, two attorneys, two representatives of labor, a newspaper man, a publisher, and two citizens' representatives.

The appointees and their backgrounds follow:

Dr. James A. Gannon, 56, surgeon, who last month was named to the District Board of Education. He was born in New York City and educated at the Franklin School, St. John's College and Georgetown University medical school, where he was graduated in 1906. From 1909 to 1933 he taught medicine and surgery at Georgetown, and from 1914 to 1928 was chief of staff and chief surgeon of Gallinger Hospital. All that time he maintained a private practice. He is a member of the committee on medical resources and is a former chairman of the executive committee of the District Medical Society. Residence, 1915 Biltmore Street Northwest.

DR. GANNON

French in Paris Sullen, Returning Writer Says

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—A passenger arriving aboard the Spanish liner Marques de Comillas today reported that German soldiers in Paris had been denied mail from home because some committed suicide when letters informed them that relatives had been killed in British bombing raids.

Miss Marion Dix, scenario writer who lived in France four years, gave this report and said also that the French had become sullen and that many refused to talk with Germans.

Welles Denounces Spain's Attitude

Propaganda Intended To Confuse Bases Issue, He Asserts

Spanish propaganda against United States assistance in creation of Latin-American defense bases was denounced by Acting Secretary of State Welles yesterday.

His statement came in the midst of numerous developments generally considered favorable to the United States undertaking, despite continued opposition in Spain and among Nazi circles in South America.

These activities marked the day:

Officials at Montevideo declared that Uruguay would continue her negotiations with the United States despite vehement objections in the Senate there.

Agree to Examine Interests

Argentina, which previously had been represented as opposed to creation of the bases in Uruguay, announced that those two countries had agreed that their joint interests in the River Platte estuary would be examined.

At Madrid, Pedro Gamero del Castillo, minister of government, called at the United States Embassy to express official regrets for Thursday's student demonstration in front of the American Embassy, when many marchers carried placards reading "No bases for North America" and "South America for South Americans."

Welles' reference to propaganda was made in answer to a press conference question on the Uruguayan Senate's adoptoin of a motion pledging it not to approve any decisions on bases that would result in Uruguay losing sovereignty over any of her territory.

The answer and the reply, as published by the State Department, read:

Correspondent: Mr. Secretary, all of us here consider that you have from time to time made fairly clear our position on the bases in Latin America. Recently there seems to have been a flood of propaganda from Spain and continued misunderstanding in some Latin-American countries. We have as a result the action of the Uruguayan Senate, refusing to approve any agreement that might be made on bases down there. I wonder if you would care again to clarify both our position and our policy.

Intended to Confuse Issue

Welles: I am relieved when you say that you gentlemen think I have made it clear. I have seen, as you have, a great deal of propaganda which was undoubtedly intended to confuse the issues and to make out something which was not the case. Therefore, I repeat again that at no time has this Government discussed with the government of any other American republic the cession through sale or lease of any naval or other bases, nor has it made any suggestion which would in any sense, if carried out, have infringed in any degree the sovereignty of any of the other American republics.

In almost the same breath, Welles hailed as an inspiration a declaration by Argentine President Ortiz in an interview that dangers abroad required inter-American defense collaboration on bases, as on other measures.

Cooperation to Continue

Montevideo, Nov. 22 (AP).—Official circles said tonight the government's program of cooperation in hemisphere defense probably would go ahead on a "normal course" despite the stormy political debate stirred up by negotiations for United States aid in building air and naval bases.

After a day-long study of last night's Senate debate, these circles took the view the government had weathered its first parliamentary test in which a motion of censure of Foreign Minister Alberto Guani was presented.

Since the Senate did not adopt the resolution, these circles said Guani now was not likely to resign, as at first reported.

Official quarters said the opposition's resolution disapproving "international agreements authorizing the creation of air or naval bases that might cause bondage of any kind for Uruguay or diminishment of Uruguayan sovereignty" was an approximation of President Alfredo Baldomir's stand.

In a speech Sunday the president said the nation would not lease or cede any bases. Guani has taken a similar stand, proposing that the bases should be built and controlled by Uruguay.

Critical senators, however, declared Uruguay would lose her economic freedom of action if she borrowed from the United States the $60,000,000 which they estimated the bases would cost, and declared the bases were unnecessary for Uruguay's defense.

Two Nations to Confer

Buenos Aires, Nov. 22 (AP).—The Argentine foreign office announced tonight that Argentina and Uruguay had agreed that their joint interests in the River Platte Estuary would be examined in connection with the exchanges of hemisphere defense views being held among the American republics.

The announcement was viewed here as clearing up some uncertainty regarding defense plans being discussed by the United States with a number of American governments.

7,000 Women File For Camp Jobs; NoMore,ArmySays

No more applications from women seeking appointments as hostesses in Army camps will be considered, the War Department announced yesterday, and pointed out that the title should have been "camp mother" instead of hostess.

More than 7,000 applications have been received, it was stated, and only 99 authorized positions are available at present. The eventual total was estimated at "less than 200."

Officials said that applications have been received from all parts of the country, from all walks of life and from women of all ages. "Too many of them," said one officer, "from young girls chiefly interested in the regimental dances."

Dies Studies Laws To Guard Business

Legislation Believed Necessary Following 'White Paper' Expose of Nazis; Committee Turns Attention to Agents of Italy, Japan

By International News Service

A broad legislative program to curb infiltration of foreign interests to dominate American business and industry was under study last night by members of the Dies Committee.

Vice Chairman Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, of the special House group investigating un-American activities, said such legal barriers might be found necessary in the wake of the committee's "white paper" alleging exhaustive plans by Nazi Germany for economic penetration of the Americas.

He pointed out that present laws provide no restrictions on international cross-licensing of patents, one of the schemes favored in the alleged Nazi plot to gain control of business in the country.

The committee, meanwhile, turned its back monmentarily on the German phase of the alleged Axis Fifth Column activity in the Western Hemisphere and concentrated on clinching a case against Italian and Japanese agents.

A score of investigators were reported engaged in a series of raids in key cities including Boston, New Orleans, Detroit, Milwaukee, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, St. Louis and Minneapolis.

It was announced that subsequent "white papers" will be issued regarding the other Axis partners as soon as the evidence is organized.

Chairman Dies, in a message to committee headquarters, hailed publication of the 413-page report yesterday as having "destroyed any Nazi effectiveness" along the lines revealed.

Nazis Disturbed, Says Dies

Lake Charles, La., Nov. 22 (U.P.)—Chairman Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities today estimated 6,000,000 persons in the United States were members of "foreign organizations" controled by the governments of Soviet Russia, Germany and Italy.

The bulk of these foreign groups, Dies asserted, operate on orders from Germany, Italy or Russia. He said Japan had several effective organizations and that his committee was working on them.

"We have quite a lot of work in New Orleans, where some 50 or 60 witnesses are to be heard," he said.

Asked his reaction to an official German laugh at his white paper, the committee head stated Nazi leaders were taking a far more serious view than they expressed. He said this was shown by "urgent requests" from Nazis for detailed descriptions of what files and records had been seized or found in follow-up visits by his special agents.

"They weren't expecting us to come back, and we found these urgent requests for lists of what the committee has obtained," he said.

Dies stopped in Lake Charles briefly en route from St. Louis to his Orange, Tex., home. He was expected to remain at Orange for the next week before returning to Washington.

"3 Short Laughs" in Berlin

Berlin, Nov. 22 (AP).—The Dies Committee report is worth "exactly three short laughs," said authorized sources today, commenting on a "white paper" issued by the committee, a group of the United States House of Representatives.

(The white paper charged the Nazis with a scheme of propaganda, espionage and planning in the United States.)

The German sources said:

"Jokes may be divided into two categories, good and bad," one commentator said. "If the joke is a poor one . . . it is customary to react to it with three short laughs. That's what we do to the Dies Committee report."

Beyond that spoofing remark, these sources declined to any official or semiofficial comment.

'Air Infantry' Being Trained By U. S. Army

Experiments Advance On Deploying Troops, Guns From Planes

By Edward E. Bomar
Associated Press Staff Writer

Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 22.—The Army disclosed advanced experiments today to speed troops by air to a hostile air field in wartime in the wake of parachute advance guards.

Using for training a full-scale model of a two-engine transport plane, groups of a battalion of the Ninth Infantry Regiment are being drilled to board a plane quickly, fully armed, and to unload ready for battle.

In a rain-soaked demonstration arranged by Maj. Gen. James L. Collins, commander of the streamlined Second Infantry Division, ten men wrestled a 950-pound antitank gun up a makeship ramp into the fuselage in a few minutes, then scrambled into folding seats ready for the takeoff.

Squads armed with machine guns and mortars with ammunition boxes and other equipment meanwhile awaited their turn.

Air Troops Not New

Employed spectacularly in the Nazi invasion of the Netherlands six months ago, the scheme of air infantry is not new to the American Army, as troops long have thus been transported in small-scale experiments in field maneuvers.

The current experiments were ordered by the War Department, however, to obtain full data that would be essential if Air Infantry were employed on a large scale in wartime. The parachute troops are being trained at Fort Benning, Ga.

Officers explained the Air Infantry would be flown to an enemy landing field presumably seized temporarily by parachute troops needing reinforcements to hold the point.

Experiments showed that 16 fully equipped riflemen can be carried in a single transport plane with a cargo capacity of some 3,400 pounds. Twelve troopers armed with two machine-guns with 1,200 rounds of ammunition each may be moved simultaneously.

The Second Division of some 9,000 officers and men is being expanded to 16,000. It is virtually fully equipped with such modern weapons as antitank guns, artillery and new six-wheel-drive trucks to transport equipment and a large proportion of the soldiers themselves.

Bombs Kill 2 Brothers, Wives, Drive Aunts Insane

London, Nov. 22 (AP).—Here is one of the tragedies of the Battle of London:

Last Friday night when the German air force dealt one of its punishing blows to London a bomb struck the home of Edward Robinson, English newspaperman.

Robinson's two brothers and their wives and his elder sister were killed. A younger sister was wounded gravely. Two aunts, driven insane, have been placed in an asylum.

U. S. Agent Slain, Another Gets Mystery Threat by Phone

By the Associated Press

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 22.—A mysterious telephone threat to another Government official, made two hours after Robert F. Perry, veteran U. S. Secret Service agent, had been fatally beaten, gave police a new angle today in their investigation of the slaying.

Perry died in a hospital today without regaining consciousness after an unidentified assailant inflicted several head wounds Wednesday night.

Detective N. C. Propst said the weapon used probably was a pickax, which has not been found.

The name of the Government official who received a threat over the telephone two hours after the Perry attack was withheld. His caller was quoted as saying to him:

"You had better watch your step. Some people around here don't like the way you are doing things. There is going to be a purge of some top Government officials around here."

The call was made before news of the attack on Perry had been published or broadcast over the police radio.

Authorities revealed that the caller spoke in a "high pitched voice and seemed excited" but would not venture an opinion as to whether they considered the telephone call the work of a crank or prankster.

The veteran agent had been in the secret service for 24 years and was chief of the Birmingham subdistrict. He is survived by his widow and two sons, Robert F., Jr., and Roy Perry.

Navy Yard Pay Scale Protest Voted by C. I. O.

By a Staff Correspondent

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 22.—The C. I. O. went on record today in protest against the scale of wages recently set for Navy Yard employes.

At the same time, the third annual C. I. O. convention, calling for "model" conditions in the Federal service which, it said, "are now far from good," indorsed a program sponsored by the United Federal Workers.

The program asks a five-day week for Federal workers, with time and a half for overtime, automatic pay increases based on service, social insurance benefits and optional retirement after 30 years, creation of appeals machinery for all grievances and recognition of the rights of Government employes to join unions of their own choice.

The convention also indorsed the Highlander (Tenn.) Folk School, which has taken part in folk festivals sponsored by The Washington Post.

Congress May Ease Neutrality Act

knowledge of the relationship of a British victory to our peace and the country is becoming less isolationist and more realistic," he said.

He was reluctant to take a position on specific proposals before knowing the exact form which legislation might take and preferred, too, to await developments abroad. If events between now and early 1941 make it appear that national defense may best "be promoted by a marked increase in supplies of all kinds to Great Britain which require that some of the embargoes that interfere with transportation be raised" Congress could, he said, take up the question in the light of such circumstances.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, also a Foreign Relations Committee member, spoke of the possibility of freeing American shipping from the Neutrality Act restrictions which now keep it out of belligerent ports, but he, too, was awaiting specific legislation before committing himself.

He was flatly in favor, however, of repealing the Johnson Act, which prohibits loans by this country to nations which have defaulted on their debts to the United States. Thus it forbids loans to Great Britain. On this subject, Austin thought there was no great urgency, since, he said, it appeared that Britain still had substantial balances in this country to cover her purchases.

Johnson Pledges Fight

Meanwhile, the author of the act in question, Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, bluntly said that he would oppose vigorously any effort at repeal.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, one of the group which has vehemently opposed the Administration foreign policy and has argued that help to Britain was leading to war, said:

"Aid having been given in the beginning, we have broken the ice and now it is much easier to give more. But any further effort, whether to change the Neutrality Act or repeal the Johnson Act ought to be fought vigorously."

All Aid Given, Says President

Hyde Park, Nov. 22 (AP).—Dismissing as glittering generalities talk of expanding American assistance, President Roosevelt asserted today that everything possible was being done now to aid England.

He indicated at a press conference that under present conditions, a maximum of help for the British might be expected under the rule of thumb he laid down two weeks ago. Under it, half the output of American planes, weapons and other war material would go to Britain and half to the United States.

While there may have been outside discussion of granting credit to England and of allowing American warships to convoy merchantmen part way across the Atlantic, Mr. Roosevelt said there had been none in the Government.

Mr. Roosevelt cautioned reporters against saying it could be taken for granted that consideration was being given to increasing aid to Britain.

He was asked whether his 50-50 rule of thumb might be altered, in the light of heavier Nazi bombings of England in the past few days, to provide greater help.

The question, he declared, was altogether too general. After challenging anyone to show him how plane production could be speeded up, he added that you can't pass a bill or issue an order and get aircraft the following day.

Davis Hails British Agency Set Up to Handle U. S. Relief

A London announcement that an American gifts committee has been established to coordinate requests and regulate shipments of relief supplies from the United States to Britain, was welcomed yesterday by Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross.

"American Red Cross relief is extended to Great Britain through the two officially recognized British relief agencies, namely the British Red Cross and the Women's Voluntary Services," he stated. "In every case our aid has been in answer to specific requests from these two organizations."

He said the American Red Cross had made cash expenditures or commitments up to October 31 of $7,261,489 for British war relief. The American organization has shipped 9,453,750 dressings to the British Red Cross and is at present prepared to ship an additional 5,000,000 dressings from the New York warehouse, he said. Chapters are completing a reserve of 3,000,000 dressings to care for Britain's future needs.

Chapters, he said, have accepted cloth and yarn to make 3,256,000 garments, of which more than half have been produced. Recently more than $2,700,000 worth of material, representing 630,000 pounds of yarn and 7,413,750 yards of cloth, has been bought and shipped to chapters. From this the chapters are expected to produce 1,863,000 garments for shipment to Britain by January, when another similar quantity of material will be sent them, Davis said.

"I might add that we have been repeatedly informed by the Women's Voluntary Services in England and the British Red Cross that our chapter-produced garments are highly acceptable. We have only recently received a request to outfit 200,000 children from 6 months to 5 years old and work has begun on this," Davis stated.

Moscow Denies Swaying Hungary

Claims No Part In Budapest's Swing to Axis

By Ernest G. Fischer
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Nov. 22.—The four men who hold Axis-Rumanian relations in their hands held extended conversations today which foreign diplomatic observers insisted would make Rumania a fifth member of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo-Budapest Axis.

A conference among Rumania's Iron Guard premier, Gen. Ion Antonescu, his foreign minister, Prince Costin Sturza, and German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was followed by an extended meeting of the Rumanians with Reichsfuehrer Hitler in Von Ribbentrop's presence.

[In Moscow, the official Soviet Russian news agency, Tass, last night flatly denied reports that Hungary's adherence to the Axis alliance had been made with the cooperation and approval of the Soviet Union.

[Tass spoke of reports that the German newspaper, Hamburger Fremdenblatt, had made such an assertion, and added:

["Tass is authorized to state that this report does not correspond to fact in any extent."]

Foreign observers were of the opinion that if Rumania joins the Axis military pact in writing, the ceremony would be reserved for tomorrow as a climax to the Rumanians' two-day visit.

Not only is Rumania expected to sign up but also Slovakia, the German-protected state left by dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia, and Bulgaria.

[A Berlin dispatch to the Bucharest Tageblatt, purporting to quote authorized German sources, said the Axis alliance implies "passive consent" to passage of German troops through any signatory country.]

Other principal developments today included:

Reports indicating that an English railway, between Chatham and Milton, had been destroyed today by German bombing planes. This was the salient feature of what otherwise appeared to be the usual air assaults on Britain and her shipping.

Convoy Attack Reported

A convoy was said to have been attacked, but results had not yet been reported. Informed sources said that a 2,000-ton ship off England's east coast, near Harwich, was believed to be sinking from bomb hits.

The German press, still stressing the "moral and internal forces" which brought Hungary into the Axis alliance, remained reticent about Rumania's signing on the dotted line. Rumania already is in "closest relationship to the Axis powers," newspapers said.

Antonescu, who came to Berlin today fresh from a Rome visit to Premier Mussolini, apparently had settled preliminaries in his three and one-half hour talk with Hitler.

The Hotel Adlon was the setting tonight for a brilliant reception given by von Ribbentrop for Antonescu and his party.

Cleanup Keeps Pace in London With Bombings

Unsightly Wreckage Cleared Away, Road Craters Patched Up

By Whitelaw Reid
Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Nov. 22.—Eleven weeks after the start of the London blitzkrieg the repair of damage done to roads and utilities, and the clearance of unsightly wreckage throughout the metropolis, appears to be keeping pace with new devastation more closely than ever before.

The original craters, that pock marked the Strand like Seventh Avenue when spring fever sets in and WPA starts digging, have now been nearly patched and dangling steel and piles of rubble that were familiar sights in Leicester Square and elsewhere in the capital are being systematically cleaned up.

Illustrative of this tidying up accomplishment is the Borough of Poplar where, according to the mayor, some 14,000 of the 23,000 buildings have been damaged. Some 10,000 of the battered houses have been repaired, making it possible for people to continue living in them, and of the remaining 4,000 buildings damaged 2,000 are unlivable and 2,000 are demolished.

Nine hundred of those in the latter category are said officially to have been overhauled and largely carted off by soldiers of the auxiliary military pioneer corps, the Royal Engineers and the Royal Army Service Corps.

In the process of demolition, wood goes to the A. R. P. for conversion into frames for shelter bunks; brick is salvaged for the building of shelters and blast proof walls and steel is commandeered by the government.

A specific example of the work is to be found in an East End block where 36 small houses were laid low. With the exception of a few stray bricks still lying on the ground, the whole area might be taken for a newly cleared playground.

C.I.O. Hails Murray As New President

Declares He Won't Accept 'Shotgun' Peace With A. F. L.

By George B. Bookman.
Post Staff Writer

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 22.—Philip Murray, 54-year-old son of the coal mines, began his administration as president of the C. I. O. today with a full-throated warning that he is no "weak, mild vacillating man" and cannot be forced by Government pressure into making "shotgun" peace agreements with the A. F. L.

Murray was elected by acclamation to succeed John L. Lewis as president of the five-year-old labor organization of 4,000,000 members, at the third annual C. I. O. convention here.

Nominated to the office by Lewis, seconded by Sidney Hillman, C. I. O. vice president who has differed with Lewis, Murray opened his "harmony" administration by declaring:

"Many news organs have observed and suggested that if this terrible man Lewis were pushed out, a weak, mild, vacillating man would rush to effect an agreement with the A. F. L."

Backs Lewis Policies

He charged it was illegal under the National Labor Relations Act to force labor's divided factions to close their ranks if the workers themselves did not wish it.

In tones that showed no trace of mildness, the Scotch-born vice president of the United Mine Workers Union declared:

"I therefore offer a mild protest against use of Government pressure in the face of this law to force shotgun agreements with the A. F. L."

Murray left no doubt that he stands four-square for the major policies of Lewis, who has stepped down because Wendell L. Willkie, whom he supported for President, lost the November election.

Voicing a pledge to carry out the policies of Lewis embodied in resolutions unanimously adopted by the convention, Murray said he would give "my effort and my energy and my life toward attainment of your objectives."

Immediately afterward, in a surprise move, the convention elected Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, to be one of C. I. O.'s six vice presidents.

Curran Made Vice President

The choice of Curran, known in advance to only a small inner circle, was made unanimous by vote of the delegates, but almost one-fourth of the assembly shouted "No" to the motion.

It was believed that Curran's election represented a concession to the left wing of the C. I. O. to offset the resolution condemning communism, naziism and fascism that was adopted without discussion yesterday. Curran was nominated by Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union.

Pouring a new brand of harmony oil on troubled factional waters, Murray made reference to the "ism" controversy in his inaugural speech, saying:

"I'm not content with your pledges of loyalty or the resolutions you passed. Petty bickering must be stopped. The tongues of scandamongers must be stilled. The work of this organization must be singular in purpose—organizing the millions of unorganized men and women into our mighty union."

Demonstrate for Murray

Lewis presented Murray as a servant of humanity and "my old friend."

At the mention of Murray's name the delegates, many of them his warm personal friends, broke into a spontaneous ten-minute demonstration.

Scotch bagpipers serenaded the new C. I. O. leader, who was born in Lanarkshire, near Glasgow, in 1886. Delegates stood up on the tables and cheered.

Besides Hillman, those who seconded the nomination of Murray were Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, and Sherman Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers.

Lewis then, with all the sentiment that always marks solemn functions among miners, presented Murray with a gavel which Lewis had received a quarter of a century ago, and declared him elected.

In a quiet voice, rippled by his Scotch burr, Murray said he had "no illusions about the mighty honor that this great convention has thrust upon me."

Then, breaking almost into a shout, he asked for a "broader security" for the American people.

"Has No Illusions"

"A kind of security," he said, "that will drive from the temple of finance and industry rapacity, greed and selfishness and that will mete out to the lowly and the humble and the workers of this Nation those things that God in his infinite wisdom decided the masses of this universe should pursue."

Acknowledging that his election as C. I. O. president took place only as the result of Lewis' "on the nose" election bet, Murray said:

"I have no illusions concerning the peculiar twist of fate that thrust me into this position. I am conscious that under ordinary circumstances this convention would have elected the man we all love, John L. Lewis."

James B. Carey, president of the United Electrical and Radio Workers, was reelected secretary of the C. I. O.

Frank Rosenblum, vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, was named a C. I. O. vice president to succeed Hillman, who announced that, due to pressure of his work as defense commissioner for labor, he could not be a candiate for reelection. Curran was the only other new man elected to a vice presidency, filling a vacancy left by the elevation of Murray.

Vice presidents reelected were Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers Union; Thomas, Dalrymple and Robinson.

Ford Unit Major Objective

The C. I. O., meanwhile, set organization of the Ford Motor Co. employes as its "paramount objective" in the months to come. A lively closing session sent to Ford employes a resolution promising the full support of C. I. O.'s 4,000,000 members in the drive to organize the largest motor company in the world.

Moreover, the convention called on the Federal Government to prosecute officers of the Ford Motor Co. and the City of Dearbon for alleged "violations of the Constitutional rights" of Ford workers, and to investigate employment of "known Nazi agents" at the Ford plant.

The convention adopted a resolution declaring its opposition to attempts by special legislation to deport Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader.

The resolution described a bill in Congress to deport Bridges as "unconstitutional," and protested it was "an attack upon Bridges and upon organized labor."

Murray, the new C. I. O. president, was born the son of a Scotch miner's union president. Young Murray began work in the mines at the age of 10.

He came to America with his family in 1902. Arriving in western Pennsylvania, the family trudged six miles through drifted snow to spend their first night in an American home.

Educated Himself

Working in the mines and educating himself by correspondence school courses, Murray was elected president of his United Mine Workers local after a fight with a foreman in 1904. It is said that this was the last time he lost his temper.

In 1912, Murray's career as a labor leader was decided. He turned down a job as assistant manager of a coal company that offered a $3,200 pay increase and was elected a member of the international executive board of the U. M. W. In 1920 he was elected an international vice president and has been reelected ever since.

He drafted the original Davis-Kelly coal bill in 1930, forerunner of the NRA coal code. He served with the NRA for almost a year. In 1936 Murray took on the job of organizing steel workers into industrial unions. The steel workers organizing committee, of which he is chairman, has had a phenomenal growth.

Murray is best known for his skill as a negotiator in the coal industry, which is based on perhaps the most complete and intimate knowledge of the coal industry possessed by any man in the country.

Coal operators have often paid tribute to his knowledge of their problems, as well as to his astute ability to argue for his union members.

The convention closed this afternoon.

A.F.L. Leaders Doubt Murray Can Bring About Labor Peace

By James Marlow
Associated Press Staff Writer

New Orleans, Nov. 22.—Prospect of labor peace through Philip Murray's election to the C. I. O. presidency today was greeted coolly by A. F. of L. chieftains, whose own union leaders prepared for a challenge to their authority.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, which is in convention here, said he "hoped" Murray's selection would work toward closing the gap between the A. F. of L. and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

On the subject of how he thought Murray could cooperate in the peace effort, Green said:

"He could appoint a committee. There was such a committee but Lewis (John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president) was on the committee. That committee and our committee met several times but last year Lewis announced there would be no further meetings."

Means Nothing, Says Green

"All I can say is that we hope for the best," said Green, whose previous assertion that Murray's succession to Lewis would mean nothing so long as Lewis remained president of the C. I. O.'s powerful United Mine Workers was reechoed by A. F. L. Secretary-Treasurer George Meany.

Meany said after Murray had been chosen: "Well, that's still Lewis."

Asked if he would communicate with Murray whom he has known for years, Green said he had no intention of doing so but added:

"Undoubtedly an A. F. of L. committee will communicate with the C. I. O. after our convention ends next week."

He said he could "think of no reason" why a settlement might not be negotiated "so far as the A. F. of L. representatives are concerned" but recalled "Lewis said peace is impossible."

The challenge to the union leaders—almost quiescent until a three-round fist fight and unabashed charges of promise breaking exploded in the convention—put them in this position, Meany said:

"If they vote the A. F. L. authority to go into the unions to drive out racketeers then they must yield the long-established right which gave unions alone the privilege of regulating their own affairs and cleaning their own houses.

"The A. F. L. leadership wants racketeers driven out. The question is: How to do it? There are two things now before the convention, both intended to stop racketeering, but both pulling in the opposite directions.

Asks Power to Clean House

"First: The resolution introduced by David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers. This calls upon the convention to give the A. F. of L. the power—which it now doesn't have—to go into unions and clean out gangsters. This resolution suggests such cleanup powers be given the executive council.

"Second: The executive council right now has a recommendation before the convention to strip itself of the power to suspend a union. In the same recommendation, of course, is the provision that it be given the right to suspend two unions, which is intended to throw out any unions involved in a dual movement against the A. F. of L. within the ranks.

"But the point is that if the executive council is stripped of power to suspend a union, which is the council's supreme power and big stick, how can it walk into a union and clean it up?

"A. F. of L. unions have always been autonomous, regulating their own affairs. That is one of the rights they consider sacred, they and their leaders.

"We're going to have to solve the problem of cleaning out racketeers because among other things we wish to retain the confidence of the American public."

William Is Dead—Tradition Dies, Too

in a new silk hat and resplendent in a new coat, blue this time, with brass buttons and in white gloves still a little out at the fingers, William took up his profession again.

His fine mellow voice had lost something of its flavor; he tired more readily; he could not face with the same stoic equanimity all the vagaries of a Washington winter. But his remarkable memory for names and faces was undimmed and, whatever might have been missing, William was back and carriage lines moved with their accustomed celerity and things were again as they should be.

Yesterday William died at his home at 762 Fairmont Street, and for the first time in his life William missed an engagement. He was to have officiated at the marquee before 1706 Eighteenth Street Northwest, where Mr. and Mrs. W. McKee Dunn gave a tea for their daughter, Miss Mildred Dunn. One of his two assistants served in his stead.

William Williams was born 75 years ago at Alexandria, Va. He grew to manhood in a graceful and unhurried age of horses and carriages and gloriously caparisoned coachmen. William became one of those coachmen and for 31 years, day and night, rain, shine or snow, sat on the box of Admiral Richardson Clover's carriage. In 1918, after Admiral Clover's death, William found himself unemployed in a world which had little use for experienced coachmen.

It was then that he developed his carriage calling service in a moment of inspiration. Demands for his services grew and William had a telephone installed and kept a record book. Eventually he was forced to employ two assistant for the height of the season.

He as a simple man, who conquered a complex age by facing it simply.

He will be buried Monday in Harmony Cemetery, after funeral services at Metropolitan Baptist Church, Twelfth and R Streets Northwest. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Cora Williams, and five grandchildren.

I Still Think I'm Right, Says Lewis in Adieu

Former C.I.O. Chief Bids Farewell At Convention

Special Dispatch to The Post

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 22.—John L. Lewis made a speech tonight as the third annual C. I. O. convention drew to a close.

He has made speeches before, many of them. But this one was different.

Lewis was no longer president of the organization he founded five years ago. He stood diffidently on the platform, beside the new president, Philip Murray, as spokesman for the delegates presented to Lewis an embossed scroll as a mark of esteem.

Looking at the ceiling for a moment as though to collect his thoughts, Lewis made reply.

Speaking of himself, he said:

"If some of you have lost some of the confidence you once had in your leader, he hopes that someday you might come to the conclusion that whether he was right or whether he was wrong, at least his heart was right. And he intends to make his contrioution by saying what he once thought was right he still thinks is right."

Labor, he said, was the strength of the Nation. Youth, he said, was the hope of labor. He asked trade unionists to be tolerant, not to quarrel among themselves.

Twirling his watchchain, Lewis reminisced about the stand he had taken in the Presidential election.

C. I. O. Defense Line

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 22 (AP).—Philip Murray, newly elected C. I. O. president, declared tonight that the C. I. O. was "the Nation's only guarantee that the miserable failures of the last World War" in the production of defense needs, would not be repeated.

The C. I. O. is the labor movement in our first line of defense," he said in a radio (C. B. S.) speech.

"The mass producing industries of the mines, mills, factories and workshops, by the strength and discipline of C. I. O. unions have substituted industrial peace and stability for industrial warfare in these first lines of defense.

"This is essential to the successful prosecution of the Federal Government's national defense program.

"This definite, wholesome and constructive cooperation between management and labor in our vital defense industries makes the production of armaments for our armed forces in needed quantities and on time possible."

Murray said industry failed to do this job in the last war, asserting that relatively little of the guns and ammunition ordered were produced in time for use.

Defense Group Employes Checked

statement said that their agents had, for several weeks, "been conducting investigations of the qualifications and suitability of employes of the National Defense Advisory Commission."

"This has been well known to employes of that office and its purpose has been obvious, namely to assure the Defense Commission that all persons on its rolls are suitable for employment both from the standpoint of character and from the standpoint of loyalty to the United States.

"The type of investigation used is exactly the same as that which has been made in tens of thousands of cases in a period of more than a decade."

Officials explained that it is customary to investigate thoroughly all candidates for responsible Government jobs.

Frequently the investigation is completed before the candidate is appointed to the job. Almost as frequently, however, a job is filled in a hurry, and then the investigation is made after the appointee has started to work. The latter practice was used for the Defense Commission. There, in the rush to get a staff together, and the expanded national defense program under way, the employes were brought to work, with the assurance that they would be thoroughly investigated later.

While they declined yesterday to furnish a complete list of the questions being asked the defense employes ,officials of the Civil Service Commission said that the queries were similar to those used for many other types of government workers including policemen in the District and other Government law enforcement officers.

Some Lose Jobs

At the Civil Service Commission it was pointed out that some individuals have been turned down for Government jobs on the ground that their loyalty was questionable. Officials said that they had no estimate of the number of persons who had missed getting jobs, or had been turned out of jobs, for this reason.

In their investigations, officials said, questions of loyalty, while important, are of no greater concern than questions about the employes' general character. Reason for this is, generally, that it is easy to detect the person who is already identified, either by himself, or through connection with organizations, with disloyal activities, while it is much more difficult to pick out those whose records are clear, but whose character weaknesses would make them easy allies of anyone who might have an interest in unearthing vital Government secrets.

In the formal statement, the Civil Service Commission declared that "during a period of national emergency, the Government is entitled to the services of persons whose character and loyalty are beyond question."

Chest Giving Spiritual Duty, Says Dr. Glenn

St. John's Rector Talks At Report Meeting; 63.5% of Fund In tors for $1,270,884, or 63.54 per cent of quota, were reported during the meeting.

George E. Gillespie, 5, although almost frightened into silence by the crowd of 650 workers, turned in five dollars from the kindergarten of Barney Neighborhood House.

"I am glad to give this five dollars to the Community Chest from the Barney Neighborhood House kindergarten," he told Herbert L. Willett, jr., Chest director.

In a supplemental message to Chest Workers, Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, said, "If we are to be a united Nation in a disrupted world, we must ease the burdens and assuage the pains and misfortunes that fall to the lot of our less fortunate neighbors.

"There is economy, wisdom, consistency and Christian charity in bearing our part of the heavy load too often imposed on shoulders too feeble to bear them."

First to go over the top in this campaign, was the Southern-Bowen Division, sponsored by the Junior Board of Commerce and captained by Richard K. Lyon. The division reported 193 pledges of $3,359 or 103.81 per cent of quota.

After the luncheon it was announced that three members of the Community Chest speakers bureau and three representatives of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. will be heard from radio station WJSV, on the "What Do You Know About Washington?" program, at 9:30 a. m. today.

U. S. Civil War Near, Professor Finds in 'Index'

Wealth Is Surveyed; He Calls Situation 'Moderately Dangerous'

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Nov. 22.—An index based upon concentration of wealth shows the United States currently dropping toward the "riot" and "civil war" stages, a Northwestern University mathematics professor who devised the formula reported here today.

Dr. H. T. Davis, author of several books, said his statistics also showed prices would fall in America, that chances of going to war "soon" were slim and that the Republicans would take over the White House in 1944.

Dr. Davis established his wealth index on the basis of income or death taxes as they have affected the fortunes of other nations. He set 50 per cent as the ideal figure. He said the present mark is 40, with 35 the "riot" stage and 30 indicating civil war. A fall to zero would mean socialism, a rise to 100 autocracy.

"Moderately Dangerous"

He set the 1929 figure in the United States at 60. The pointer ebbed to 38 in 1933, then rose, and now is falling again, he observed.

"I would call our present situation moderately dangerous," he told the Central Association of Mathematics and Science Teachers. "We can stand to dip below 50 better than go above. At above 70, revolution begins."

He defined revolution as "revolt of the masses" and civil war as "revolt of the capitalists."

Dr. Davis recalled that he told Northwestern students that France would fall as early as 1935, when that country's index skidded to 37.

Reelection Foreseen

President Roosevelt's reelection was foreseen long ago under mathematical calculations, he said, because no party ever is repudiated on a rising price index. A gradual fall in prices will bring a G. O. P. victory at the next national election, he added.

His price forecast is based on a 50-year mathematical cycle traced 150 years in this country and as far back as 1260 in Europe. The downward trend, started soon after the last war, will reach its lowest point about 1945 and then climb intermittently for the following 25 years, the professor forecast.

If the United States were near war, inflation would be here and prices would rise, he added.

U. S. Red Cross Gives $35,000 To Greek Unit

The American Red Cross yesterday made $35,000 available to the Greek Red Cross for relief of air raid victims. This was in response to "urgent appeals for additional assistance," the organization announced.

The American Red Cross previously had cabled $10,000 in cash to the Greek Red Cross and sent $5,000 worth of canned milk from Yugoslavia into Greece. Its total relief to the embattled nation now amounts to $50,000.

The possibility of getting medical, hospital and other relief supplies into Greece through British channels is being investigated through its committee in London, it was said. If arrangements can be made, supplies will be taken from the American Red Cross storehouse in England and shipped to Greece, to be replenished by shipments from New York as cargo space is available, it was said.

Lutheran Crusaders Formed Here

New Group to Seek Unification of Churches; Shrine Planned Here

With ultimate unification of the Lutheran Churches in America as its objective, the Lutheran Crusaders of America has been organized in Washington.

Martin A. McGrory of Atonement Lutheran Church has been named as executive director, and Ralph H. Boyer, of Seat Pleasant, Md., secretary-treasurer of the new group, which will be intersynodical and will represent all Lutheran bodies.

Among its objectives, according to McGroty, will be the establishment of a national Lutheran shrine here, to "perpetuate the memories of the early Lutheran patriots who contributed so nobly to the establishment and freedom of America."

"The Lutheran Crusaders, as formed," said McGrory, "will not conflict in any way with the present institutions of the church and their work, but will be for the purpose of education in the whole work of the church."

The Crusaders' first choral service will be on December 8 at 4 p. m., at Atonement Church, North Capitol Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Luther Place. Dr. Charles B. Foelsch will preach on "When Life Goes Blind" at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow.

Grace. Sunday's services will be led by Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, who will conclude his present sermon series on the theme of "The Place and Progress of Modern Lutheranism," by discussing "Let the Church Be the Church."

Atonement. The Rev. Howard E. Snyder will preach on "The Final Judgment" at the 11 a. m. service. The Rev. James T. Powers will preach on "The Freedom of Truth" at 8 p. m.

Christ. The Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel will preach the second of his series of sermons on "The Last of Four Things."

Augustana. Dr. A. O. Hjelm will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Christian Preparedness."

St. Mark's. The thank offering service under the direction of the Women's Missionary Society will be observed at 11 a. m. The Rev. J. Luther Frantz will use as his theme, "Thanksgiving and Thanksliving."

Reformation. "Can We Defend America With Conscientious Objectors?" will be the subject of Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder at 8 p. m. The Rev. Ralph W. Loew, associate pastor, will speak at 8:30 a. m. on "Is It Later Than You Think?"

Rev. H. S. Anderson's Topic to Be on Success

The Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, of the First Congregational Church, has chosen as his sermon topic tomorrow at 11 a. m. "For Those Who Greatly Desire to Succeed."

There will be no evening service because the church is sharing in the dedication of the new Rock Spring Congregational Church, Arlington, Va., and at 8 p. m. at Foundry Methodist services.

Mount Pleasant—Dr. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer will preach on "Self-Identification" tomorrow at 11 a. m. The Adult Forum will continue its discussions of the issues and events in the development of first century Christianity. On Friday evening "Atalua," Chickasaw Indian contralto, will be presented in a program of songs and legends of Indian folklore.

"End of Doubt" Is Typic

"The End of Doubt" will be the subject that Dr. Seth R. Brooks, minister of the Universalist National Memorial Church, will preach upon tomorrow at 11 o'clock. The choir will sing "Make a Joyful Noise," by H. Jerome Graham, organist of this church, and "The Silent Sea," by Neidlinger. The adult class meets at 10 a. m. and at the same hour the church school holds its sessions.

The Mount Pleasant Congregational Church young people will be the guests of the young people's Christian Union at 7 p. m. for a Fellowship period and a devotional service in the Aisle Chapel, led by Mr. Louis Knowles. Church of the Week

Gorsuch Methodist Observes 90th Anniversary Next Week

Denomination Leaders To Be Guest Speakers Every Day of Program

By Robert Tate Allen

The congregation of Gorsuch Methodist Church, Fourth and L Streets Northwest, tomorrow will launch a celebration of its ninetieth anniversary, with Methodist leaders slated as guest speakers.

REV. SCHOLL

Dr. Edgar C. Beery, Methodist East Washington District superintendent, will preach tomorrow at 8 p. m.; the Rev. Norman Scribner, of Gaithersburg, Md., Monday night, and Dr. A. S. Mowbray, of this city, Tuesday evening. Church night will be observed on Wednesday.

Other guest preachers for the week will be the Rev. John R. Esaias, of Baltimore, Thursday night; the Rev. Edwin A. Ross, of Kensington, Md., Friday, and Dr. G. Ellis Williams, West Washington District superintendent, on December 1 at 8 p. m.

Special addresses will be delivered tomorrow and next Sunday mornings by the Rev. Richard T. Scholl, enterprising pastor of the congregation. Among Washington oldest churches, it often has been called the "Beacon of God in Southwest Washington."

Gorsuch Church started in 1850 as a missionary project of the then five-year-old Ryland Methodist Church, and by 1855 the first edifice was erected.

In 1925 the congregation remodeled part of the church that had served as a parsonage, with the result that the present minister and his wife have a modern apartment on the second floor. Recently the sanctuary was refloored and redecorated and the exterior painted, and new electric fixtures installed.

Pastor since 1938, the Rev. Mr. Scholl once served pastorates at Canadensis in the Poconos and the Herndon (Va.) Methodist Church, the latter in 1931 while attending American University. While preaching in the Poconos, he attended Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J., where he received his doctor of divinity degree in June, 1938.

Born in Lancaster, Pa., where he got his early education, he later attended Asbury College in Kentucky.

Recently launched project at Gorsuch Church was the church night for the juniors-intermediates on Monday and Thursdays from 7 to 9 p. m. Conducted by the Rev. and Mrs. Scholl, the programs for the 9- to 18-year-old group include choir practice, religious instruction, dramatics, play periods and other activities.

Oldest members of the congregation in point of service are 85-year-old Mrs. Ella Rowe, who joined 64 years ago; Mrs. Gus Simpson, member for 60 years, and Mrs. Emma Warren, who took out her membership in 1896.

Among other organizations and leaders of the congregation are the Fellowship Forum for Young Adults, with Lawrence Beall as president; the Woman's Society of Christian Service, led by Mrs. Melvin Donaldson; the church school under Frank Donaldson, and the official board of which the pastor is chairman and Russell Jenkins, secretary.

Foundry To Dedicate New Pulpit

The new McDowell National Memorial Pulpit, realized through nearly 1,000 gifts from people throughout the United States—including Protestants, Catholics and Jews—will be dedicated tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Foundry Methodist Church.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, who recently retired as local Methodist resident prelate and whose predecessor was the late Bishop McDowell, will occupy the pulpit. Beautifully carved and having a stately canopy, it features a carved likeness of Bishop McDowell, attired in his pulpit vestments and the red hood of the doctor of divinity.

In the right-hand panel is a statue of Bishop Francis Asbury, the pioneer Methodist prelate, whose equestrian statue stands on upper Sixteenth Street Northwest. On the left is the figure of Bishop Phillips Brooks, who tremendously influenced Bishop McDowell in his youth.

The lectern in the new chancel setting is placed in honor of Bishop Hughes, and symbolizes unification of the three branches of Methodism.

Interdenominational Night will be celebrated at 8 o'clock tomorrow, when Dr. Harry N. Holmes, of New York, will speak, and clergymen of several denominations will participate, including Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, Dr. Albert J. McCartney, Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, Dr. Raphael H. Miller, Dr. Seth R. Brooks and the Rev. Calvin Wingert.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This Latin hymn, one of the most pathetic of the Middle Ages, is usually ascribed to Jacobus de Benedictus—though not with absolute certainty. An interesting feature of the hymn is the numerous occasions it has been set to music by celebrated musicians.

Poison Case Suspect Held to Grand Jury

Postoffice Experts Link Handwriting to Candy Box Address

Frederick Degges, 69-year-old Washingtonian, was held for the December grand jury yesterday after preliminary hearing in Arlington County Police Court on a charge of attempting to kill his stepdaughter with bichloride of mercury placed in a candy she received through the mails.

Degges, white-haired and stolid and dressed in a natty dark suit, did not testify, but he heard two Postoffice Department examiners of questioned documents—George G. Swett and Albert W. Somerford—tell Associate Trial Justice Albert M. Jones that handwriting on the package of candy was, in their opinion, the same as a sample of handwriting Degges gave Arlington police following his arrest.

The box of candy lay on the table in front of Degges. It was in golden wrapper made more conspicuous by pictures of big red cherries on bright green stems.

Found Unconscious in Auto

Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas requested the court to withdraw Degges' bond of $1,500, and to hold him for a mental examination before the grand jury meets on December 19. Objections of Defense Attorney T. Brooke Howard were sustained.

Douglas said he acted because, on last Wednesday Degges had been found unconscious in his automobile in the garage at rear of his home, 1314 D Street Southeast. Police said a hose had been run from the exhaust pipe into the car. Degges, taken to Casualty Hospital, recovered quickly.

The box of candy was said to have been received on November 5 by Mrs. Velma Dunham, 40, 5212

North Washington Boulevard, Arlington. Yesterday, Dr. E. P. Laug, pharmacologist, Pure Food and Drug Administration, testified that analysis showed "fatal doses" of bichloride of mercury in pieces of the candy.

Not Allowed to See Wife

Mrs. Dunham testified that Degges married her mother in October, 1939, and that she subsequently took Mrs. Degges to her own home. Degges was not permitted to see his wife, she said.

Arlington court officials said it was the first case of its nature in the county in their recollection. If convicted, Degges would face 3 to 18 years in the penitentiary.

During a brief recess while the court waited for Dr. Lang to appear, Degges discussed the season's football games with bystanders and at conclusion of the hearing agreed to let photographers take his picture—if they would take nothing but a profile shot. As they lined up he put his hat suddenly across his face and angrily stalked from the building. But outside, assured that only his profile would be photographed, he again consented and posed.

Leatherman, Robert Finlay, Clarence Dale and William Ingram, while spokesmen for the clerks and managers were John Grasso and Richard Compton, business agents for the two locals respectively.

Negotiators for the Labor Department were Howard T. Colvin and Frank J. Sheehan.

The clerks had aksd for $32.50 a week, an increase of $2.50 for four-and-a-half-year workers, and two weeks' vacation with pay, instead of one week. The managers asked for two weeks vacation with pay.

While the agreement reached yesterday apparently did not meet the union's demands in full, leaders of both worker organizations expressed satisfaction with the results.

"Speaking for the membership, I'm satisfied," said Grasso.

Compton, business manager for the managers, said, "We're all satisfied. Everyone is happy."

Grasso said that under the agreement 187 clerks will receive raises of $1 a week. He listed other gains for the clerks as follows:

One additional holiday—Washington's Birthday, February 22.

A two-year experience rating recognition for clerks employed after service with another company.

A six-month seniority push-up for 314 men.

A maximum working day of 9½ hours for the five days, Monday through Friday, and of 11 hours on Saturday.

Hospital's New Lung Delivered, Demonstrated

New Iron Lung Is Dedicated At Gallinger Hospital

Col. David McCoach, jr., chairman of the District chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, yesterday dedicated the new $1,800 iron lung at Gallinger Hospital.

The respirator, latest model of the Warren Collins Co., will be available to any person or institution in Washington, Col. McCoach said. The iron lung was purchased with funds collected at last year's President's Birthday Ball celebrations.

Devices to assure comfort for the patient have been included in the mechanism. A safety bell rings when the electric-motor stops working or if the vacuum within the machine is disturbed. In case of power failure, a hand pump may be attached to the iron-lung to continue the "breathing" for the patient.

Foundation Thanked

Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, told the gathering at the dedication that the entire medical profession is grateful to the foundation for the gift.

He said the hospital owned one respirator but that recently it had occasion to call on the Navy Department for a second one, which was brought here overnight from the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The Navy's iron lung will be returned today, he said.

The machine is geared to provide from 14 to 28 respirations a minute. Another feature of the new machine enables the patient to be moved within the lung to new positions to prevent muscular fatigue and other effects.

To Duplicate Generator

Col. McCoach was accompanied by A. W. Crossley, secretary of the local foundation. Col. McCoach said he would purchase a separate motor and generator which would be near the machine in case of a prolonged power failure or breakdown of the machine.

The chairman of the organization also said he would discuss with board members advisability of purchasing a second respirator for Washington. Most of the more than $25,000 fund, from last year's celebrations, has been spent for hospitalization, braces, crutches and treatments for paralysis patients.

Vultee Strikers Assailed in House

crat), of California, in a detailed statement to the House charged that the C. I. O. leaders in California have acknowledged that the Vultee strike "is but the first attack in the battle to be fought throughout the aircraf industry and ultimately throughout the defense industries generally in order that they may take advantage of the national emergency in behalf of a particular faction in the labor movement."

"While admitting that the wages in the Vultee plant have been no lower than those for other aircraft manufacturers for corresponding grades in labor," said Representative Costello, "they selected the Vultee Co., because it appeared the most vulnerable."

The Vultee Company, in a statement, meanwhile, suggested that "the Government and the people" should decide whether a union engaged in national defense work should have the right to strike during the period covered by an employer-employe contract.

The company said that the sole remaining obstacle to settlement of the strike is the refusal of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) to agree to arbitrate all disputes with the company in the next two years. This is the period, the firm said, "that will be necessary for Vultee to turn out basic training planes contracted for by the Army Air Corps and the fighter planes under contract by the British Purchasing Commission."

Meanwhile, a general strike at the New Kensington (Pa.) plant of the Aluminum Co. of America broke out yesterday because of the refusal of the company, engaged in manufacturing defense materials, to discharge one particular worker who was said to be objectionable to the C. I. O. Aluminum Workers Union.

The Vultee plant is "a vital bottleneck of the defense program by means of which the American public can be frightened and thereby forced to surrender to the dictation of this faction of the labor movement," said Representative Costello.

"If sufficient panic can be created by the stoppage of training-plane production," the Californian continued, "this attack might be used to start a demand for the nationalization of the industry and the destruction of private enterprise . . ."

Granting of the union demands and applying them to other southern California airplane plants would add 35 per cent or $240,000,000 to the cost of Government contracts, said Costello.

Warning that a demand might arise for compulsory arbitration of all disputes which affect the public interest, he urged speedy settlement of the present row.

In its statement, the Vultee company said:

"The right to strike for better wages and working conditions is, of course, a prerogative of labor. But for union leadership to insist on reserving a right to strike during the period of a contract can mean only one thing in the opinion of the company. It means that the union desires to reserve an opportunity further to impede the progress of our national defense program.

"The question of granting that right is one which no company engaged in defense production should be permitted to decide. That decision should rest with the Government and the people."

New Kensington, Pa., Nov. 22 (AP).—A mass meeting of C. I. O. members voted unanimously tonight to continue a strike which today closed down the huge New Kensington works of the Aluminum Company of America, until the discharge of a worker involved in a dispute over payment of $12 in back dues.

The vote was taken in the jammed, smoke-filled auditorium of the high school after two hours of discussion behind locked doors.

The strike, which threw 7,500 workers idle, also interrupted work on vast national defense orders, including those for airplanes and Army field kitchens.

The company declined to make a formal statement.

The strike—first in the aluminum industry since 1934—began yesterday with a walkout of several hundred employes in a sheet mill. A general strike was voted at a meeting of the C. I. O.'s Aluminum Workers Union last night.

Suspension of operations tied up work on supplies for planes and other military equipment, including a $1,200,000 order for 25,000 sets of new-type United States Army field kitchens.

Compromise Plan Offered

Downey, Calif., Nov. 22 (AP).—A compromise proposal for settlement of a strike at Vultee Aircraft, Inc., was submitted to company officials and the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers Union today by Maj. Sidney Simpson, representative of the War Department.

No statement was forthcoming immediately on the possibility of its acceptance as a basis of future negotiations.

Conferences were discontinued yesterday after the union balked at the company's proposal to insert a "no-strike" clause in a tentative agreement that had been reached on a two-year contract.

Approximately 5,200 plant workers walked out November 15, demanding a minimum wage of 75 cents an hour.

Union Warns Ford

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 22 (INS).—The C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers Union stands ready to give Henry Ford a strike "soon," if he wants it, Michael F. Widman, head of the auto workers' Ford organizing drive, told the C. I. O. convention in its closing session today.

Widman's challenge was made as he reported to the convention that thousands of Ford workers were joining the auto workers union.

"We expect to stubstitute union representatives for the strong arm squad," Widman said. "If Henry Ford wants a strike, we'll be prepared to give it to him soon."

Shortly after this the convention adopted a resolution calling on the Department of Justice to investigate employment by the Ford company of "known Nazi agents," and to inquire to determine relationships, if any, between Ford officers and the "German industrial combines."

C. U. Shrine Holds Masses For War Dead

Unprecedented Event Begins Today; Papal Envoy to Participate

The Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University tonight and tomorrow morning will be the scene of an unprecedented religious event, as 15 low masses are said simultaneously at various altars, heeding the appeals of Pope Pius XII for a day of prayer for war dead.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will pontificate at solemn high mass tomorrow at 11 a. m., and Bishop Joseph Corrigan, university rector, will preach the sermon.

Bishop Corrigan will celebrate a midnight mass tonight, to be followed by a continuous series of low masses conducted by priest-professors and student-priests until 10 a. m. tomorrow. Because of the number of altars and celebrants available, one Catholic leader said yesterday that it is possible that 16, or even 20, low masses may be said at the same time.

The solemn exposition of the Blessed Sacrament will begin after the pontifical mass tomorrow and continue until 7 p. m. The benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will begin at 7:30 p. m., concluding the day's observance. The Rev. John J. Reilly, director of the Shrine, will conduct a holy hour from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m.

Pope Pius XII made a special appeal to join with him in a day of public prayer "that all those who have died as a result of the war may obtain eternal rest, that all those who suffer or mourn as a result of the war may be comforted, and that the true peace may be restored in justice and all peoples united as brothers."

A combined choir composed of students from the various religious houses under the direction of Dr. Leo Behrendt, will sing for the pontifical mass.

Camel, Horse Just Snacks To Cavemen

Oregon Fossils Show Such Fare Was Eaten In U. S., Says Scientist

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor.

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—Ten thousand years ago an unknown race of men who inhabited what is now Oregon were eating horses and camels.

The bones which they picked and broke, and left in caves were described today to the American Philosophical Society by Dr. L. S. Cressman, of the University of Oregon.

He presented evidence that southeastern Oregon, now semiarid high plateaus lined by mountain ranges, was possibly one of the early centers from which the "culture" of 10,000 years ago spread to some other parts of what is now the United States.

The early Oregonians were cave men, and on the evidence gathered by the University of Oregon scientists they were the most numerous group of prehistoric Americans yet uncovered.

Their great antiquity is vouched for by pumice ejected from the explosion of ancient Mount Mazama, in southern Oregon, which drifted into the caves and laid an unbroken flooring which "dates" the human evidence now unearthed beneath a hitherto unbroken layer of the volcanic ash.

Mount Mazama is now Crater Lake, one of the scenic wonders of the world. The lake, six miles long and four wide, and 2,000 feet deep, fills the huge hole left when the mountain blew off its top.

Geologists have found that this explosion took place not earlier than 4,000 nor later than 10,000 years ago.

Under some of this pumice in Five-Mile Cave at Paisley Lake, Oregon, were found volcanic "glass" (obsidian) knives and weapons, along with the remains of bones of many kinds of animals which had furnished human feasts.

Among the bones were those of prehistoric horses and huge camels.

These bones were not in contact with the pumice, but well buried, pointing to human occupation of the cave ages before the great volcanic eruption.

At lower Klamath Lake, now a dusty desert just north of the California line, a few weeks ago Dr. Cressman's assistants uncovered fragments of elephants' tusks in association with an obsidian knife. The geology of the location led him to conclude that the elephants and men lived at this site 7,000 to 8,000 years ago.

Wreckers Get 'World's Busiest' Police Station

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Men came to the West Forty-seventh Street police station today and carted off the old blotters, the records of great and horrible crimes. For tomorrow "the busiest police station in the world" goes to the wreckers.

Once—78 years ago—there were 12 cops in "West Forty-seventh"—the "Broadway precinct." (Cows in the street, too.) Tomorrow 300 policemen will parade up to their new $500,000 home on West Fifty-fourth Street.

No policeman in town today knew all the criminal big and small fry who crowded into "West Forty-seventh." A few knew the late Jack (Legs) Diamond, prohibition-day mobster; fewer saw the body of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, lying in the station house back room, only two remember the details of the strangling of "Dot" King, beautiful Broadway girl whose jewels were considered—to someone—more important than her life.

Takoma Park Baptist To Burn Deed of Trust

In celebration of the payment of the church debt, the ceremony of the burning of the canceled deed of trust will be held in connection with the service tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Takoma Park Baptist Church.

The members of the original building committee, L. R. Grabill, T. W. Marshall, F. W. Pearce, Claud Livingston and John L. Fletcher, will take part.

Members who have joined the church in the last year have been requested to sit together. The Rev. William E. La Rue will have as his sermon theme, "The Overcoming of Fear."

The Rev. Leon W. Sloan, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Louisana, will speak at 8 p. m.

St. Mark's Homecoming

Homecoming Sunday will be observed by the members of St. Mark's Episcopal Church on Capitol Hill at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow. The Rev. Robert J. Plumb will speak on the past, present and future of the parish. Immediately after the service the congregation will adjourn to the parish hall in order to sign the register and for a period of fellowship.

Let-Down In The Senate

There seems to be no connection between the Senate's failure to obtain a quorum yesterday and the faulty condition of the roof which covers the greatest deliberative body in the world. With only a minority of its members present, the Senate decided to transfer its sessions to the quarters formerly occupied by the Supeme Court while the roof over its chamber in the north wing of the Capitol undergoes repairs. No Senator has explained his absence, however, by fears of a falling ceiling.

The public is left to draw the conclusion that the Senate is not taking its responsibilities very seriously just now. The fact that yesterday was the only scheduled workday for Congress between Thanksgiving and the week-end is an extenuating circumstance. Perhaps a quorum may be on hand by Monday. Nevertheless, the absence of a majority of Senators when an important piece of legislation is awaiting debate is certainly not a happy augury.

A survey of probable votes for and against the Walter-Logan bill indicates that the Senate will pass that bill by a substantial majority if a showdown is permitted. The point is, however, that even the revised bill needs thorough scrutiny by the Senate. Its central objective is good. It is designed to institute uniform procedure by administrative agencies in the handling of cases where individual rights are involved. Another section is designed to clarify the rights of aggrieved persons to carry into the courts their protests against orders from the Government's numerous executive establishments acting in a semi-judicial capacity. But the means by which the bill would accomplish these ends have been severely criticized by some officials and attorneys, though not all, since the measure is sponsored by the American Bar Association. These technicalities ought to be fully discussed in the Senate.

In short, that body is faced by an extremely complicated and difficult task of legislation; yet it is unable to attract a quorum to the floor. Repetition of this experience would be a disappointing let-down for those millions of citizens who have assumed Congress has remained in Washington out of patriotic devotion to the national welfare.

Need For Conciliators

Dr. Harry A. Millis, new member of the National Labor Relations Board, wisely stresses the need for more good conciliators to settle labor problems without referring them to the NLRB. The board has come in for a good deal of censure from critics who mistakenly assume that it has the power to function as a mediator in labor disputes. As Dr. Millis explains, however, the board is a quasi-judicial agency which hands down decisions when complaints of violations of the law are referred to it. If those decisions are not acceptable to the parties concerned, they are likely to create new disturbances instead of assuring industrial peace.

Sidney Hillman, labor member of the Defense Commission, appreciates with Dr. Millis the importance of organizing for the prevention of strife in the defense industries. He plans to station experienced labor leaders in 25 regional districts throughout the country to act as trouble-shooters and to see that commission's labor policies are understood and implemented. If these men are carefully selected, they may be very useful in restraining hot-headed elements in the unions and preventing needless strife. But they should not be permitted to interfere with, or usurp, the functions of the Conciliation Service of the Department of Labor.

When the National Labor Relations Act was approved, President Roosevelt pointed out that the new law did not trench upon the field of activity reserved to the Conciliation Service. This agency, he stated, would continue to act as mediator in industrial disputes. The service deserves this Presidential recognition. In spite of the handicap of a small force operating on a very limited budget, the Conciliation Service has done excellent work in preventing strikes, helping to settle strikes, arbitrating on request, and generally working to promote harmony.

With the defense program now under way, many new problems doubtless will constantly arise calling for the attention of experienced mediators. Consequently there is need for the interposition in the labor field of the Defense Commission. But it would be a major misfortune to have a conflict of authority and possibly of policies in mediating industrial disputes, whether they occur in defense industries or elsewhere. There should be the closest cooperation between the two agencies. For the expansion of working forces, as Prof. F. H. Harbison, in a booklet on economic mobilization put out by the American Council on Public Affairs observes, calls for perfection and streamlining of procedures for the settlement of grievances and disputes.

Italia Infelix

With the capture of Koritza the astonishing Greeks have now filled Mussolini's cup of humiliation to the full. Koritza was the principal Albanian base for his long contemplated drive through the Balkans to the Aegean and Eastern Mediterranean. Whatever measures the ranking partner of the Axis may take to retrieve the disaster, and whatever the outcome of the war, the Duce has suffered an irreparable loss of prestige abroad and among his own people.

He cannot long conceal from them the complete rout his large and powerfully equipped armies have sustained at the hands of a small and inadequately armed nation in less time than the irresistible German war machine required for the conquest of Poland. Such an event seems at first a contradiction of all military logic. Neither the blundering of the Italian commanders, nor their surprise in discovering that the Greeks intended to offer something more than a merely formal resistance, nor even the amazing valor of the Greeks, can wholly account for it.

Today some stress is being put upon the inherently unwarlike character of the modern Italian people, and memories of Adowa, Caporetto, and Guadalajara are being sarcastically recalled. Certainly the Duce's dream of restoring the ancient Roman imperium met with no commensurate revival of the ancient Roman military ardor among his people. That under certain circumstances modern Italians can fight as bravely as other men is proved by the record of Prince Eugene's armies in Napoleon's Russian campaign of 1812 and, of course, by the exploits of the carbonari. But in general they have shown little stomach for war, and perhaps, as some say, this is because they have an older continuous tradition of civilization than any other European people. At any rate, neither the Ethiopian nor the Spanish campaign, especially the latter, aroused great enthusiasm, and it is no secret that the present war was from the beginning less popular than either. It became progressively more unpopular as material hardships increased and as the prospect of cheap and rapid victory began to dim.

This combination of discontent at home and military disaster in the field often makes favorable soil for revolt. But it would be rash at this stage of affairs to anticipate anything of that sort. Besides, such a revolt, if it comes, might easily take a bolshevist turn, and might have the effect of sending some of those who are now passively hostile to Mussolini, for example the clergy and the supporters of the royal family, back to his banner for protection. More than anything else it was the fear of Communism that cleared the path for his March on Rome in 1921.

Meanwhile, Mussolini, forced for the nonce to abandon his favorite attitude of Gaius Julius Caesar, has been striking that of Cato the Elder, demanding death and destruction for "Britain, the modern Carthage." Doubtless he is thinking of Cannae.

Reassuring Report

The report of the committee which investigated shortages in the Department of Vehicles and Traffic is reassuring. Although it has been impossible to trace the $2,025 which disappeared over a period of years, the findings are such that measures to prevent further loss do not appear to constitute a Herculean task.

The investigators found no evidence of theft. Therefore, officials will be spared the difficult and odious duty of weeding out pilferers among employes. The facts indicate, however, that the system of supervision over collections in the Vehicles Department has given little protection either to employes or to the public interest. Much confusion has resulted from overwork and neglect. The auditor was not empowered to audit funds in that department awaiting transfer to the collector of taxes. The accumulation of these funds—on one occasion to the amount of $76,000—increased opportunities for error.

Certain types of payments have been recorded on coupons retained by the cashier, but there was no method of identifying the individual coupon with the money for which it vouched. Consequently, if the cashier found that the totals of coupons and funds on hand did not correspond, it was impossible to determine which payment was short.

The investigating board has recommended two full-time cashiers. Also, the report urges day-to-day deposit of all receipts with the collector of taxes; power for the auditor to make an examination at any time, and a system for identifying all individual payments with coupons.

Chatham Towers, who has submitted his papers for retirement as collector of taxes, attributed the collection troubles in the Vehicles Department to the lack of sufficient personnel. By now the Commissioners must be fully aware of this and the other necessary changes, and their reported intention of naming Porter M. Lumpkins to succeed Mr. Towers indicates an intention to act. The appointment of Mr. Lumpkins, a member of the investigating board, would show at least a general approval of the board's recommendations.

New Spirit In France

Evidently the President is making every effort to strengthen Marshal Petain's hands in resisting the Nazi effort to rope France in the "new order in Europe." No happier envoy could have been named than General Pershing. He is in a class by himself. Now that he is unavailable, the President seems to be canvassing other possibilities, and one may be assured, in view of the quest for General Pershing, that, if a change from Ambassador Bullitt is made, the choice would be of the highest caliber.

The right appointment would be our contribution to the revival of the faith of the French in themselves. This was what was lacking in the war. This accounted for the collapse. The Nazis would have the world believe that the result testified to a military defeat. But such an explanation will not satisfy those who know the French and the French spirit. To them the collapse was internal, and they think of the Nazi victory as more of a Hitler contribution to a sort of civil war in France than as a military defeat. France, as Andre Maurois poignantly shows, had lost faith in France.

Since the armistice the French people have been stunned by the dimensions of their disaster. In moments of crisis a man (or woman) of destiny has generally come to their rescue. Indeed, it has been said that the tragedy of France is Joan of Arc and Napoleon, because the French have a habit of frittering away their time in petty squabbling, confident that, as in the past, a Joan or a Napoleon would retrieve them from utter dissolution. Neither he nor she appeared in 1870, and again in 1940 the occasion failed to provide either man or woman.

Instead the aged Marshal Petain and his friends seem to have been defeatist from the beginning. We are not giving credence to all the accusations in "J'Accuse," the so-called inside story by Andre Simone, in thinking that the Petain group felt that democracy in France was through, that nothing could stop the Nazi juggernaut, and that Britain would shortly go the way of France. Petain may or may not have been wishful, but there's not the slightest doubt that he was anti-democratic and anti-British. And France, in a way that was hard to contemplate for the friends of France, seemed to have taken her cue from the "hero of Verdun."

Slowly, however, there are signs of a return of faith among Frenchmen that France can recapture her great destiny. The signs, because of the occupation and the heavy censorship even in unoccupied France, are more to be sensed than seen. But surely there must be a change in France now that the French see that the Nazis aren't invincible. They must see that the British, as ill-prepared for the war of 1940 as they were, have been able to evoke a spirit of resistance and to rearm intensively at the same time. Such a spectacle, at any rate, gives the lie to the rumors and the defeatism with which, ever since the French became allies of the British, the French have been assailed by their own leaders no less than by this "secret weapon" in the hands of the Nazis themselves.

Outstanding among all the reasons for an upsurge in the French spirit is the harsh experience of the conqueror's heel. The peace that France inflicted on the Germans in 1918 has been stigmatized as the worst peace-making in history. There was always Brest Litovsk to set against it, and now there is the experience in France and other occupied countries. It may be argued that the sacking such as captive France has had to endure is the necessary instrument of a country at war, but what can be said of the summary order from Berlin that the French speaking population of Lorraine, roughly two-thirds of the total, must get out? If this is an earnest of the peace, then the French must see that sovereign France faces virtual extinction in the event of a Nazi victory.

Occasionally there's a visible straw in the wind besides these vague unsubstantial sign of a new spirit in France. Marshal Weygand, whose prestige in colonial France is immense, is still in North Africa engaged, apparently, in protesting against Vichy's truckling to Nazi Germany. Weygand was as defeatist as Petain about the British, but, unlike the chief of state, numbered well-known Britons among his closest friends. (Lord Tyrrell is probably as dear to Marshal Weygand as General Pershing is to Marshal Petain.) The project of a definite Vichy-Berlin line-up, moreover, drags on from postponement to postponement. And out of Madrid comes the news that "a Frenchman growls when he sees Petain shaking hands with Hitler."

Into this atmosphere, reported as electric with "sullen rancor," would go our next envoy, and his mere appointment, doubtless, would contribute to the sheering away from the "new order in Europe" which seems to be in process in France.

'Belligerent' Terms

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to the double column caption in The Post of November 14 reading: "Both Parties Map Future Strategy," though doubtless not so intended, this might be taken to signify that the term "strategy" applied to a war.

The subheadlines still carry implication of a pending conflict requiring strategy. With war abroad amongst so many nations why "gird" for some kind of war at home?

Is it fitting in these days to consider the "counsel of an old and affectionate friend"? None other than George Washington said, "and warn you in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the spirit of party" . . . "In governments of monarchical cast, patriotism may look with indulgence, if not with favor, on the spirit of party, but . . . in those purely elective, it is a spirit not to be encouraged . . . it agitates the public with ill-founded jealousies, false alarms, kindles the enmity of one part against another, etc." Are the times and human nature so altered since 1796 that this warning no longer applies, especially immediately following a decisive election?

Disillusioned

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Everybody knows that taxes must go up or we are never going to lift one tiny fraction of the big debt which now saddles the country. I don't think anybody objects to that if they know there is some reciprocity on the part of the Administration—if it gives us a good government, an economical government, and something to look forward to in the future.

Then I am wondering about these plans for "total mobilization," which I understand are to be announced soon. I have heard no mention of voluntary organization. What I have heard is that we are all to be put to work under these little overlords now in the Government service—the new aristocracy. Does this mean that there is to be forced labor at $30 per month, while the Government employes continue to draw their $8,500, $7,500 and $3,000 per year salaries?

Date For Thanksgiving

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I invited a friend to spend Thanksgiving with me. Her reply is significant. "I cannot accept your invitation for Thanksgiving Day. You did not say whether it was the twenty-first or twenty-eighth." Since she is a New England schoolmistress she is not free to come on Mr. Roosevelt's proclaimed holiday.

I am reminded that until Lincoln's Administration the day first set aside by the Pilgrim Fathers was a memorable celebration dependent upon the wish of the individual colonies or States; for 73 years, however, we observed Abraham Lincoln's day of thankfulness until a dictatorial President who had opposed business at every opportunity decided that he owed it a break and in 1939 moved up the day to allow merchants an opportunity to prolong the Christmas shopping period by six week days.

Again in 1940 he proclaims his own day so that everywhere I hear "Are you celebrating our own or Mr. Roosevelt's Thanksgiving Day?"

Now our voters have just repudiated the Daylight Saving Time scheme of beating the sun (to my great satisfaction). Before the world tried to upset the clock, I remember that I went to classes in the Chicago summer school at 6 a.m. because my son must be at work at 7 a. m. People of character are able to rise with an alarm clock whenever duty presents such difficult and disagreable demands.

I need hardly remind you that the railroads continue to run on Standard Time and that the heavens do not change their stars to fit the time of daylight saving. I wonder whether Mr. Roosevelt thinks he can improve on the world as God and the Pilgrims made it.

The Foreign Language Press

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of November 18 there is a letter referring to the matter of languages and national unity. The substance of this letter was that without a common language, there cannot be such a thing as national unity. So far, so good. But the writer goes on to claim that the existence of a foreign language press forms barriers to this national unity, and, therefore, there should be a law, or public opinion should be created, to abolish this foreign language press.

It is to this latter point that I wish to take exception. In the first place, the existence of a foreign-language press does not preclude the possibility of an English-speaking element that reads that press, any more than the reading of any language in book-form precludes the fact that the reader is conversant with English. Does the writer infer that if one knows and reads French, Italian, German, Spanish or Yiddish, he is unable to read English? Definitely not, yet that is the logical conclusion of his strictures.

In the second place, the foreign language press serves a function in this country. Any student of American sociology knows that it is this press, speaking in a language that is probably more familiar to some readers than another, that has introduced many fundamental concepts of Americanism to those readers. A case in point is the Jewish Daily Forward, which has played (and is playing) a sterling role in daily bringing home the implications of Americanism to many readers.

Thirdly, the very character of such a law, or the "enforcement" of public opinion to abolish that press, would result in the defeat of the very purpose he has in mind, namely, a democratic America. One can understand and accept the thesis that every individual in America should be able to speak a common language, but this is a process of education, not of legal enactments. Abolishment of that foreign language press will not hasten the day, because then you would introduce a precedent of linguistic laws that would only serve to act as a vanguard of further laws against other phases of group life, the totality of which makes up America.

It must be understood that every inhabitant of the United States should learn English as a fundamental necessity for group relationship, but let us not throw out the baby with the bathtub. There are forms of cultural diversity that make up this American pattern of ours; their maintenance is our best answer to the cultural totalitarianism rampant in Europe today. Even Whitman heard America singing in these tongues, and his hearing was no better than the writer of the letter.

Location Of Airports

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was interesting to read in local press dispatches a few days ago that "Airlines serving the National Capital stand to save about $3,000 a month while the State of Virginia loses an equal amount, when the Washington National Airport opens early next year."

It was explained that Virginia would lose this revenue in gasoline taxes now paid by the airlines on aviation fuel purchased at Washington-Hoover Airport, and that such fuel would, on the new airport, be dispensed from pumps located within the District of Columbia, which does not impose a tax on aviation fuel.

In this connection we find it amusing, if not disgusting to dig back into the records of about two and a half years ago where we find that the Camp Springs (Md.) airport bill was defeated in the House by Representatives Byron Scott, of California; Melvin Maas, of Minnesota; Alfred Phillips, of Connecticut, and a few others, on arguments that included the following: "Last year the airlines saved approximately $70,000 in gasoline fuel taxes by virtue of operating from an airport in Virginia, over what it would have cost had the airport been in Maryland . . . Do you believe any aviation company will use the Camp Springs Airport, in Maryland, and pay a tax of 5 cents a gallon on its gasoline, if it can go into Washington-Hoover Airport, in Virginia, and not have to pay any tax on gasoline?" (Congressional Record No. 123, Vol. 83, page 12,482.)

When the wee small voices of pilots tried to be heard in stating that Maryland did not collect a tax on aviation fuel, and that Virginia did, we were given all manner of sinister designations by these honorable members of the House. That was when these M. C.'s were trying to get Congress to purchase Washington-Hoover site of 88 acres at approximately $17,000 an acre, and in the same voice crying "Land grab! Scandal! Graft!" at those supporting a bill that would have purchased about 2,300 acres near Camp Springs at an average of approximately $192 an acre! BEN KING.

Peculiar Advantage

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Too many people have been regarding a contribution to the Community Chest as a form of punishment rather than the privilege that it really is. Webster defines "privilege" as being a peculiar advantage or right. If this is true, then the right to give to such a very worthy cause is truly something of a peculiar advantage. Peculiar in that it is unique and fundamentally American. It is an inherent characteristic of the democratic form of government and is as precious to us as our right to the freedom of speech.

Under our system, Americans of every race, creed and color join in this common purpose and of their own volition give freely of their time and money to alleviate the pain and suffering of the less fortunate. Unless our Community's Chest is filled by us, many of our local charities will be deprived of food, medicine and other necessities.

This is no time to say, "I can't afford to give a donation this year." Giving to the Community Chest is not a luxury and is something everyone can afford. The amount of the contribution is all that can vary, and the amount you give should be as generous as possible and perhaps a little more than you feel you can spare.

The Post Impressionist

Demise Of An Artist

JUDIE FELT that today she had been reborn. Her appearance was indicative of this solemn event as she opened the door of her home. Intent upon the emotions that had been aroused within her, she failed to hear her mother when she called to her from the living room and it took a second imperative "Judie!" to arouse her from her deep reflections.

Impatiently, she retraced her steps and faced her mother rebelliously from the doorway.

"Mother," she said, with the air of one whose patience has been long and sorely tried, "I do wish that you would call me Julie, not Judie! How is anyone ever going to respect me as an artist if you insist on calling me Judie?"

Mrs. Johnson regarded her offspring with a look in which amazement and amusement struggled for mastery.

"And since when have you been an artist?" she asked in a choked voice.

"I might know," her daughter rejoined, "that I would find no understanding here. You and father are completely bourgeois in your reactions."

"Bourgeois? And pray what do you mean by bourgeois?" her mother said tartly.

"What do I mean! I mean all this!" With an expressive movement that narrowly missed knocking the porcelain vase off of the bookcase, Judie threw out her arms in a gesture that was clearly designed to embrace not only that room but all of her immediate surroundings.

"For years I have stifled, all my inner nature denied expression. Look at this room. What sensitivity, what feeling for beauty can I find here? Why, it's thoroughly middle-class. And I am an artist!"

Into the momentary silence that fell on the room, she threw defiantly, "I signed up for the advanced art class at school today."

"If you're so interested in beauty, suppose you try creating a little in that room of yours that you left such a mess this morning," her mother acidly replied.

With a hollow groan, Judie turned and fled from the room, leaving her mother surveying its comfortable furnishings with a questioning and rather doubtful gaze.

In the days that followed this exchange between mother and daughter, Mrs. Johnson had more and more reason to feel that she had given birth to a changeling. The Judie whose demands for the latest thing in clothes had been a severe drain on her parents' purse became overnight a person for whom clothes were a frivolity not worth mentioning. An old sweater and a baggy skirt became her daily costume and a 5-year-old beret, rescued from oblivion, was the only headgear that she deigned to wear. And Mrs. Johnson found herself in that position for which she had often longed, the parent of a daughter who had no interest in boys. All of Judie's admirers vanished from the scene overnight—they were not "artistic," it seemed—and Mrs. Johnson found herself regarding this long-desired situation with dismay. And she could get small comfort from Mr. Johnson. He could only regard Judie's loss of clothes consciousness as a welcome relief and an opportunity to catch up with his bank account and he dismissed his wife's qualms about the dearth of adolescent masculinity. It was too good to last, he said. Delivering himself of such sentiments, he would retire behind the newspaper leaving Mrs. Johnson to her doubts.

Of the mixed emotions that her actions aroused in her parents, Julie (nee Judie) pursued her course unaware. And, indeed, it is doubtful that they would have made any difference to her if she had, for she had reached that state of intellectual elevation in which parents were merely "a biological necessity." In any case all her thoughts and emotions were concentrated on art, for on Tuesday the class was supposed to have finished its first work and it would be exhibited for the teacher's judgments. Julie (nee Judie) had been laboring night and day over a masterpiece that was to depict ravages of a forest fire.

When Tuesday finally came she could hardly contain herself through the day. A cruel fate had set her art class at the last hour of the day and then, as a further blow, the teacher of mathematics, who had the hour preceding it, kept her after class to lecture her on her recent lack of interest in his subject. Finally, she managed to tear herself away and arrive breathless and panting at the art class. As she tried to sink unobtrusively into her seat, she saw, with a beating heart, that the teacher was talking about her picture.

"This is a very fine example of design . . . an excellent treatment of the abstract in which the mind of the beholder is left free. Whatever you wish to feel about this picture you may . . . there is no concrete representation here to set limits."

On and on the voice droned but Judie failed to hear, for in that first horrible moment after she sat down she had realized what the teacher never had. The picture was on the wall upside down!

Judie's appearances in the kitchen were rare and it was, therefore, with some surprise that her mother looked up from dinner preparations to see her there that evening. With her daughter's first words her surprise turned to stunned amazement.

"Mother, if I come straight home from school tomorrow, will you teach me how to make an apple pie?"

"But, Judie," her mother gasped, "I thought you didn't like cooking. And your'e always busy painting in the afternoon."

"Homemaking," her daughter said, in the patient and long-suffering tone of one addressing the unenlightened, "is the highest form of art to which womankiad can consecrate itself."

With a final accusing stare, she turned and left the kitchen. Mrs. Johnson sank into a chair. The beans on the stove burned up merrily but she sat on unaware. ANN NELSON.

Japan Near Crisis

By Wilfrid Fleisher

An Uncensored Report

Wilfrid Fleisher, for nine years correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune in Tokyo, arrived today in San Francisco on the President Coolidge. This is an uncensored report of a steady increase in political tension among extremists in Japan in spite of the establishment of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye's new national structure and the adhesion of Japan to the Rome-Berlin Axis.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

San Francisco, Nov. 22.—Japan faces serious dissension at home, in regard to both internal and foreign policies, and it would surprise no one if this unrest should lead of new assassinations or revolutionary outbreaks of the kind that have occurred at intervals in recent years.

There are sharp divisions of opinion between extremists in Japan regarding the form which is to be given to the new national structure, the mainspring of the totalitarian movement within the country. Equally deep cleavages exist with regard to the conduct of foreign policy between those who support the government's announced policy of rapprochement with the Soviet Union and those who continue to look upon Russia with grave distrust.

It is now possible for me to reveal for the first time the plot of July 5 last by which a group of reactionary members of the so-called "God-sent" troops intended to assassinate former Premier Mitsumasa Yonai and Imperial Household Minister Tsuneo Matsudaira.

On that date the Japanese police arrested 38 "God-sent troopers, but failed to take into custody Col. Kingoro Hashimoto, alleged leader of the plot, who now holds an important post as director of the Taisei Yokusen Kei (Imperial Rule Assistance Movement), the central directive of the new national structure.

It was Col. Hashimoto who was in command of the shore batteries along the banks of the Yangtse River which fired on the British warship Ladybird, at the time of the sinking of the American gunboat, Panay, December, 1937, for which he was officially reprimanded. He is the head of the Japan Young Men's Federation, a reactionary organization of approximately 5,000,000 members, which accounts for his influence in the new national structure movement.

Signs of unrest are apparent in many quarters. But this must not be taken to mean that the dominant military rule is to be unsaddled or to foreshadow a return to moderation in the future. The differences lie between factions of extremists. And there is no possibility of any return to liberalism for a long and indeterminate period in the future. Japanese liberals are in hiding and liberalism is branded as "treason" in the new totalitarian state.

Japan's future hinges largely on the outcome of the European war. A victory for the Axis would commit Japan to pursue her course, modeled on the Nazi pattern, with increasing determination to build "a new world order" with her partners, Germany and Italy, while a victory for England would conversely bring about a swing toward a saner policy. But the Japanese process of totalitarianism, fashioned on the German system, has gone so far ahead now that nothing short of a really impressive British victory can halt the momentum of the Japanese machine.

AN INDICATION of the strength of the revolutionary element in present-day Japan is seen from the extraordinary behavior of 17 "God-sent" troopers, now on trial in the supreme court for plotting the assassination of the late Premier Viscount Saito and other high Government officials in 1933. Last month these 17 defendants walked out of the supreme court in Tokyo, refusing to hear the charge of Procurator Ichitaro Mihashi, because he had failed to acquaint them with his views regarding the new national structure of Japan.

Shun Kataoka, one of the defendants, acting as spokesman for the group, declared before the supreme court:

"We have been led to understand that this courtroom is the scene of activity in the cause of clarifying the new national structure. We have hitherto cooperated to the fullest extent with the court, firm in the belief that we could expect a fair verdict. It is a matter of profound regret that we have been denied any opportunity of hearing what Procurator Mihashi thinks about the national structure of our country. I regret to inform the court that under the circumstances we do not consider it proper for us to hear an address by Procurator Mihashi."

This astounding statement, made by the spokesman of the plotters before the nation's highest tribunal, brought a warning from the presiding judge that their departure from the courtroom would be contrary to law, a warning which, however, went unheeded when the defendants, after assuming what was described by the Japanese newspapers as "an attitude of supplication" for a few moments, filed out of the courtroom.

Procurator Mihashi appealed to the judge to "take necessary steps for the maintenance of order in the courtroom," deploring the breach of law and order in the nation's highest court "which should be an example to the rest of the law courts of the country" and arguing that the withdrawal of the defendants would "gravely affect" the judicial system. But the judge, after an interval for reflection, merely ordered the procurator to read his charge "in the absence of the defendants." The procurator demanded sentences ranging from one to five years in prison.

A week later a group of assassins, including the murderer of Yukio Hamaguchi, premier at the time the London Naval Treaty was signed in 1930, the assassin of Jinnosuke Inouye, finance minister in 1932, and the killer of Baron Takuma Dan, head of the powerful Mitsui firm, also struck down in 1932, was paroled on the occasion of the 2,600th anniversary of the founding of the Japanese Empire. They had benefited by the number of amnesties in recent years which had shortened their prison terms.

ALL THIS GOES to show that the extremists have come to power in Japan. The revolution was achieved bloodlessly when the present Konoye government was installed last July. When Prince Konoye took over the premiership then for the second time, it was generally believed that he was destined to become a dictator premier who would likely hold office for a decade and that there would be no more changes of government such as had occurred so frequently within recent years.

Present indications, however, are that Premier Konoye is assured of little permanency in the position of national leader. Internal dissension among extremist factions is rendering his position an extremely difficult one. It has even been rumored that an attempt was made recently against Premier Konoye by "God-sent" plotters, that a bullet grazed his arm, but this is without confirmation.

The extremists divide themselves into two factions, those who would maintain Premier Konoye as national leader under the aegis of the emperor and those who want to see him, or some other leader, emerge as the dictator of the European type, wielding all the power.

The imperialists, who are in the majority, claim that there is one essential difference between European totalitarianism and the Japanese brand—namely, that the Emperor's position in Japan is unique and that he must remain the fountain head of the entire national system. According to this view, Konoye or someone else may be head of the national structure and head of the Government, but the throne must remain inviolate.

Extremists who urge an outright dictatorship visualize a return to the Shogunate days. They would set up Konoye or someone else if Konoye should not remain as a sort of Shogun, with the Emperor relegated to the background as in the Tokugawa days. They believe that the totalitarian system as practiced in Germany and Italy can only be made to work successfully with a powerful national leader as dictator. Few believe Konoye would countenance such a situation, and there is considerable talk of an outright military dictatorship should he step out. Konoye has long been referred to as the "Kerensky" of Japan, by which it has been meant to imply that he might well be the last premier under what remains of constitutional government in Japan.

The National Structure movement, which progressed with astounding rapidity in September, and seemed to permeate every phase of the national life to regiment it, has slowed down considerably within recent weeks, apparently due to underground popular resistance as well as dissension regarding the working out of the system. Japanese newspapers only recently significantly stressed the need for renewed efforts to give it life.

As regards foreign policy, there is widespread dissension too. The Tripartite Pact with Germany and Italy proved so unpopular that the government did not deem it wise to stage a national celebration until the public had had time to digest it, and the alliance with Germany and Italy was combined with the celebrations marking 2,600th anniversary of the empire.

But having succeeded in putting over the Tripartite Pact, the Konoye government is now bent on the new step of drawing Russia into the alliance by negotiating a nonaggression pact with the Soviet Union. It is curious to find Japan now in the position of urging a pact upon which she has repeatedly turned her back for the past eight years, since the proposal for a non-aggression pact was first made in Moscow to a former Japanese ambassador to France on his way back to Tokyo.

Japan's anxiety for a non-aggression pact with Russia now is clearly evident. It is supposed that the Germans gave the Japanese assurances when they entered in the Tripartite alliance aimed against the United States that, in the event of a conflict in the Pacific, the Soviet Union would not attack Japan. The Japanese now want these assurances implemented.

Mob Rule

THE UNITED PRESS tells us that construction work on a dam in North Carolina has been seriously impeded by strife between local workers and men of special talent imported from the North and West. According to the United Press, the dam is "an important link in President Roosevelt's plans for a series of power projects to aid in the national defense." The superintendent of the job appealed to Gov. Hoey in Raleigh for protection for his "foreigners" in a situation amounting to mob rule, and the Governor sent highway police to restore order.

What is wrong with that picture?

According to the contentions of both the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O., nothing is wrong with it. The Southern workmen, even though it does not appear that they are organized in a formal union, are well within the rights claimed by the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. and many precedents recognized or condoned by the national Government in recent years.

A GROUP OF MEN have taken the liberty of establishing certain qualifications of workers on the job. They insist that only local men be employed and their picketing is riotous, but they can plausibly insist that the rioting is provoked by the "foreigners," who in this case have the status of scabs, rats and finks. If the scabs, rats and finks would go away or the company would agree not to employ them, there would be no rioting. A similar proposition was stated by John L. Lewis in a wire to President Roosevelt when a great force of coal miners were gathering in Pennsylvania for a march on one of the steel centers to win an organization strike for the steel workers.

Mr. Lewis viewed with grave alarm the events which might occur unless the national Government appeased a large body of men who were threatening to riot and, perhaps under the precedent of Herrin, Ill., commit a massacre. It may be observed parenthetically that Adolf Hitler always employs the same reasoning. Appease him and he will not kill you. Oppose him and you are responsible for the consequences.

AT THE PRESENT TIME the American Federation of Labor is pursuing a course on various national defense jobs parallel to that of the North Carolina country workers. The construction unions of the A. F. of L. have established hiring shacks on the premises where cantonments and other defense works are building at which citizens desiring to work must buy work licenses. The license fees run from $20 for common laborers to $80 for carpenters. "No fee, no license, no job" is the rule, and if the contractors should insist on hiring non-union men the unions would picket, reserving the right to riot if peaceful picketing should fail.

It would seem from the United Press' story and from what most of us know of labor organizations that this North Carolina incident is not a union matter. But that does not alter the case. A union charter is no legal license to riot, although public opinion has come to believe that some fine print must exist somewhere in the Constitution or the laws of the country granting this special privilege to unions. The A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. have no more rights than the unorganized locals or homers of North Carolina.

THEY ARE just groups of private individuals, and the organizations themselves are only clubs or associations. The charters which they issue to their national unions and the charters which the nationals hand down to the locals are not public licenses and confer no rights on the groups or sub-groups or the individual members which do no belong equally to other citizens.

There is nothing unusual, however illegal it all may be, about the conduct of the North Carolina men. They say outsiders may not work in their part of the country. The A. F. of L. has said that for years, but has made special rules to permit an American citizen to work in new territory, provided he first spend a certain period in idleness and then pay a naturalization fee to the local union.

Am I pointing out something alarming? Does any group of men anywhere have a right to bar other men for reasons of its own, whether because they are freckled, bowlegged, out-of-towners, vegetarians or philatelists, and beat them up and blame them for their own injuries? Look at the record of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

Accused of Spying, Officer Proposes Brain Operation

Manila, Nov. 22 (AP).—Capt. Rufo Romero, court martialed on a charge of conspiring to sell military information, offered today to undergo brain operation to eliminate any possibility of mental reproduction of the information in question.

The Filipino officer, a West Point graduate, made his dramatic offer at his trial after a sweeping denial of charges that he had taken maps from Fort McKinley with intent to dispose of information about Philippine defenses.

He claimed he was the "victim of enemies who wanted to see him separated from his American wife."

The maps were found, Government agents said, in the locked trunk of Capt. Romero's automobile.

Waiting On Senate

Consideration Near on Logan Bill

There was a Senator from Kentucky, his name was Logan, he died about a year ago. He had exceptional respect. Without pretension to brilliancy, he was earnest and painstaking; he had been chief justice of the highest court of his State. As a Democrat, with a bent to follow party leadership, and as a liberal, he was a strong supporter of Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal. Associates in the Senate, speaking of his record from memory, could not recall any New Deal measure he had opposed. When the attempt to change the Supreme Court was seen to be impossible, Senator Logan was one of those who tried to salvage the President's measure by a compromise. To Senator Logan the New Deal was party doctrine, and also liberalism.

In late 1937, however, there came to Senator Logan's attention, from constituents in Kentucky, examples of extreme and arbitrary power exercised by some New Deal agencies. Upon study, Senator Logan felt that the delegations of power, by Congress, to administrative agencies, had gone too far; he came to the shocked conclusion that some of the most precious principles of government were threatened. In this conviction, Senator Logan drafted and introduced what became known as the Logan bill.

ABOUT the purpose and effect of the Logan bill, there has been much debate due to many variations through which the bill has gone. The original and central purpose, as it lay in the mind of its author, was, in his own words:

". . . To stem and, if possible, to reverse the drift . . . which, if it should succeed in any substantial degree in this country, could but result in totalitarianism, with complete destruction of the division of governmental power between the Federal and State governments; and with the entire subordination of both the legislative and judicial branches of the Federal Government to the executive branch wherein are included the administrative agencies . . ."

Hearings on Senator Logan's bill were held April to June, 1938. But no action was taken in that Congress. In the next Congress Senator Logan reintroduced his bill, January 24, 1939. Soon after, in the House, a companion bill was introduced by Democratic Representative Francis Walter, of Pennsylvania. Thereafter the measure was known as the Walter-Logan bill.

IN THE HOUSE the course of the Walter-Logan bill was normal. It went to the Judiciary Committee, was given prolonged hearings, was favorably reported and, 11 months after introduction, was passed by the House with a majority so extraordinary as to lead to comment about its significance. The vote was 282 to 97. The majority favoring the bill was made up of 130 Democrats and 149 Republicans (with 3 third-party votes).

Not merely did the size of this House majority—practically 3 to 1—attract attention. It was observed that more than half the Democrats voted for the bill, 130 to 93. This ought not to have attracted attention, since it was a Democratic bill—both its sponsors, Logan in the Senate, Walter in the House, were Democrats. But while the bill was Democratic, it was opposed by the Administration. The opposition in the House, 97 votes, was a pro-Administration, New Deal minority—amounting to only about one-fourth of those voting.

Passage of the bill in the House concluded action there. It was done seven months ago, April 18th last. From that day, the bill has awaited action by the Senate. It still waits.

IN THE SENATE, the bill started to move more rapidly than in the House—and with an apparently even greater majority favoring it. It was reported favorably by the Senate Judiciary Committee, by a vote of 16 to 2. It first came up in the Senate a year and a half ago, in July, 1939. It passed without roll call, without a dissenting voice.

A few days later, Democratic Senate Leader Barkley asked that the action be reconsidered, and the bill be put back on the calendar. The request, in the circumstances, was not unreasonable. Friends of the bill, however, especially its author, Senator Logan, asked for assurance that the bill, if put back on the calendar, would be brought up again with reasonable promptness. This assurance Senator Barkley gave. He said, August 1, 1939:

"It is entirely satisfactory to my colleague (Senator Logan) that the vote by which that bill passed should be reconsidered . . . with the understanding that the measure be taken up at some date early in the next session."

THAT WAS a year and five months ago. "Early in the next session" should have been last January and February. But the bill was not taken up, last January, nor February—nor since. Efforts to bring it up were met with requests for postponement by Senator Barkley. He made various pleas—that other bills were more important, that defense measures were pressing, that a commission to study the subject of the bill had been set up by the Attorney General on request of the President.

At last, Senator Barkley said he would not try to prevent the bill being brought up when the Senate resumed after the election. That means now, two years and nine months after the first introduction of the bill.

On Friday, November 22, the Senate had no quorum. Next Monday effort will be made to begin consideration of the bill. The effort is expected to succeed.

The Blindfolded Paper

During the past week the British and the Nazis have been exchanging heavy blows, and many a reader of the news reports must have asked himself how correct is his impression of the effects of the bombardments. A study of the question will throw light on the relationship in war or in peace between the totalitarian states and the free nations.

THUS, the Nazis have bombarded Coventry and Birmingham and the British have bombarded Hamburg and Duisburg-Ruhrport. Our news reports of the Nazi bombardments in England consist of the German communiques, the popularization of these communiques in press dispatches from Berlin, the British communiques, and some dispatches written by American correspondents in England who have been to Coventry or have talked with people who have been there. These reports agree that there was a heavy bombardment of Coventry and Birmingham. But though the British deny the Nazi claim, as stated by the Associated Press correspondent in Berlin, that these cities have been "knocked out of the war," the facts as to just how much damage was done are known confidentially here in Washington but not publicly. These confidential and authoritative reports, which contain an inventory of the damage done, do not—so I am told—come anywhere near confirming the Nazi claim that these blows have been decisive even in particular localities. These confidential reports have to be securate, because they are checked objectively in the continual practical negotiations between British and American officials about our aid to Britain. The British government which is seeking all the help we can give would hardly be so foolish as to give our Government a falsely optimistic view of their position when their whole case is to persuade us to increase our assistance. Moreover there are in England a great many expert official American observers who in the course of their duties have access to all the pertinent information.

It may be said, therefore, that in general the news which reaches us from England is in the first instance highly colored by the Nazi propaganda claims; that the British propaganda is unable immediately to make a convincing reply. For when admittedly there is much damage, denials are not convincing unless supported by specific details, and these details are not published, partly because it takes time to investigate them, and partly because their publication would give useful information to the enemy. But while in the first instance, the Nazi propaganda has the advantage of a clear head start, there is in the long run one immense advantage on the British side. It is that the British propaganda about what happens to Britain must be conservative and truthful because it is subject to the objective test of reports from American official observers, from American newspapermen, and from a continual stream of Allied and neutral travelers from England to America. It is possible to get at the truth about what is happening inside Britain. Because the truth will out, the British propaganda could not, if it wished, be one of continual concealment and calculated deception. Thus, the discerning reader has learned not to take at face value the first Nazi reports of devastation, to have confidence in the good faith of the first British official comments, even though they are not always enlightening or convincing, and to wait for the reports which gradually come over here as to what actually happened.

ON THE OTHER SIDE the situation is very different. In regard to the British raids into Germany and into the occupied territories, we receive the official news compiled from the reports of the British bombers themselves. We have an occasional official Nazi comment, though for the most part the Nazi policy is to suppress all news of raids in Germany. The American correspondents in Germany do not seem to be able to see anything, or if they do, to report it. We have a few official observers in Germany, far fewer than the Nazis have in the United States, but their opportunities to do much observing are strictly limited.

Thus, though the Royal Air Force has dropped thousands of tons of bombs on the industrial centers of Germany, the censorship is so effective that neither the newspaper-reading public nor official Washington have very dependable knowledge of the effect. The Nazis wish to give the impression that these raids do not really take place, or if they do, that thousands of tons of British bombs almost invariably fall either in cow pastures or on what appear to be an infinite number of German hospitals. It is obvious that we cannot be getting news from Germany. For it cannot be true that bombs falling on German cities do no damage whereas bombs falling on British cities do damage. No doubt the tonnage of bombs dropped on Germany is considerably less than the tonnage of bombs dropped on England. But whatever the proportion the damage done must be in some similar proportion. Yet for lack of any objective official or newspaper check upon the German accounts, the news of what is happening inside Germany is suppressed. There is no way of substantiating or of correcting the claims of the Royal Air Force as to what they think they have done when they pass nightly over German cities and unload their bombs. And because these reports from men flying at fifteen or twenty thousand feet cannot be circumstantial, the American newspaper reader is compelled to do just what the Nazi propaganda wishes him to do—to ignore the British aerial offensive and to think of Britain as standing solely on the defensive.

ALL THIS illustrates the crucial difficulty—in war or in peace—of the relation between free nations and totalitarian states. The totalitarian states can have a censorship which is almost absolutely impenetrable: it is operated not merely by the official censor but by the whole vast apparatus of the secret police which prevents by intimidation and other means almost all communication with the outer world. There are newspaper men in Germany but they are surrounded and virtually imprisoned and their access to Germans who could give them information is highly restricted because the Germans who might talk to them do so at the risk of their lives. There are a few neutral diplomats in Germany but the information of diplomats must come from their friends and acquaintances, and all of them are watched and all but the bravest are intimidated.

Thus, a totalitarian state can enshroud itself in a secrecy that is impossible elsewhere. In this secrecy it is possible to organize surprises that could never be organized elsewhere. Only in an efficient totalitarian state, for example, could the invasion of Denmark and Norway have been planned and prepared. And because such surprises can be prepared in such secrecy, no form of security and no kind of guaranty of peace can ever exist as between a free nation and a totalitarian state. The impossibility of knowing what is being planned, the possibility of organizing an attack and concealing it until it is launched, the fact that the free state cannot conceal any of its preparations, the fact that it must debate publicly all its policies before they can be adopted—these things preclude any kind of peace between the two kinds of state—except a victorious peace or a temporary armistice.

For in war or in peace a democracy dealing with a totalitarian state is like a card player who sees only his own hand whereas the other fellow sees all the cards that have been dealt.

Japanese Arrest U. S. Vice Consul

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 22.—A Domei (Japanese news Agency) radio broadcast disclosed today that Japanese police had arrested United States Vice Consul Linden in Hanoi, French Indo-China, and "United States newspapermen" for taking "photographs in the military zone" at Haiphong.

The broadcast added that Consul Reed had protested to the Japanese authorities. He was quoted as saying that the photographs had been taken upon order of the United States Consul General.

The State Department said late yesterday that it lacked any official advices on the reported arrest of Robert W. Linden, American Vice Consul at Hanai, French Indo-China, and American newspapermen, by Japanese police for taking "photographs in the military zone at Haiphong.

Japanese troop concentrations have been reported recently in the vicinity of Hanoi and Haiphong. This has created speculation that a Japanese military move might be planned southward against Singapore or the Netherlands East Indies.

Things for Selectees to Remember . . .

When District selectees enter their period of training, they will begin life in a new sort of world, a world sliced into rigidly demarked strata of rank and privilege.

They, the newest in this new society, will occupy the lowest rank. Corporals will seem little short of kings; sergeants will rank with emperors and commissioned officers will occupy an exclusive heaven where they move in concentric orbits about a starry firmament of generals. They will learn, sooner or later, not to salute corporals and sergeants or to call them "sir" but to do what they order. They will learn to salute each commissioned officer according to his rank, second lieutenants profoundly and generals sketchily, and to "sir" them at every opportunity.

It is all very complicated and delicate. In order to assist the prospective recruit in untangling the problem, The Post presents herewith pictures of the insignia of each commissioned rank. Chevrons of noncommissioned officers are not shown because the recruit will learn that himself without delay.

North West Settlement House

IN ITS EFFORTS to help people of its area, North West House conducts adult education classes under direction of John Cox (in foreground), of the WPA Adult Education Project. Since North West House serves earners of the lowest income group, education in budget handling and economical living is of the most importance to them

By Barry Sullivan

In the heart of Northwest Washington, richest section of the city, are 72 blocks of overcrowded homes, North West Settlement House is the recreation center for more than 25,000 colored Washingtonians living in the area.

Family incomes for residents of the section average less than $100 a month. No playgrounds are available for smaller children. Delinquency is higher and health conditions worse than in other sections of the National Capital.

For its work with teen-age boys and girls, nursery and school-age children and adults, North West House receives $9,100 from the Community Chest. Its activities are augmented by contributions of services from its patrons.

Uniforms for its scout troops, for example, are made by members of the Mothers Club under auspices of staff workers.

To fit its Mothers Club members for their job as homemakers, North West House has been teaching the importance of cooperative buying to obtain maximum use of income.

The cooperative effort started with the purchase of soap, has now extended to vegetables. Cloth for scout uniforms is purchased by the bolt and uniforms thus can be made for the scouts at $1 each.

Among its more important activities, North West House classes its work with groups in their late teens. Children who need sympathy, understanding, training and encouragement find it at the Settlement. Some of them, committed to juvenile institutions by the courts, have valued their association with North West House as a principal incentive for improvement and better living "when they get out."

Nor are the Settlement's services limited to recreation and advice. Its nursery school provides trustworthy care for children of parents who are away from home all day.

A taxi driver, whose wife was ill, had his small son riding around town with him for three weeks before he learned the boy could be left in the nursery school.

Because of limited facilities and a restricted program, North West House is unable to serve children in two particular groups. Boys and girls in the lower school grades, who attend school half a day, cannot be accommodated at present.

"Thinness of the program," according to Mrs. Flaxie H. Pinckett, head worker, keeps many children in their late teens from the Settlement.

A Woman's Washington

Older Women Often Lose Jobs By 'Jellying'

UNEMPLOYMENT at 40 frequently is owing to carelessness in the middle 30's, says Marjorie Shearon, chairman of the Women's Occupational Council. Under her guidance, the council has set up a job clinic to help find work for unemployed women over 35—but she believes in prevention as well as cure. "The woman of 35 who has a comfortable job is apt to get set in her ways; she lets her appearance slip, and doesn't bother keeping up with new ideas. She 'goes to roost,' blissfully overlooking the possibility that she may lose her job. The trick is to remember in your 30's that your 40's are going to be a difficult proposition."

Marjorie Shearon

Mrs. Shearon, now with the Social Security Board, lost her job in 1933 when the company she worked for folded up. During her eight months of unemployment she did a lot of thinking, and now she wants to pass her findings along to others in the same fix. An encouraging note was sounded at the first meeting of the job clinic by a 54-year-old woman who had come to Mrs. Shearon only two weeks before. Unemployed for seven years, she had studied her assets, worked up an impressive portfolio of her record and gone to work as a secretary that very morning.

A girl who went to the Gayety the other day to see Ann Corio sat through the strip artist's act in trepidation. She was afraid Miss Corio might recognize her and wave to her in the middle of her act; as children, the two went to Sunday School together.

These are hectic days for Washington's service set, and one of the minor effects of the crisis is an epidemic of absent-mindedness. Take the case of Mrs. Ronald A. Boone, wife of a Marine Corps major stationed here. She recently invited a large group of friends for a buffet supper at her home. "Come at 7," she said, "it's our wedding anniversary." Under the drier at the hairdresser's that afternoon, she suddenly remembered that it was not their anniversary but her husband's birthday. She hastily changed the motif for the party and bought a birthday gift. But she couldn't prevent the guests from bringing the major a tremendous horseshoe of flowers.

Pride in America, Yule Card Motif

Patriotism Is Emphasized In Yule Cards

Religious Feeling, Pride in America's Beauty Also Marked

By Genevieve Reynolds

"CUTE" Christmas cards, long anathema to many who consider them a bit sacrilegious, are definitely on the decline this year. And conscientious objectors of the prisms, blocks and angles of modern art done in either humorous or serious vein can take heart from the large batch of cards showing the deeper significance of the Yuletide.

The three outstanding trends in the hundreds of Noel cards now on the market are patriotism, religious feeling and pride in America's beauty spots. Newest of these are the patriotic motif. From the large, varied collection of the American Artist Group and those of the Designers and Illustrators, you find American life in all phases. For example, you have the streamlined editions of New York life and the rustic atmosphere of a farm house. You see groups of skaters on ice, men fishing, men and women going to church.

Horse Race Scene

To mention a few of the outstanding cards from the American Artists and Designers and Illustrators group you'll find "In the Stretch," an accurate interpretation to our turf life. The horse race might be a scene lifted from the Pimlico or Belmont race tracks. Hans Kleiber's portrayal of "Pintails Coming In" shows the marsh regions of our country. This scene could easily be a bit of Charleston or New Orleans on card board.

Brightly colored fishing boats; ships in dock; sea gulls hovering against a snow capped sky; a tiny town in the back ground may be just a touch of New England reproduced in water color by Joseph Margulies.

A pale moon in a star studded sky; gentle knolls rising in the distance; snow bedecked ground; a red barn half buried in snow; a two-story mountain home peeping over the hills. Dale Nichol's "The Night Before Christmas" looks as if it might be picked out of the West Virginia hills and transferred to your Christmas card.

Old Glory Waves

Hobart Nicholas brings the windswept Rockies with their innumerable streams to the front, thus depicting another phase of the American scene. Gracefully seated on a galloping horse, the hunter in his red coat brings the thrilling hunting scene of Virginia to the scene. Roger Duvoisin of the Designers and Illustrators designed this card.

Uncle Sam and Santa Claus with their heads together, Old Glory waving in 15 different versions are some of the more patriotic scenes found on the new Christmas cards. Also, there are innumerable angels and Madonnas, the Golden Gate Bridge, Churches and Santas in various guises. Only one poinsettia and a fairly limited number of Christmas trees are in evidence. Wise men and angels are painted or etched in limitless poses.

Moderns there are of course—a few in the witty, light feeling vein but as a whole the Christmas cards of the American Artist, Designers and Illustrators give a more religious or serious interpretation to the approaching holiday than in previous years.

Frosted Doughnuts

Frosted doughnuts are quite a treat served with cider at this time of year. Make them the usual way, then frost with French pastry icing lightly flavored with grated orange rind, lemon and vanila extracts. You should serve the frosted doughnuts the day they are made up, because the frosting might soak into the sweet if allowed to stand.

Controlled Diet Tests at Cornell Offer Hope for Longer Living

By Ida Jean Kain

NOBODY is holding out promises of any kind but if the controlled diet which has been the subject of an intensive ten-year research at Cornell University works out with comparable success for the not-so-easily-controlled human being, the generations of the future will not only stay younger longer, but a good percentage may live as long as the famous Thomas Parr who claimed to be 152 when he died!

That optimistic outlook suggests itself on the strength on a comprehensive report from Dr. C. M. McCay, head of the laboratory of animal nutrition at Cornell, whose experiments with white rats have been directed at establishing the relationship between diet and the aging process.

Before proceeding to these experiments, it is just as well to point out the fact that three factors are to be considered in the aging process: Whether your ancestors were a hardy lot, who lived to a hale old age; what you were given to eat as a child, and what you eat now. Not many of us can do anything about the first two, but we have a chance at the third factor. And from all available evidence, it does not appear to be beyond the realm of possibility that the three meals a day, with emphasis on the protective foods and a reasonable curb on the calories, can extend one's prime.

Experiments Differ

Dr. McCay attaches as much importance to the daily calorie intake and the degree of body fatness as to the necessity for sufficient vitamins, minerals and protein. And while every experiment was made on the basis of an adequate diet—that is, a diet adequate in the protective elements—they differed markedly in the calorie allotments. The white rats used in the experiments have a life span many times more rapid than that of the human being, but their needs and characteristics are very similar. The most significant conclusion is: A lean rat for a long race!

In one group, the rats were allowed to eat as much as they pleased throughout their lifetime. At the same time, another group was allowed to eat as much as it pleased up to a certain point in development and another group after a certain point in development. Then there was a group which had its calories carefully restricted throughout its life span.

Its growth was retarded until it was 900 days old—as old as a man at 90—and even so it attained growth within 10 per cent of the so-called "normal." And this is the group that lived the longest! I saw the slides of the various groups. The "normal" rats, the ones that were allowed to eat as much as they pleased, were old and feeble and barely able to get around when the retarded rats were still young and chipper. One of these retarded rats lived to be 1,400 days old, which corresponds to the age at which Thomas Parr died. It is not known how many of the "normal rats" would be required to produce one Parr, but the average among the retarded rats was one for every 100.

Tumors Less Frequent

There were other significant discoveries. The incidence of tumors among the retarded rats was much less frequent. So was the incidence of inner ear and lung troubles. As Dr. McCay stated:

"Since the life span can be greatly increased by this method, it follows that the diseases of old age which terminate life must have been postponed."

Thus it appears evident that the method of calorie control which keeps you streamlined will also enable you to stay younger longer! Balance your diet to include all the food essentials—the milk, eggs, lean meat, fruits, vegetables, whole grain bread and cereals which are essential to radiant health. Don't get the impression that starvation means longevity.

Then, after you have ascertained that your diet contains all that is needful, cut down on the calories. You might follow the simple rule of getting up from the table while you still feel as if you could eat a bit more—in that way you would forego the rich foods, desserts and pastries which supply too many calories and are lacking in the protective elements.

Anyone who adheres to such a well balanced, low-calorie menu can build vitality and resistance to disease.

Teach Yourself To Play Guitar

PLAYING the guitar—there's no better way to make yourself popular in school affairs, on dates and parties. Strum a favorite tune and soon everyone's in a merry mood, humming and singing.

Nowadays you can so quickly learn. Simple diagrams and instructions show you how to accompany a song, how to play beautiful solos.

You don't have to be able to read a single note to play the gay chord accompaniments the gang loves.

On popular music you'll notice little symbols like that for the D minor chord. Each vertical line represents a string, each horizontal line a fret or small metal bar crossing the guitar fingerboard. The numbers we've added indicate fingering; which number for which finger is shown in our sketch of the hand.

To play the chord, with your left hand press the strings between the frets wherever you see a dot in the diagram. Use the fingers indicated. Your right hand, using a pick, plucks these same strings near the sound hole, also the "O" string.

Send 15 cents in coins for our instruction book, "Teach Yourself o Play the Guitar," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of instruction book.

Mary Haworth's Mail

In Five Years' Marriage, Husband Changes From Considerate Helpmeet to Chronic Nagger; His Wife Asks How to Cope With His Criticism

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 25 years old, have been married almost five years, and have a precious little girl 3 years old. I married my husband in opposition to my family's will. They thought he was too outspoken and too hot tempered. I had recognized these and other faults in him, but I also saw his many good points, and took it for granted that nobody is perfect.

Our only "capital" at the time of marriage was my husband's salary. He is a very conscientious worker, has a good trade and makes moderate wages. Before the end of the first year, we were expecting a baby and my prenatal care was very expensive, as I had to be hospitalized for a while. After the baby came, my condition was critical for weeks, and more bills piled up, putting us so deeply in debt that we have been rigidly economizing ever since, to pay off.

My husband was very considerate and helpful during this trying first year; but gradually he has changed. He is critical, opinionated and nagging. He thinks I don't know how to do anything right. He tells me how to run the kitchen—giving suggestions on what I should (and should not) do, until I get confused and make mistakes. Then he calls me stupid; says I have no sense.

He is European-born, although an American citizen, having lived in this country 16 years—and he thinks a wife's life should center around her husband's comfort. For instance, he thinks dinner should be on the table the minute he sets foot inside the house at night. If it isn't, you never heard such an uproar. I've tried every way I know to make him see reason and have only recently succeeded in persuading him to sit down with the newspaper for a few minutes while dinner is being taken off the stove.

He says he wants peace and quiet when he comes home, and I know he needs it, for he works hard and has been greatly worried about our indebtedness. But I work hard, too ("too hard," he sometimes tells me), and with a child of 3, in a small apartment, it isn't always possible to keep perfect order.

We are just about out of debt and planning to move soon to a rented house, which may help some. There we will have an upper floor, where I can take the baby to her own room and read her stories, leaving him the whole first floor for peace and quiet. I am also looking forward to the time when we can have more recreation than our close budgeting has permitted these last years. But I am greatly distressed by my husband's recent fault-finding attitude, and wonder if I am truly to blame.

I was reared in the Episcopal faith and take my marriage vows very seriously. I have done the very best I know how in the five years of our marriage, for I do want it to be a success. Divorce, to me, is an ugly thing; and particularly brutal, I think, for children, who are entitled to both parents. My child and her father love each other dearly, and I simply cannot afford to fail either of them.

BEWILDERED WIFE.

Listen to Mary Haworth over Station WJSV Saturday morning at 9:15, discussing problems from her daily mail.

Nagging Is a Habit, Bred of Tiredness

DEAR B. W.: Fault finding, in its first stages, usually is symptomatic of nervous exhaustion—but it can rapidly become just a very bad habit, that persists even when pardonable incitants (of poor health or environmental irritants) have been corrected. No doubt your husband's gradual change from a considerable helpmeet to a chronic nagger is due to his unrelieved hard work and financial worry of recent years. Yet that explanation doesn't really justify his behavior—since you have carried a comparable burden without becoming a shrew.

By getting out of debt, and particularly by moving to a two-floor house, as you plan to do shortly, you will be establishing conditions that should aid him in recovering his bridegroom's "considerateness." The house will allow all of you greater privacy, and make possible "a place for everything and everything in its place"—which is an impossibility in a small apartment. Systematic diversion or recreation, outside the home, would also relieve his nervous tension and permit him to see things in better proportion and perspective.

Yet, no amount of creature comfort is calculated, of itself, to invoke an automatic change for the better in his performance. Given these anticipated improvements of circumstance, he must make a conscious, determined effort to change his own ways—as he should easily be able to do, when both mind and body are better rested. Unless he makes this effort, there is very little you can do to keep peace in the family. And you should—if necessary, and in due time—make this fact clear to him.

It is wasted effort to attempt to appease the chronic nagger by trying to adapt to his every suggestion and criticism. One should stand one's ground against him—demonstrating full confidence in one's judgment and competence. If one has an "elephant hide," one may wear him down, eventually, to baffled silence, by sticking to one's own way of doing in utter disregard of his disparaging harangue. But the better way, perhaps, is to "have it out," in reasonable discussion—in which the chronic nagger is given to understand (1) how disastrously, for all concerned, he is encroaching upon another's personality and social territory; and (2) that, for the good of all, one is invincibly determined not to tolerate, or be party to, such goings-on.

It may be just as well that you haven't forced the issue, thus far in your marriage. Your long-suffering will give greater authority to your position when, in the better days immediately ahead, you take a firm stand on behalf of justice and equity. And don't be afraid to take that stand when circumstances are ripe for it. He will never love or respect you more for being a doormat. And he can never know what your admirable abilities are, so long as you continue to submerge them in trying, slavishly, to do things his way.

Halo beret is beige fur felt.

Miss Mildred Dunn Makes Bow to Society

Several Hundred Attend Reception Held At Home of Parents; Mother Assists Pretty Debutante in Receiving Guests

By Dudley Harmon

In the traditional Washington fashion, at a large afternoon reception at the home of her parents, Miss Mildred Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn, was presented to society yesterday.

Though several hundred called during the afternoon, the Dunn home on Eighteenth Street is large enough so that at no time did one get that claustrophobia feeling common at some Capital parties. The pretty debutante and her mother received in the upstairs drawing room, the former wearing a frock with a black velvet bodice and full wine red taffeta skirt. Mrs. Dunn chose a simply-cut dress of steel gray crepe with glittering silver beads outlining the sleeves and neckline.

Flowers sent Miss Dunn—and they seemed to be mostly chrysanthemums—were placed on the mantel at one end of the spacious drawing room and in baskets on the floor against the walls. Tea was served in the dining room and an impromptu bar was set up in the library adjoining. Mr. Dunn, in the traditional fashion of fathers of debutantes, didn't join the receiving line, but mingled with the guests seeing that everybody had a good time.

Pastel Hats Everywhere

Red roses, in a large silver bowl, centered the dining-room table. When I arrived Mrs. George A. Garrett was pouring tea, smart in a brown silk frock with a tiny hat of the palest pink ostrich feathers. Pastel hats with dark clothes are evidently the sartorial thing this winter. With her black dress, Mrs. John Newbold wore a small-brimmed bonnet of a beige shade which was almost yellow.

Others pouring tea during the afternoon were Mme. Espil, Mrs. Richard G. Casey, Baroness de Gruben, who carried a silver fox cape with her black tailored suit; Mrs. Fleming Newbold, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, who was all in gray; Mrs. Nelson Perin, Mrs. Charles Glover, jr., who topped off her dress with a mink jacket and a tiny hat of rose petals; Mrs. Lee Warren, in black with a turquoise blue velvet hat; Mrs. John Newbold, Mrs. S. Kent Legare, all in black with a silver fox stole, and Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper.

Glimpsed here and there: Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, the latter being warmly welcomed after an absence of several months . . . Mrs. John R. Williams surveying the scene from a comfortable chair . . . Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, she in black with a tiny hat trimmed with black lace . . . Mrs. Jouett Shouse talking things over with Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans . . . Mrs. Hiram Bingham comparing notes with Mrs. William Chapin Huntington—both are mothers of debutante daughters . . . Ralph Snowden Hill greeting Zeva Fish, who was attractive in blue . . . Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, her black dress trimmed at the neck with a gold clip . . . Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Morgan . . . Mrs. Corcoran Thom . . . Edward Burling, jr., Mrs. Arthur Krock, and scores more.

Dunns Also Give Dinner

Later Miss Dunn was guest of honor at a dinner for 20 which her parents gave at the Alibi Club. With her younger sister, Miss Hildreth Dunn, she will share honors at a dance December 23 at the Sulgrave Club. Hildreth is still studying at St. Timothy's, but will participate in the debutante's festivities and will have the spotlight all to herself during the Easter holidays, when Mrs. Dunn will give a tea for her.

Assisting Miss Mildred at her party yesterday were the Misses Louise Stillwell, Betty van der Straten-Ponthoz, Laura Blair, Eugenia Merrill, Anne Peter, Sita Finkenstaedt and Zeva Fish.

Ex-Dutch Attache Here Is Arrested By Nazis in Holland

Washingtonians who knew Dr. Herman van Royen when he was attache of The Netherlands Legation here a few years ago, will be saddened to learn that he has been arrested in Holland by the Germans. His arrest, the authorities say, is in reprisal for the internment of Germans in the Dutch East Indies.

Head of the political department of The Netherlands foreign office at the time of the invasion, Dr. van Royen remained in Holland instead of fleeing abroad with the government. His father was Netherlands Minister here from 1926 to 1933, and he served under him for a while.

Dr. van Royen has a brother, Robert, who makes his home in New York.

Patricia Hill Fetes Norris Sisters at Tea

Several Out-of-Town Guests Attend Party 'Strictly for Girls'

Something rather rare in the social life of debutantes—a tea strictly for girls, with nary a man in sight—was that given yesterday afternoon by Miss Patricia Hill. Honor guests were the Misses Marion and Mary Theresa Norris, debutante daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris.

The party took place at the Sulgrave Club. Most unusual was the gown chosen by Miss Hill, whose good looks have put her in frequent demand as a fashion model. Her floor-length frock of gray crepe was fashioned with a slit skirt, an underskirt of chartreuse crepe and a hood lined with chartreuse. She topped off her ensemble with a single strand of pearls.

Norris Sisters Dressed Alike

The Norris sisters were in twin frocks of white velvet with square necklines and leg o'mutton sleeves. With this they wore a sequin necklace and each had pinned a single gardenia to her curls.

Mrs. Hill chose for the occasion a long-waisted frock of peacock blue trimmed in gold brocade. Gold also accented Mrs. Norris' black gown.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Norris and Mrs. Wallach Merriam. And the hostess really meant it when she said tea, for cocktails were not served.

Out-of-town guests at the party included Miss Margaret Clark, of Honolulu, former roommate of Miss Hill at Goucher College; Miss Barbara Manton and Miss Nancy McDermott, of Toledo, Ohio and Miss Rita Singstad, of New York.

The Misses Laura Belle and Jane Wyatt were accompanied by Miss Faith Gaynor, of Sullins College, who is spending the week-end in Washington.

Laura Mae Norris Joins Family

Miss Laura Mae Norris, a sister of the guests of honor, was present at the party. Others glimpsed were Miss Mary Betts, Miss Achsah Dorsey, in black crepe, with a bolero trimmed in gold sequins; Miss Edith Hood, Miss Molly Stonestreet, Miss Virginia Pennington, Miss Nancy Hoskinson, Miss Patricia Grady.

Theater Club's Cause Pleaded At Biddle Party

Mrs. Piscator Talks In Place of Husband At Informal Affair

By Carolyn Bell

"If you can't find seats, just sit on the floor," said Mrs. Francis Biddle to her guests yesterday afternoon as they were about to hear Maria Ley Piscator deliver a short—and impassioned—plea for the Washington Theater Repertory Club.

Invitations were issued in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Piscator, but the famed director is in New York and at the last moment was unable to get away. However, his charming wife, wearing a simple black outfit and beret spiked with a feather, doubled for him admirably.

It was an informal party from 5 until 7 o'clock given in the apartment of the Solicitor General and Mrs. Biddle at 2101 Connecticut Avenue. She wore a tea length gown of blue-green crepe and several strands of pearls.

Miss Chapin To Exhbit Here

Guests were delighted to learn that Mrs. Biddle's sister, Miss Cornelia Van A. Chapin, will arrive today from New York to spend the week-end. Miss Chapin, a sculptor of note, is exhibiting a bit of her work—a whimsical model of a young pig—here for the opening of national art week Monday. The show will be held in the department auditorium.

Mrs. Forbes Morgan, jr., was among those pouring tea at the flower decked table. Mrs. Morgan's cunning Dutch cap was of rust velvet and embroidered with vari-colored beads. Also pouring throughout the afternoon were Mrs. Malcolm Ross, Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap and Mrs. Mark Merrill.

Stars of Stage, Screen, Radio, Sports Attend Mayflower Benefit

Another contribution for the American Red Cross was raised last night at a ball sponsored by the District Federation of Women's Clubs in the Mayflower Hotel.

Stars of the stage, screen, radio and sports world were present as honor guests.

Ethel Barrymore and several members of the cast from her current play, "The Corn Is Green," at the National Theater, came in after the show.

Arch McDonald, radio commentator, acted as master of ceremonies. Forrest Tucker, who is featured in "The Westerner," was present with his wife, Sandrea Jolley, of the Earl Carroll Club, of Hollywood. The top was of black velvet made on the style of a man's dinner coat and was worn with a full circular skirt of beige and gold checkered design outlined with gold thread. Her wrap was a silver fox jacket.

"Turk" Edwards, of the Washington Redskins, was another star among the honor guests, accompanied by his wife, who wore a gray gown with a close-fitting embroidered jacket and a clip formed of little pink rosebuds as the only ornament.

All of the celebrities were in demand for autographs between dances.

Dorothy Pond and John Beers, of the Arthur Murray Studio, gave an exhibition of the Viennese waltz, a rhumba and the conga as Ethel Fistere took the microphone and explained the steps. The guests were invited to join in the conga chain and many of them responded. Miss Pond wore a bouffant white net frock with an off-the-shoulder neckline, and wore a gardenia in her hair. Mrs. Fistere was in black velvet with which she wore topaz bracelets.

In addition to the several hundred dancers who attended the affair there were many guests who played cards at the tables arranged on the balconies. An American flag and a large Red Cross flag were displayed in the ballroom, as reminders of the significance of the occasion. Mrs. Gladys Ball Middlemiss, president of the Women's City Club, was chairman of the floor committee, and Mrs. Frederic Newburgh, president of the Housekeepers' Alliance, of the reservations for bridge.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation, with Mr. Daniel, was present at the party and later entertained at a buffet supper at her home, Grant and Broad Branch Roads. She wore a white spangled gown and a corsage of orchids.

Mrs. John T. Lucker, chairman of the coordinating committee, which sponsored the benefit, wore a pink frock, trimmed in rhinestones and a powder blue jacket and accessories. The cochairman, Mrs. LeVerne Beales, wore a powder blue gown with a packet embroidered in silver.

Following the lecture, a luncheon will be given in the Blue Room honoring organizations and clubs. Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will be the official hostess.

Md. Nutrition Parley Urges 3-Point Program

Third of Population Undernourished, Maryland U. Conference Is Told; Groups to Attack Problem Proposed

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

You can't sit home and say somebody else has to eat green vegetables—everybody has to eat his own spinach, it was decided yesterday at the Maryland State Nutrition Conference at the University of Maryland.

The conference was called by Dean Marie Mount of the College of Home Economics, chairman of the State nutrition committee, in connection with the national defense program in which nutrition is considered a major public problem. Although poverty is responsible for the undernourished third of the population which constitutes the most serious part of this problem, lack of good nutrition is confined to no economic level and to no specific age group, it was revealed. Total cooperation by the whole population is necessary for an effective nutrition program promoting national health.

Three recommendations came out of the conference, which was attended by about 100 persons from all parts of the State, representing agencies with nutrition programs and women's organizations through which information will be disseminated. The formation of a committee representing "educational, medical, public and social welfare agencies" was recommended to study a possible organization of present agencies to make the people of Maryland more conscious of the nutrition problem and to present information to the people.

Speakers Include Farm, Health Experts

Another committee was proposed to study the information the first group would make available and to confer with official agencies regarding it. Citing the fact that "one of the limiting factors to the success of past programs has been lack of economic ability to carry out knowledge available, another committee was recommended "on ways and means to eradicate economic difficulties."

Speakers at the morning session included M. L. Wilson, director of extension, of the Department of Agriculture, who emphasized the national scope of the undernourishment problem involving a third of the population, and Dr. E. V. McCollum, of Johns Hopkins University, who pointed out that nutrition information was available but must be put in the hands of the public.

The registration of all trained dietitians in the State by the Home Economics Association and Dietetics Association was reported by heads of these organizations.

Reports on nutrition programs in the State were made by representatives of about 40 different agencies. Miss Ernestine Becker, of Johns Hopkins, reported on the general nutrition in the State; Miss Elizabeth Amery, State supervisor of home economics in the schools, and Miss Mary Faulkner, home economics supervisor in Baltimore city schools, reported that home economics courses in 129 county high schools for white children reach 12,000 girls and 2,350 more in 29 county high schools for colored. School lunches are served to 50,000 pupils in the white schools and 8,000 in the colored, at a minimum of 10 cents for a well-balanced meal and 5 cents for soup and bread and butter, said Miss Amery. The cooperation of the Parent-Teacher Associations in providing hot lunches for children who cannot afford to pay for them was described by Mrs. Ruby, a member of the P.-T. A. of Montgomery County.

Panel Discussion Held in Afternoon

Dr. Edwin Broome, superintendent of the Montgomery County schools, held that a child had a right to earn his lunch as a man earns his living. A plan is followed by which a child can help in preparing and serving it or to help the teacher in some way to pay in service. "There should be democracy in food as well as other things," said Dr. Broome.

In the afternoon, a panel discussion was devoted to the nutrition problem from the angle of Montgomery County. Mrs. Minler Hostetler, president of the County League of Women Voters, presided. Mrs. Edwin Fry, of the Association of Farm Women, emphasized the importance of the food stamp plan because it reached the entire family and not the children only.

Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, president of the County Federation of Women's Clubs, urged encouragement of more gardening and canning of vegetables. Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, said there was need for education in the selection of food. Mrs. Vestus Wilcox, of the Social Service League, said there were 582 organizations in the county interested in welfare programs through which information could be disseminated. Miss Edythe Turner, county home demonstration agent, told of the annual plan for food and nutrition being worked out by members of her groups and how each woman contacted others in her neighborhood.

Walter-Logan Bill Filibuster Feared

C. WAYLAND BROOKS, Republican, yesterday took the oath of office as Senator from Illinois. He succeeds James M. Slattery, Democrat

Wagner to Offer Anti-Lynching Rider, Senators Hear

By John B. Oakes

Post Staff Writer

A report that an antilynching filibuster might be used next week to block passage of the Walter-Logan bill was circulated in the Senate yesterday.

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, a sponsor of the Walter-Logan measure to curb independent governmental agencies, declared that Majority Leader Barkley had told him that Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, intended to offer the antilynching proposal as a rider. Other Senators, both for and against the bill, which has been bitterly fought by the Administration, declared that they, too, had heard the report.

Senator Wagner himself was out of town yesterday and could not be reached by telephone in New York.

If the antilynching bill is offered, "it will give us something to talk about from now to January," observed one New Deal Senator, adding that "I understand Senator Wagner is going to do it."

Sees Opponents "Desperate"

"I say that that indicates the desperation of the opponents of the Walter-Logan bill," observed Senator Burke. "They have practically abandoned hope of defeating the measure on its merits and now mus tresort to dubious tactics."

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, veteran opponent of antilynching legislation, declared that "supporters of the anti-lynching bill are always denouncing the so-called filibuster." Now, said the Texan, "they propose to out-filibuster anybody else that ever led a filibuster."

Despite repofts revolving around the anti-lynching bill, both Senator Burke and Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, yesterday quoted Senator Wagner as saying he would not oppose the Walter-Logan bill "if he could be sure that the Senate conferees would stand fast by the Senate Judiciary Committee's amendments."

These amendments would lessen the drastic powers of judicial review granted to the Federal courts in the House-approved bill. Under the proposals of the Senate committee, the courts could still review findings of fact of independent agencies, such as the NLRB or the SEC, if they are not sustained by "substantial evidence." But the Senate committee struck out the House bill certain broadly-worded phrases, which would give the courts much more sweeping rights of review.

Other Changes Made

Other changes were made by the Senate committee and it is understood that some, if not all of them, would probably be accepted by the House. Nevertheless, even the Senate committee bill still retains enough of its original shape to have already evoked warnings from Congressional Democratic leaders that the President will veto it if it ever should pass both houses.

The Post was informed yesterday that the long-delayed report of the Attorney General's committee on administrative procedure would be published in from "two to four weeks." According to a report emanating from sources favofable to the Walter-Logan bill, the 11-man committee at its last meeting was sharply divided on its attitude toward the proposed legislation.

The Senate was unable to proceed to consideration of the Walter-Logan bill yesterday because not enough Senators were present. After Senator Minton, assistant majority leader, suggested the absence of a quorum, only 45 of the necessary 48 members answered to their names. The Senate immediately quit until Monday.

Gillette Group Uncovers Vote Fraud in Ky.

U. S. Urged to Act; Philadelphia, Chicago, Wilmington Under Fire

By the Associated Press

Reporting evidence of "widespread stuffing of ballot boxes" in three Kentucky counties, the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee yesterday asked Government prosecutors to take immediate action.

Chairman Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, announced that the special Senate committee appointed to police this year's elections had voted to turn over all its evidence on the Kentucky complaint and all similar investigations to the special Justice Department unit recently established to prosecute alleged election frauds and irregularities.

Maurice M. Milligan, who heads this unit as a special assistant to the Attorney General, conferred at length yesterday with the five members of the Senate committee before Gillette's announcement. Milligan won national attention as a Federal prosecutor in Missouri.

Chairman Gillette said that Federal grand juries had considered or would receive all evidence collected by Senate committee investigations of alleged election frauds and voting list "padding" in Philadelphia, Chicago and Wilmington, Del.

He announced that the subcommittee composed of Senators Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, and Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, would resume public hearings within a week in New Jersey. Earlier hearings produced a sharp exchange between Tobey, a Republican, and Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, powerful figure in the Democratic Party.

Gillette said that committee investigators had uncovered much evidence of "clear law violation through corrupt methods of conducting election in Harlan, Bell and Pike Counties, Kentucky," after a complaint by Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, Senate majority leader.

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 22 (AP).—W. G. Clugston, State Democratic publicity director, said today "hundreds" of telegrams had been sent to President Roosevelt asking Federal investigation of the out-of-State absentee ballot count which wiped out an earlier lead held by William H. Burke, Democratic gubernatorial candidate.

The count, completed yesterday, gave Republican Gov. Payne H. Ratner a 427-vote margin after he had trailed as much as 2,800 votes.

Newspaper reporters who cover the proceedings will sit on one or two of the benches in the rear, as they once did during Supreme Court sessions. In the House they will be provided tables in the rear of the ample hall.

Officials were indefinite regarding accommodations for the public, but Lynn said that "limited space" would be provided for a few spectators.

The temporary Senate chamber has a gallery, but investigators soon discovered that it is unusable because it is cluttered with air-conditioning pipes.

The Senate vacated the small room to which it is now returning on January 4, 1859, when its new chamber was completed. It had occupied the old quarters since December 6, 1819.

The move to larger quarters was necessitated by the frequent addition of States to the Union and the consequent enlargement of the Senate.

Echoes of Great Names

The Vice President, John Cabell Breckinridge, in an address on the occasion proudly said of the Senate:

"Today it is composed of the representatives of 32 States, containing more than 28,000,000 of people, prosperous, happy and still devoted to constitutional liberty. Let these great facts speak for themselves to all the world."

Yellowed paper diagrams on the walls of the old chamber show that in 1850 Henry Clay sat in No. 2 seat, Daniel Webster in No. 29 and Jefferson Davis in No. 36. In 1840 John C. Calhoun had No. 2 position.

When the House meets on the first floor of the new House Office Building Monday, it will be the first time it has convened outside of the Capitol since it was rebuilt following its burning by the British in 1814.

Both houses at first met in Blodgett's Hotel at F and Seventh Streets, which was then used by the Patent Office. The question of removal of the seat of government was widely agitated. To forestall this a group of public-spirited citizens hastily erected a more adequate building and presented it to Congress.

This building, known as the Brick Capitol, stood on the site of the present Supreme Court Building and was occupied until 1819. Congress did not occupy its present wings, however, until many years later. While the Senate occupied what later became the Supreme Court chamber, the House met in what is now Statuary Hall.

The extensions, which now hold the Senate and House wings, were authorized in 1850. The House occupied its chamber in 1857, and the Senate moved two years later.

6 Die in Bay State Truck-Sedan Crash

Plainville, Mass., Nov. 22 (AP).—Six persons, one of them a woman, were killed today in a head-on collision between a large trailer-truck and a sedan at the junction of two main highways.

Three of the victims, riding in the truck, burned to death when the heavy van burst into flames after the crash.

It was impossible to identify the victims immediately.

Maryland U. Paper Lays Honor Plan Delay to Students

Lack of spirit on the part of a lethargic student body is the reason advanced by the Diamondback, University of Maryland student newspaper, for the failure of the authorities to institute an honor system for examinations, in an editorial answering questioning students.

"An honor system must grow up with the school, become an established tradition," the editorial said. "We cannot have an honor system because of students who will go to almost any lengths to get a passing mark out of a course.

"If the students want an honor system, we suggest that they prove themselves worthy of it and then come back and try again."

The Political Arena

Representative Fulmer (Democrat), of South Carolina, became chairman of the House Agriculture Committee yesterday, succeeding Representative Jones (Democrat), of Texas.

FULMER

Jones resigned from the House yesterday to take a seat on the Court of Claims. Fulmer, ranking Democrat on the committee, was selected by the House to the chairmanship on recommendations of the Ways and Means Committee.

Allis said Jones took the oath of office as a judge of the Court of Claims Wednesday night and left Thursday on a brief vacation trip.

Brooks Takes Senatorial Oath

C. Wayland Brooks, Illinois Republican, was sworn in as a Senator yesterday to serve out the term of the late Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, which expires in January, 1943.

Brooks succeeds Senator James M. Slattery, who had been serving by appointment and whom Brooks defeated in the election November 5.

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, said he had been informed that there might be a contest of the election results and that it was his understanding that the Senate would waive none of its rights in respect to seating Brooks by permitting him to take the oath of office at this time.

Dirksen Urges Change In Conventions Dates

Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, suggested yesterday that national political conventions for choosing Presidential nominees be postponed from their usual June or July dates until August or September.

Dirksen made his proposal in a letter to Chairman Joseph W. Martin, of the Republican National Committee. In bygone days, Dirksen said, there was good reason for a five or six-month lapse between the conventions and November general elections because of slow communications.

He added, however, space now has been "annihilated."

Absentee Ballot Breaks Deadlock

Port Townsend, Wash., Nov. 22 (AP).—An absentee ballot, cast by W. T. Martin, barber, at Kodiak, Alaska, arrived today and broke a 1,651-vote tie to give a Jefferson County commissionership to Arthur C. Boren, Democrat, over Robert Cook, Republican.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 22 (AP).—Every State employe who fails to obtain the backing of the Republican leader in his home county will be dismissed, Gov. Arthur H. James said today.

"We feel now it is our duty to replace Democrats with Republicans on consistency with the efficiency of each office," James announced.

The Governor said he could not tell how many would be discharged.

Court Orders Publisher to Open Records to U. S.

Boston, Nov. 22 (AP).—Federal Judge Francis J. W. Ford denied today an appeal by the Lowell Sun Newspaper Co. for dismissal of a court order to produce its employment records for examination by the Wage-Hour Administration and directed the paper to produce the data.

The authority of the wage-hour law over newspapers was challenged by Elisha Hanson, counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

Vernon C. Stoneman, attorney for the board, told the court the Wage-Hour Administration sought only information and that there were no charges against the paper.

D. C. Autoist Badly Hurt In Alexandria

Death Driver Held For Grand Jury; Negligent Homicide Act Faces Court Trial

On the traffic front last night a District motorist was in a critical condition while a coroner's jury ordered another motorist held for grand jury action in a recent death. At the same time it was announced that the constitutionality of the Negligent Homicide Act soon will be determined. Three persons, including a 9-year-old boy, also lay in District hospitals as the result of traffic injuries during the day.

The Washington motorist was injured when his auto collided with a trailer-truck in Alexandria a few minutes before midnight Thursday. He was in Alexandria Hospital.

The motorist, Cecil Dye, 29, giving his address in the 1600 block of F Street Northeast, was brought to the hospital suffering a fractured skull and multiple lacerations of the scalp, as well as bruises and shock. Seriously injured, he showed little improvement yesterday, according to hospital authorities.

Dye was booked at police headquarters on a technical charge of reckless driving, pending his recovery.

According to a report submitted by Ferney Payne, colored, 45, driver of the truck, Dye's auto came around a curve on the 800 block of Patrick Street on the wrong side of the road, and crashed into the side of the trailer. Payne suffered lacerations of the upper lip.

Riley Johnson, colored, 32, of 142 M Street Southeast, was denied bail and committed to the District Jail last night after a coroner's jury held him for the grand jury in connection with a recent traffic death.

Witnesses testified that Johnson's automobile was traveling between 50 and 60 miles an hour when it struck George F. Leigh, 17-year-old messenger, of 649 I Street Southeast, and Ralph W. Padgett, 15, of 14 Seventh Street Southeast, at Eleventh and I Streets Southeast, Wednesday night.

The Leigh boy was dead when a Casualty Hospital ambulance arrived at the scene. Ralph Padgett is still in a critical condition at the hospital with a broken neck.

Lieut. William J. Liverman, of the accident prevention unit, told the jury that Johnson's car passed another machine on the wrong side while both cars were in the intersection. The two victims were standing beside a third car parked at the southeast corner.

Liverman said the defendant was intoxicated and at the Fifth Precinct station was unable to give a coherent account of the mishap.

The constitutionality of the Negligent Homicide Act, which provides for a speedy Police Court trial of persons blamed for traffic deaths in Washington, will soon be determined by the United States Court of Appeals.

The law, providing a penalty of one year in jail, was adopted in 1935 to establish a punishment more severe than the $100 fine and 30 days in jail for reckless driving but less severe than the 15 years in prison for manslaughter. Juries rarely had found the blame to be imputed to automobile drivers equal to that found in the crime of manslaughter.

John Stahl, 63, 1940 Biltmore Street Northwest, was fatally injured June 13 by a motorcycle allegedly operated by Rufus R. Henderson, 33, colored, 2316 Champlain Street Northwest. When Henderson was prosecuted under the Negligent Homicide Act, his attorney Earl Davis, protested that the accusing information was legally insufficient.

Police Judge Walter J. Casey upheld the defense claim and Assistant District Attorney Dennis McCarthy filed the appeal, on behalf of the Government, which the higher court yesterday agreed to hear.

Nine-year-old Andrew Jackson, of 30 Randolph Street Northwest, was treated for cuts and lacerations at Sibley Hospital last night after he was struck by an auto while roller-skating on the street near his home. Police said the auto was operated by George B. Scott, 47, of 1116 Allison Street Northwest.

Andrew J. Annis, 44, of Baltimore, was treated at Casualty Hospital for cerebral concussion following a two-car crash at Eleventh and K Streets Southeast. Annis was a passenger in an auto police said was operated by John H. Rosenberger, 51, of Baltimore, while the auto with which they collided was said to be driven by Philip H. Brooks, 25, of 2622 Thirty-second Street Southeast.

Ernest P. White, 58, colored, of 4115 Ninth Street Northwest, was in Freedmen's Hospital with a possible fracture of the skull after he was struck by a street car at Eighth Street and Florida Avenue Northwest.

Police, Firemen Act Quickly To Save Girl, 4

Fast rescue work on the part of police and firemen yesterday saved a 4-year-old colored girl from a second-story room trapped by flames. But last night she lay critically ill of third-degree burns in Freedmen's Hospital.

The child, Jean Peasley, was left alone in the apartment at 809 Florida Avenue Northwest also occupied by four other colored persons. An oil stove there exploded and set the place afire.

Police Officers H. D. Rogers and W. P. Als, of the Thirteenth Precinct Station, reaching the scene ahead of the firemen, rushed to a nearby filling station for fire extinguishers. While playing these through a window at the rear of the apartment they heard a child's cries from inside. Unable to break through the flames, they operated the fire extinguishers until the firemen from No. 4 Engine Company arrived.

Firemen, setting up ladders in front, were able to reach Jean, although she was completely engulfed by hot smoke.

World's Fair In D. C. Urged By Anacostians

Citizens Association Favors Southeast Area For 1943 or '44 Show

A World's Fair for the District in 1943 or 1944 was urged last night at a meeting of the Anacostia Citizens Association. The citizens recommended that exhibit buildings for the fair be constructed "somewhere in the southeast area, east of the Anacostia River."

Other resolutions opposed the rider to the District budget preventing the use of the District Testing Station, and urged District highway officials to repair sidewalks on High Street, near Fourteenth Street Southeast.

Delegates elected to the Southeast Council were William Tucker, E. F. Weightman and Herman Willer. Committee chairmen appointed last night include William Tucker, transportation; Mrs. Helen Failor, membership and entertainment; Capt. Frank Dent, gardens and lawns; L. W. Thompson, streets and highways; Mrs. Carrie Smith, schools; Robert Thompson, water and lights, and Herman Willer, police and fire.

Members of the Burroughs Citizens Association last night heard the Rev. S. E. Rose, pastor of the McKindree Methodist Church, boost community fellowship as "equal to and in many cases better than church fellowship."

They voted to light a community Christmas tree on Christmas Eve in front of the John Burroughs School, at Eighth and Oglethorpe Streets Northeast.

An entertainment program highlighted the meeting, with Catherine Audia, of Burroughs School; Mrs. Marjorie Williams, from Arizona, and Shirley March, of Taft Junior High School, as featured performers. Music was furnished by the associations newly organized band.

Winners of a song-guessing contest included Mrs. Walter Evans, William Audia, Patsie Sazama and Mrs. Julia Walters. More than 100 attended the meeting, held in Burroughs School.

Lecturer Tells Of Expedition's Race With War

Traveling more than 10,000 miles across Europe and Asia by truck and trailer, from Paris to India, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Thaw passed in five months from the cosmopolitan capitals of the Continent, through the Near East, past the plateau cities of Iran, with their mosques, and through the Kipling country of the Khyber Pass into India.

In a lecture last night in Constitution Hall, Thaw told members of the National Geographic Society that dark clouds of approaching war pursued the expedition across central Europe and the Balkans in the summer of 1939.

War was declared while the expedition was rolling through Syria, and, in the color motion pictures which illustrated his talk, Thaw showed the audience the American flags which were then painted on the roofs of the motor cavalcade to guard against possible attack by raiding planes.

Traveling in a 13-ton specially built trailer supported by three trucks and another car, the Thaws found German troops crowding roadsides in the Reich, while in Turkey and the Near East they witnessed and photographed the vast scale of modernization which has brought these countries up-to-date since the last war. Once, when the roads gave out, the Thaws took to a specially provided train to cross the Taurus Mountains, and a flooded river in Afghanistan forced a 1,000-mile detour in southern Asia.

Thaw showed and described native dances by a costumed troop in Bulgaria; Ankara, the gleaming capital of the new Turkey; a Royal Air Force outpost along the desert route to Baghdad; the tile-lacquered Great Mosque of Meshed; the Peacock Throne in Teheran, incrusted with millions of dollars worth of precious jewels; the gamut of races in Kabul, Afghanistan; a British outpost fort on the Indian border, and skillful artisans at work on ancient handicrafts in Peshawar, India. At last they arrived safely in Delhi, with all India before them.

Queen Elected Head of Civic Federation

Reserve Officer Named to Succeed Charles M. Thomas

Lieut. Col. Howard D. Queen, Officers Reserve Corps, was elected president of the Federation of Civic Associations last night at a meeting held in the board room at the District Building to succeed Charles M. Thomas, who declined the nomination.

The new federation head, who resides at 1810 California Street, is chief of the records section, division of insolvent national banks, of the Treasury Department. He is a charter member of the federation, which was organized 19 years ago.

Other officers elected included Mrs. Velma Williams, member of the Board of Education, and Dr. E. E. Harris, president of Lincoln Civic Association, vice presidents; Mrs. Ruby M. Kendrick, recording secretary; Miss Ursula Jackson, assistant recording secretary; Woolsey W. Hall, corresponding secretary; W. D. Nixon, treasurer; Rev. David Lynch, chaplain.

Fifteen of the 22 constituent civic associations, represented by 47 delegates, participated in the election, of which J. C. Payne served as judge. The federation took steps to organize junior civic associations throughout the city.

Committees on social service, health and legislation were directed to study laws which would make medical examinations necessary before marriage licenses were issued, and laws which would abolish common law marriages in the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Mary A. McNeill, former member of the Board of Education, was unanimously indorsed by the federation as successor to Felix Morley on the board of trustees of the Public Library.

The federation asked for a bridge across the Anacostia River at M street extended or at New York avenue extended, and directed its committees on legislation and public works to study the question of a tunnel under the Potomac River in the eastern section of the city.

Washington Highlands Group Seeks Bridge Over Anacostia

This is the fifty-fifth article in a series about citizens' associations in the District of Columbia and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

A bridge across the Anacostia River at South Capitol Street to connect its area directly with downtown Washington is the first objective this year of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association.

Its territory, often called the "last outpost" of the District, has more than doubled in population in the past three years. It is located at the southern tip of the District, 4 miles south of the Capitol and 2 miles due east of Alexandria.

The bridge, or a tunnel under the river, is the association's first consideration for several reasons. President Walter Nair said yesterday. "First, because of its necessity in line with national defense, in that it would connect the Army Air Base at Bolling Field with the Capital proper as well as the Naval Research Laboratory and the Naval Proving Grounds at Indianhead, Md.

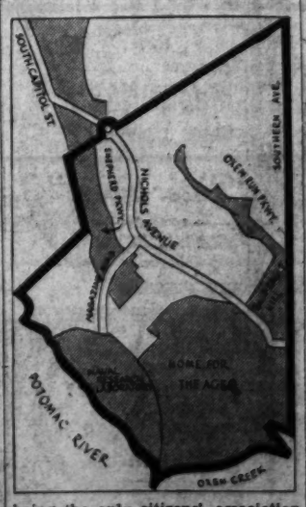
"And secondly, because of the tremendous growth of the Washington Highlands community recently," he added.

Other aims for this fall include a "more adequate" mail delivery service for the neighborhood and street improvements.

"We are going to strive to have a number of streets improved and surfaced and several streets necessary to the growth of our community opened and more property thus made available for building purposes," the president asserted.

Long-term objectives of the 14-year-old association, which have been pushed for the past several years, include a four-lane highway through the section to the District line giving residents an exit into Maryland which compares with other roads leading out of Washington, a school and playground for the sector, flood control, and suffrage for the District.

Members hold their meetings in various homes on the first Thursday of the month, Washington Highlands being the only citizens' association to use this system. These meetings in the past have been indirectly responsible for numerous street openings and paving projects, officers say.



An enthusiastic group of civic workers, members "are willing and ready to put forth great effort to push anything which would be an asset to the community in which we live," President Nair reported.

Officers, besides Nair, are John Juergens, first vice president; Walter Hilderbrand, second vice president; Betty Jane Nair, Nair's daughter, secretary, and Maury T. Warren, treasurer. Delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations are Nair and C. J. Wall; those to the Southeast Council, Nair and Warren.

Murdered Woman May Be Missing Parolee, Police Say

An autopsy yesterday of the body of an unidentified woman which was found Thursday in an isolated woods near Jessups, Md., indicated that she might have been poisoned or asphyxiate.

Henry L. Woolenwebber, of the State medical examiner's office at Baltimore, said there was no ascertainable cause of natural death, and a toxicologist would make a further examination.

Anne Arundel County police meanwhile investigated possibility the woman may have been a parolee from the Ohio State Penitentiary placed in the custody of a Laurel, Md., resident. The parolee disappeared from the Laurel home October 5, police said.

Sniper Suspect To Face Inquest In Three Slayings

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, declared last night that an inquest into three sniper slayings will be held probably the first of next week.

A 25-year-old former convict, held for a week in connection with the murders, will appear at the hearing, at which detectives will present evidence they believe links him to the mysterious after-dark killings of colored men.

Search for the .38-caliber murder pistol continued yesterday, though Inspector Thompson said "We don't need the gun."

"There is still work to be done before an inquest is set, but we have a strong case. We don't need the gun," he stated.

Thompson denied that there was a possibility of his men dragging the Potomac River for the weapon. He said they had no reason to believe the gun was in the river.

The suspect last night still maintained silence when investigators pumped him for information. His only reply to their questions was a surly: "O. K., prove it."

Last night, for the first time since the sniper shootings occurred, Capt. Walter Storm, of the Third Precinct, did not assign a special detail to watch for the killer.

Tolan Group To Probe D.C. Okie Problem

Hearings to Be Held On Plight of Migrant Workers Stranded Here

While Washington has no dust-storm stricken "Okies," it has destitute white-collar workers, industrial and domestic unemployed, who come hopefully to the National Capital looking for jobs, according to Chairman Tolan of the House Committee Investigating Interstate Migration of Destitute Citizens.

The committee, which traveled 10,000 miles and held hearings in all sections of the country will turn its attention to the District problem next Friday. The inquiry will extend into adjacent Maryland and Virginia.

A District Commissioner, public welfare and health officials, and spokesmen for social welfare organizations will testify, as will representatives of Gov. Price of Virginia and Gov. O'Conor of Maryland.

On following days, selected migrant workers who have become stranded in Washington or in the adjacent States will tell their stories, Tolan said.

"Estimates made indicate that there are more than 4,000,000 men, women, and children in this category throughout the country," he said, "and without question many of them are in the District and surrounding territory.

"Because of the importance of Washington as a national city in which many jobs have been added to the Government pay rolls in recent years, the Capital is believed to be the mecca of many persons from all sections of the country who have migrated here in the vain hope of finding employment.

"Many of these have run out of funds and become destitute and, since most of them are of the so-called 'white-collar' group, unsuited for outdoor labor, they have become something of a problem at times."

Tolan said the committee will submit its report to Congress early in January. While no recommendations have been agreed to, Tolan called attention to some of the foremost suggestions made during the hearings.

These include (1) uniform State settlement and residential laws, (2) integrated functioning of unemployment service, (3) extension of social-security benefits to workers on "commercial farms," (4) proper dissemination of information on available jobs, and (5) broadening of the Farm Security Administration's lending program for establishment of mobile camps.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Louis Potter, pianist; Millard Taylor, violinist, and Howard Mitchell, violoncellist, in Barker Hall. Program: Trio in B flat major K. V. 502 (Mozart), Trio in D major, Op. 70, No. 1 (Beethoven), Trio in B minor, Op. 76 (Turina).

Members and guests of the Friday Morning Music Club filled Barker Hall yesterday for the opening of the fifty-fifth season. No pomp or ceremony marked an occasion which would have justified jubilance. But this absence of ostentation is characteristic of an organization which has carried on its work quietly, allowing achievements to speak for themselves. One circumstance that might have been construed as an indirect reference to the past was the presence of Hans Kindler, who appeared as one of the club's guests artists 25 years ago. This time Dr. Kindler came to introduce a new chamber music trio in which two of his National Symphony Orchestra musicians — Concertmaster Millard Taylor and Howard Mitchell, first violoncellist — are associated with Louis Potter, versatile pianist, organist and choral conductor.

BROWN

Technical and interpretational qualities disclosed by the associates were of an excellent order. Both in the artistic consentience of their readings and in the smoothness and tonal balance of the performance, the musicians played as though they had long been accustomed to one another's idiosyncrasies. Their agreement in matters of style was also evidenced in their treatment of compositions disparate in manner and content. They began with the pellucid B flat major trio by Mozart and conserved faithfully its characteristic simplicity and clarity.

Their reading of Beethoven's "Ghost" trio in D major was particularly admirable for insight and finesse. Demanding much more than digital facility, this work tests musicianship as a means of spiritual communication. Compact in form and crammed with ideas, it cannot be played superficially without losing its essence. The bright and vigorously incisive allegro is built with themes so noble in their range as to stimulate the imagination of the listener and enlarge the vision of the infinite. The short and mysterious largo is a poem without parallel in Beethoven's output; his notebooks indicate that he had in mind the witches' scene in "Macbeth." It is filled with a sense of aprehension approaching terror.

The last item on the program was Joaquin Turina's B minor trio, contemporary music by a Spanish composer who is too little known in this country. On the same creative plane as Falla and Albeniz, he has for some reason not enjoyed their popular vogue, though his style is equally attractive. In his compositions are united a Gallic precision and neatness of technique and an authentic Iberian flavor. The B minor trio exemplifies these elements to a remarkable degree; the melodic beauty of the theme is sustained over variant and subtle rhythms with frequent changes of tempo, and the harmonic texture has a lovely sheen.

Miss Skinner Introduces 'Old English Garden;' A Few Vagrant Afterthoughts on 'Bitter Sweet;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

ALTHOUGH THERE IS NO IMMEDIATE INFORMATION concerning the likelihood of her appearing here this season, it is nevertheless of interest that the indefatigable Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner continues to build an imposing repertoire of her incomparably personalized una-dramas. This week in San Francisco she introduced "Old English Garden," having to do with the personal courage and fortitude that is daily shown by the British people in the face of continuous bombing attacks. This is one of three new sketches Miss Skinner has written since her current tour began in Albany on October 3—none of which has been seen in Washington.

BELL

Upon the termination of her 1940 concert contracts in Wheeling, W. Va., on December 13, Miss Skinner is expected to reach a decision as to which of two plays will serve as a stage vehicle for her after the Christmas holidays. The two under consideration are Warren Munsell, jr.'s, "By Any Other Name" and Thomas Job's "Not to the Swift." Whatever her choice, Miss Skinner is in the enviable—or unenviable, according to the point of view—position of having to cancel $28,000 in January, February and March concert engagements to appear in either. Miss Skinner hasn't heard about the unemployment problem.

Visiting the actress in San Francisco this week is her 81-year-young father, Otis Skinner, dean of the American stage, who is expected to proceed to Honolulu next week by China Clipper. Unless I have my forgetter on straight, Mr. Skinner's last appearance on a local stage was at the National with Maude Adams in "The Merchant of Venice," the revival that brought her briefly out of retirement seasons ago. We could do with further visits from both father and daughter.

A late performance, an early deadline and an all-around hectic "holiday" cheated yesterday's review of "Bitter Sweet." at Loew's Capitol—which in a moment of flurry we gratuitously moved to the Palace in Thursday night's early editions. We had intended to go a little further into the turbulent goings-on at Schlick's Cafe, Vienna's "hottest" night spot, and say something about the short but suave performance of Ian Hunter, the fairy-godfather of the piece, and George Sanders' flawless portrayal of the operetta's "dirty dog." Some mention should have been made, too, of Jeanette MacDonald's irresistible smile and her flashing teeth that Technicolor makes look like matched pearls. Of course, it is too late now.

Since Washington is the only gay world capital remaining on the face of the globe—or almost—it is not impossible that a "Bitter Bitter," as it might just as well have been called, might be in the course of making right here in our own nocturnal-matutinal haunts, if there were only a Noel Coward around to renovate it, idealize it and trick it out with inflammatory tunes. Remind me to ask Mary Harris, The Post's Baedeker of the night clubs, about this.

John Duffus, manager of the Arlington Theater, Arlington, Va., directs our wandering attention to the fact that on Saturday, November 30, his screen will be galvanized by that hard-fighting, two-fisted, two-gun hero of this journal's comic pages, "King of the Royal Mounted." This nerve-prodder will be shown in serial form for 12 consecutive Saturdays. Post fans already know what a jolt for the jaded this will be.

We agree with Miss Vera Mankinen's postaged suggestion that the commentator whose voice was heard describing the disaster sequences in "The Flag of Humanity," the Clara Barton film recently shown at the Earle, was a little screwy. He referred unmistakably to the "holocaust of the Johnstown flood." Probably thought it was a flood of fire-water!

So we asked the Warner high command point blank if it was going to break down and hold "The Letter" a second week at the Earle, despite recent protestations to the contrary. Emphatically not. That one-week policy will stick and "The Letter" will come off next Wednesday night, regardless of held-out crowds and high box-office.

When Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous children's story, "The Secret Garden," is presented at the National this morning by Clara Tree Major's Children's Theater of New York, Dickon, the Yorkshire lad of "thirteen goin' on fourteen," one of the quaintest and most lovable characters in juvenile literature, will step onto the stage directly from the pages of the book. Dickon is able to imitate the calls of all the birds and knows every inch of the English moors, where the action of the play is laid. The youngsters should love that—the bird-calls, I mean.

Donald Sawyer, of New York, internationally famous dancer, will conduct a class composed of Washington dance instructors at the Hargrove studios on Connecticut Avenue tonight. He will feature the "Boogie Woogie," newest manifestation of swing. Among the guests will be St. Clair, of St. Clair and Day, now at the Shoreham. Mr. Sawyer has given command performances before practically all of Europe's crowned heads and is well known as a teacher of royalty, New York debutantes and Hollywood's screen stars. Wonder what he could do about our extra left foot?

Once a Year Would Seem To Be Plenty

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Christmas as a Grade-1 A supercolossal production, with an all-star cast and enough sun arcs to give the population klieg eyes, arrived in Hollywood a month ahead of time.

Rudy Vallee and Dorothy Lamour rode down Hollywood Boulevard in a float that cost $25,000. For a trumpeter to herald the joyous day there were ten brass bands, all members of the A. F. of L. and all tootling "Jingle Bells."

Drum majorettes, mostly blonde and mostly wearing as little as the climate and the law allowed, goaded the musicians into giving their all. Each lamppost was covered with a tin Christmas tree; every street corner had an incandescent star of Bethlehem.

Jack Benny rode in an automobile of ancient but well-known make, while for angels to sing there was practically every soprano that ever worked for the Columbia and the National Broadcasting Cos. Even the pickets in front of the latter's headquarters were in the proper spirit. The company was having janitor trouble, so the union protesters were carrying "unfair" signs, illuminated with neon tubing. (They had electric batteries in their hip pockets.)

A Voice of Fine Timber

Charlie McCarthy, on the knee of Edgar Bergen, shouted yuletide quips from his automobile. Leo Carillo rode a star-spangled horse. So did Roy Rogers and Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz. John Barrymore was on hand; his Elaine wasn't. Most of the marching clubs of southern California, complete with their own majorettes, pranced down the car tracks.

There also was a Santa Claus. He drove a plaster reindeer which stood in front of his Arctic castle, mounted on a 10-ton truck. As this equipage rolled slowly down the boulevard, a kind of chimney arrangement behind Mr. Claus puffed genuine, nonmeltable snowflakes upon the cheering shirt-sleeved, slacks-wearing citizens. These numbered 300,000 for the opening night's performance, the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce announced. The spectacle will continue under the semitropical moon nightly until December 25. That's only the beginning.

Christmas presents, as advertised by the smart stores, continued as expensive as they were de luxe. Two especially struck our eye. One was a merry-go-round, complete with calliope, for $375, plus sales tax. The other was a dinner ring. Price, $40,000. Wowie!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 22.

I SAW the Jolson show, "Hold on to Your Hats, Boys," and enjoyed it immensely. Eddie Davis, author of the show, met Phil Baker, who suggested that perhaps Davis might have a few gags which could be added to the new show in which Baker will be starred. "We really don't need very much," Baker stated. "Just a few corny gags. Not many. Just a few things from corn" . . . "I'll do it if you'll give me one thing from corn," replied Davis, "and by corn—I mean the Corn Exchange Bank."

LYONS

CHARLIE CHAPLIN has been swamped with appeals to lend his name to causes during his visit to New York. He has turned down all of them . . . "When the time comes that I think a cause really is worth while," he tells them, "then, as in 'The Great Dictator,' I'll make a movie out of it."

GEORGE JESSEL, whose cross-country vaudeville tour brings him to Brooklyn, sent letters to L. B. Mayer, Darryl Zanuck, Harry Warner and all the other heads of Hollywood studios this week. In those letters he inclosed reviews of his shows, with the message: "Last week, in Pittsburgh, I earned $4,300. The week before, in Milwaukee, I made $3,600. For the last 15 years I have been making no less than $100,000 a year in show business. What do I do? Here's what I do: When your pictures come off, then I entertain the audience. Now tell me—what do I have to do to make a buck in Hollywood?"

FRANCES ASHMORE is the daughter of the superintendent at 200 West Fifty-ninth Street. Arthur Treacher, the screen butler now in "Panama Hattie," has been visiting that building to see his dentist, Dr. Nat Lief . . . Frances asked Dr. Lief to get her an autographed photo of Treacher. But because Treacher went to Maryland last week for the Ethel Merman wedding, the show's press agent signed Treacher's name to his photo, realizing that Frances Ashmore wouldn't know the difference . . . Tuesday the actor again visited his dentist, and there he was introduced to Frances' father. It was a reunion, for they recognized each other as having fought in the same regiment during the last war. Mr. Ashmore asked for an autographed photo—and Dr. Lief then revealed the press agent's signature upon the photo given to Frances . . . "Oh, that's all right," was Treacher's solution to her father. "She'll never know. Just get me that photo she has and I'll trace the signature for yours."

ALTHOUGH EVERY technical preparation has been completed for filming the adaptation of "Tobacco Road," Twentieth Century-Fox still doesn't own full and undisputable rights to that play—and won't start shooting the picture until additional signatures are secured for the contract of sale . . . Erskine Caldwell, who wrote the book, and Jack Kirkland, who wrote the dramatization, have signed the contract. The producers of the play signed it. The publishers of the book signed it. But because Kirkland once permitted the Gaites Theater in London to do "Tobacco Road" there—a production which netted Kirkland 30 shillings in royalties— the Twentieth Century-Fox officials are awaiting the signatures of the British producers.

EDWARD J. NOBLE, who resigned as Undersecretary of Commerce in the expectancy of getting the Republican nomination for United States Senator in Connecticut, is preparing to continue his political career by the purchase of a New York radio station . . . "Singapore Sadie's," a new night club in Hollywood, Florida, will offer its patrons a realistic setting—with Chinese laundrymen on the premises to press the shirts and underwear of all local newspaper men free of charge . . . When Johnnie Weissmuller was suggested for a role in a legitimate play here, the producer expressed doubts as to Weissmuller's ability to act. "Of course, Johnnie can act," he was assured, "any time he's given a tree to swing from."

In Hollywood

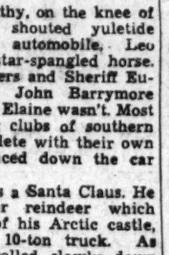
Hollywood, Nov. 22.

With "Fantasia" smashing dvance sale records in New York, Walt Disney is turning more attention to his latest experiment, "The Reluctant Dragon," which is to be his first feature-length combination of cartoon and living actors. It's so new that even Bob Benchley, who worked four weeks on it, says he doesn't know what it's all about yet. But he trusts Walt.



HOPPER

Bob plays that retiring "Milquetoast" character as he wanders through the new Disney plant trying to find Walt to sell him on a new idea—and getting sidetracked so that, by the time he finds Disney, both he and the audience have been on a tour of the whole place, seeing all the mysterious phases of that fabulous business. You'll finally find out whether they use puppets or just set crazy men loose with colored crayons to make those two-reel laugh-makers with Mickey and Donald and Pluto, etc.

It all started with Walt and Benchley conferring on a short Bob was going to narrate called "How to Ride a Horse." When those two fertile minds went into high gear in a thing we call a conference, the result was so funny they decided to make an educational tour through the Disney studios with Frances Gifford, lovely young wife of James Dunn, escorting mixed-up Benchley through the various phases of a laugh factory.

In the first place, there are only four professional actors in it. The rest are Disney employees, and when you see them at work, it will be the real thing. Walt says that when they took shots of the inking and painting departments, he uncovered some terrific acting talent in the young gals who, for years, have only been coloring Pluto, Mickey, and Clara Cluck.

There's no lack of romance, either. The day I was there I got a child's-eye view of the budding love between Jane Withers and Buddy Pepper, the 17-year-old discovery from "Meet the People," who plays a Disney office boy. Jane, who had come to visit Buddy on her day off, confided that she was so happy because Buddy has grown a whole inch since starting the picture.

Frances Gifford is running over like a brook with happiness over hubby Jimmy Dun's success in "Panama Hattie."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Detroit, Nov. 22 (INS).—If Cecil B. DeMille is successful in his present negotiations to bring John Masefield, poet laureate of England, to Hollywood, it will be one of the great events of movietown history. No writer of contemporary times occupies a higher place than the great poet whose tales and sagas of the sea are immortal to England. He is an extraordinary personality in addition to his work. Years ago the great Masefield visited America. That was long before fame touched him and he was a wandering seaman picking up odd jobs he could get—even such menial tasks as washing floors in saloons. Also he was a great friend of O. Henry's.

LOUELLA PARSONS

C. B. is inviting him to come to Hollywood to be associated with him in filming the sea opus "Reap the Wild Wind," for Paramount. Perhaps in other times the poet laureate of England might not consider such an offer. But England is now anxious to send her representative men to America and this is one of the important reasons Mr. Masefield may accept.

Brenda Joyce will no more than get her bags unpacked when she returns to Hollywood than she's due at Twentieth Century-Fox for her first starring picture, "Private Nurse." I'd say Brenda earned this honor because no one in our troupe has made more friends than little Brenda. She was so shy and frightened of crowds when we started—but now she's enjoying every bit of the excitement and signs autograph books by the hundreds. Her screen beau in "Private Nurse" will be Cesar Romero. Twentieth bought this story some time ago and they're bringing it up to date, inserting a patriotic angle when the "Private Nurse" goes to an Army camp.

Merle Oberon and Alexander Korda had a shocking experience when they asked to see the sensational short feature, "London Can Take It." If you've seen this heart-breaking film of bombed London, you can realize how shocking it is to English people. But Alex and Merle were completely unnerved when their former London townhouse was flashed in the background and shown to be completely destroyed with windows shattered and the roof demolished. They knew the house had been hit—but not until they saw it with their own eyes did they realize to what extent.

Dennis O'Keefe becomes a permanent fixture on the Hal Roach lot. The minute he finishes "Topper Returns," with Carole Landis, he goes into another for Hal, "Broadway Limited." They're both Cary Grant type roles and should boost Dennis' movie stock. Patsy Kelly will play a femme press agent. Leonid Kinsky and Zasu Pitts are in the cast, and Victor McLaglen, who has been off the screen a long time, also gets a role and probably top billing.

Snapshots of Hollywood and Detroit collected at random: Florence Rice, who hasn't been seen much since her divorce, stepping out to the Bar of Music of Allan Lane; Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers plan a fourth honeymoon to South America right after the first of the year; it was almost serious when a flick from a cigarette set fire to a wig Laurence Olivier wears in "Lady Hamilton"; "Tin Pan Alley" was previewed here in Detroit and everybody liked it very much; according to word from Chicago T. Netcher's latest heart throb is Bernice Parkes, now in "Meet the People." Her father owns the Ruby Foo Chain of Chinese Restaurants.

Bill Robinson, popular Negro actor and dancer, is opening in an all-Negro revue in one of the big Chicago cafes; Harry Richman has financed the Riviera Night Club in Florida in association with Ben Marden; Spencer Tracy was at the airport bright and early to greet Mrs. T. who returned from New York.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow from Cleveland!

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Lest their pets be overlooked in the distribution of All-American honors, the mimeograph machines of college press agents are whirling furiously at this stage of the season. The desks of football writers are being flooded by the superlatives hurled in behalf of the native sons.

POVICH

The All-American maker of All-Americans is Duke University's Mr. Ted Mann, who dispenses with all subtlety in his drum-beating for Duke's stars. Mr. Mann has now authored a flaming brochure describing his latest candidate and states, bluntly, "Duke University recommends for your All-American consideration: Anthony Joseph Ruffa, tackle."

We may have been a bit vague about the accomplishments of Duke's Mr. Ruffa, but it is obvious that he is in good hands. Ted Mann's publicity office at Duke has been something of an All-American factory in recent years. Mann scored with Fred Crawford, Duke's 1933 tackle; with Ace Parker, Duke's 1936 halfback; Dan Hill, Duke's 1938 center, and Eric Tipton, Duke's halfback of the same year. He touted them all into All-Americanism.

Thus we were saying Anthony Joseph Ruffa is in good hands, because Ted Mann has batted a cool .625 in the eight years since he first started touting Duke All-Americans. There has been no quarrel, incidentially, with the ability of any of Mann's selectees. He has never had to apologize for his choices.

It seems that his latest candidate, Tackle Ruffa, gravitated to Duke from the anthracite district of Pennsylvania, probably by the strangest coincidence. Of late, No'th Ca'lina educations seem to have a fatal attraction for the boys from the Pennsylvania anthracite fields where a goodly share of the world's best football players are spawned.

"This boy has been a stand-out for three years," says Mann of the 204-pound tackle who stands a mere 5 feet 9 inches. "He has been a star on Duke teams which in three years have lost only four games—one to Southern California in the Rose Bowl, 7-3; one to Pitt, 14-13; one to Tennessee, 13-0, and one to North Carolina, 6-3."

He'll have you know also that Ruffa's accomplishments do not end with the smashing game he plays at tackle. Because he was the young man who dropped into the backfield and kicked the field goal that led Southern California in the Rose Bowl until the last minute of play.

"During his three years of play, Ruffa has scored a total of 40 points by kicking alone!" exclaims Mann. Last year he kicked eight extra points and a field goal and so far this season he has booted three field goals and nine extra points. Against Pitt, in 1939, he went ostensibly for a field goal and ended up by throwing a pass to George McAfee for a touchdown!"

That almost satisfies us. There's only one thing more we'd like to know. Can the young man cook?

Ray Flaherty, the taciturn coach of the Redskins who judges good football players only by the best and seldom uses a superlative, stunned this department with a statement the other day.

He pointed to a tall, handsomely-built Redskin who was wearing a No. 18 jersey and said, without being asked:

"That boy will be the best center in the professional league next season. He may be the best right now, but he can't miss next year."

The object of Flaherty's high praise was young Bob Titchenal, who without fanfare moved into the No. 1 center job of the Redskins after the first game of the season and has towered over all opponents.

"I'd say Sammy Baugh, Dick Todd and Bob Titchenal are the three best rookies we've picked up since we came into Washington four years ago," said Flaherty. "And any time you pick up a great center, you're lucky. Titchenal wasn't even in the draft. Nobody even made a bid for him. Keith Berlim, the blocking back we had last year told me about Titchenal. Berlim played with him at San Jose State and said Titchenal was the greatest center he ever saw either in college or pro football."

The man Titchenal will succeed if he does, indeed, become the league's stand-out center next season will be the Giants' Mel Hein. But Flaherty pointed out, "Hein couldn't make the regular team in his first year as a pro. Titchenal is a better center now than Hein was as a first-year man."

Redskin fans have not been unaware of the sensational play of Titchenal, particularly on defense where he has been spectacular both at breaking up passes and stopping running plays. In the game with the Bears, the fans' fondness for Titchenal was strikingly illustrated. When the public address announcer credited a tackle in the open field to Willie Wilkin, the crowd emitted a terrific boo. They saw Titchenal make that particular tackle and they simply resented the announcer's mistake.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 22.—If you still doubt that college football is big business, and a giddy gamble, then consider the case of Fordham. The best team Jim Crowley ever coached, and that takes in some crack outfits, lost by three points to a St. Mary's team which it probably could lick by three touchdowns if it played it today. Other than that the Rams have been unbeaten, and figure to stay that way, because the only thing left is N. Y. U.

CONSIDINE

Those three points, by which Fordham lost to the Gaels, will cost Fordham about $40,000 each. It seemed so certain that the Rams would go undefeated this year, what with its usual fine line and a quartet of really fine backs, that Sugar Bowl authorities tried to sign them for the post season game after they beat Tulane and Pitt in the second and third games of the season. Jack Coffey, Fordham's graduate manager of athletics, turned down the offer at that time. If he hadn't, it might have been binding to this day.

Anway, the heavily overconfident Rams rammed over an early touchdown on St. Mary's but let the Gaels up, and never could catch them after Andy Marefos, the Mustachioed man-mauler from Moraga, got hot. Bloocy went the Sugar Bowl, worth between $70,000 and $75,000 to each contesting team. And ditto went the Fordham customers.

One Fordham official, looking at the bare chairs in the Polo Grounds on Saturday, while Fordham was walloping an Arkansas team that had licked Mississippi and heavily out statisticked Texas A and M, estimated that that one narrow loss to St. Mary's had taken at least $50,000 off the subsequent Fordham "gates." The Rams were not among the ten teams sounded out by the Sugar Bowl people early this week.

With the Fordham-St. Mary's tragedy in mind, as well as the Iowa-Notre Dame and Dartmouth-Cornell upsets, it is interesting (let's hope) to see what the last unbeaten clubs are doing tomorrow. Minnesota plays a Wisconsin team that has had such in and out days as beating Purdue and Indiana and losing to Columbia. Boston College, tackles Auburn, which gave Tulane about the same pasting B. C. did. Tennessee collides with a Kentucky team that is bound to be as hopped up as a hot jumping bean. Texas A. and M. and Stanford have off days. Michigan and Georgetown, beaten by single points, play Ohio State and George Washington.

Ace Parker and Mel Hein, who will be honored with "days" in their honor these next two Sundays, owe their present estates to a kidnaping and a case of tampering with the United States mails.

Parker was first unearthed in his native Portsmouth, Va., by a scout for Virginia Poly. They got him on the V. P. I. campus, had his job picked out for him, had his dormitory cell dusted out, and where all set to do the customary job of exploiting him when, suddenly, he disappeared. No one remembered seeing him go. It was about the cleanest job of shanghaiing in football history, and a lot of that goes on.

V. P. I.'s first clue to Parker's whereabouts came when he showed up on the roster of the Duke frosh. With a great Duke team to play for, he became a super star in college, whereas he might have been

Their drooping spirits having been revived by reports that a post-season game is likely in case of decisive victory, Georgetown's huge Hoyas are expected to shoot the works against George Washington this afternoon at Griffith Stadium as the local arch-rivals close their regular campaigns. The opening kick-off is scheduled for 2 o'clock.

Before an expected crowd of 20,000 Georgetown will be out to compensate for last week's loss to Boston College by an overwhelming triumph over an in-and-out George Washington eleven which will enter the game on the short end of 3-1 odds.

No one, not even G. W. Coach Bill Reinhart anticipates anything but a Georgetown victory if the Hoyas are steamed up for this one, and judging from statements by Hilltop players they are determined to win by as great a score as possible.

Fullback Jim Castiglia and Guard Augie Lio, two of the 18 Georgetown seniors who will be closing their college careers today, last night forecast victory by at least four touchdowns. "Then on to the Orange Bowl!" they cried.

Negotiations Carried On

Meantime H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of Georgetown athletics, admitted that negotiations had been opened with Santa Clara for a post-season game on Christmas Day at Palo Alto, California for benefit of the British War Relief Fund.

"I have been approached regarding the possibility of such a game," Murphy announced, "and we are sufficiently interested to ask that a proposition be made us. If the proposition is satisfactory to Georgetown authorities who will have the final say from our end, the game may materialize.

Reports from the Coast say that this game, promoted by Alan Mobray, well-known cinemactor, would be expected to draw 75,000 persons and a gate of about $125,000. Santa Clara has been beaten only once, by one point by Rose Bowl-bound Stanford.

So with a possible post-season game in the Orange Bowl or in California dangling as an incentive, there will be no reason for Georgetown to pull its punches today.

As a matter of fact, Georgetown has cooked up a mess of new strategy and plays for George Washington—more of the razzle-dazzle spread formation stuff that baffled Boston College. The new plays are expected to again bring Quarterback Joe McFadden into view as a shifty ball carrier, a talent that few knew he possessed until this season. Against Syracuse and again in the Boston College game, McFadden

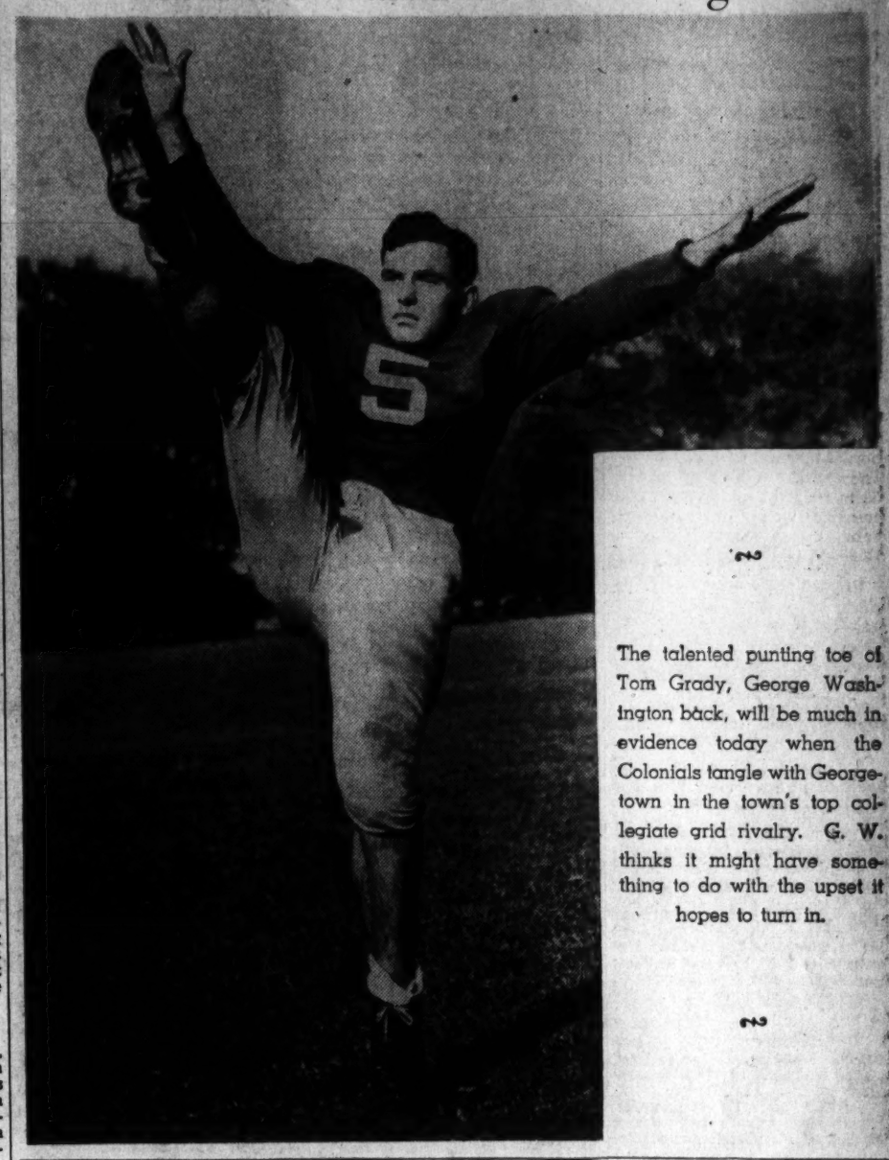
Colonial Has a Kick Coming



The talented punting toe of Tom Grady, George Washington back, will be much in evidence today when the Colonials tangle with Georgetown in the town's top collegiate grid rivalry. G. W. thinks it might have something to do with the upset it hopes to turn in.

Lew Jenkins Stops Lello In 2d Round

11,000 See Lightweight Champion Keep Title On Technical Knockout

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 22.—Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins of Texas turned the tables on Pete Lello, of Gary, Ind., tonight and retained his title by knocking out the former steel worker at 2:37 of the second round before 11,000 fans at Madison Square Garden.

The skinny, hollow-cheeked Texan had Lillo on the floor for the fourth time when Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the massacre and awarded Jenkins the victory on a technical knockout. All of the knockdowns had occurred in the second round of this scheduled 15-round bout.

Lello, who had knocked out Jenkins in their last meeting at Chicago in 1939, hit the deck for the first time shortly after the second session started. Jenkins, one of the deadliest punchers in the ring, landed a straight right to the chin that spun the muffin-faced challenger sideways to the canvas.

Takes Count of Nine

Badly hurt by this blow, Lello took the count of nine. Jenkins rushed at him before he was completely up, but Referee Donovan shoved the charging champion back momentarily. Then Jenkins came in again. This time he smashed the groggy challenger with a left hook to the chin that put him down for another nine count. Lello got to one knee and with one hand on the ropes took the count rose to his feet, and was driven into Jenkins' corner by a barrage of blows to the head. A hard right to the chin put him down for a third count of nine. He rose helplessly and was floored in the same corner. Donovan then stopped the bout, lifting the battered and bleeding challenger from the floor and helping his seconds place him on the stool in his corner.

This was Jenkins' first defense of the 135-pound crown which he had wrested from Lou Ambers on May 10, and he looked much better than in either of his later nontitle appearances when he was knocked out by Henry Armstrong and won a cloze decision over Bob Montgomery, Philadelphia welterweight.

To Meet Ramey

The Sweetwater swatter announced that he would meet Wesley Ramey, of Grand Rapids, Mich., in a nontitle bout at Dallas, Tex., on December 16.

Jenkins boxed better than in any previous New York show in the first round, although Lello apparently had a slight advantage. The Texan was punching the challenger savagely at the close of that session.

Jenkins registered this triumph without the assisance of Manager Hymie Caplin, who was taken into custody today by police in connection with a ring of gamblers who allegedly fleeced suckers out of $4,000,000.

Lello had a weight advantage of 2¾ pounds, scaling 134¼ to the champion's 131¾.

In the dressing room, Lello said he remembered going down the first time, but he was hit so hard that when he rose he didn't remember anything after that." He said it was a terrible disappointment to "blow this title shot" after waiting so long for it.

Jenkins expressed surprise at his easy victory over the challenger. He said "Lello can't take a punch anymore and is worse than he was two years ago."

The crowd was estimated unofficially at between 10,000 and 11,000 and the gross gate at $25,000.

Frankie Albano, 164¼, Long Island, won a four-round decision over Frank Tarantelli, 159¾, Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Sonnie Simon, 133¾, Bronx, drew with Sammy Venti, 130, New York.

Leo Rodak, 134½, Chicago, won an eight-round decision over young Julie Kogon, 134½, New Haven, Conn.

Frank Filchock To Miss Giants' Game in N. Y.

Passing Star's Condition Worse; 10,000 Fans From D. C. to Make Trip

The condition of Frank Filchock, in Emergency Hospital with an inflamed left side, took a sudden turn for the worse yesterday, and he will be unable to make the trip with the Redskins to New York for the game with the Giants.

Instead, the forward passing artist whose pass to Dick Todd last Sunday defeated the Chicago Bears, 7-3, will be left here in the hospital under close treatment.

Coach Ray Flaherty had hoped that Filchock would be able to play against New York, but slowness of the injury to heal put a check to such plans.

With Filchock out, the Redskins' high-powered passing attack will suffer a severe blow, and Sam Baugh will have to carry the load in that department in New York.

Work on Running Game

Filchock's absence means that Flaherty's second-period backfield will be without a passing threat. Baugh has been the first and third-period backfield's pitcher, while Frank has been taking over in the second and fourth.

Faced with such an eventuality, however, Flaherty has been working on the Redskins' running game all week and will do more ground work against the Giants than in any game so far this season.

Andy Farkas, last year's leading touchdown maker in the National Football League, will return to action tomorrow. Out all season recovering from a knee operation, Andy is expected to see only a small quantity of action in New York, however.

The Redskins are in position to definitely tie up the Eastern Division championship by defeating, or even tying, the Giants tomorrow.

Remembering last December's 9-7 defeat in New York when Bo Russell's field goal was called no good, local followers of the Redskins again will make a mass onslaught on the Polo Grounds.

10,000 May Make Trip

General Manager Jack Espey reported yesterday that at noon, 7,500 tickets had been sold to Washington fans and he predicted a crowd of 10,000 would make the trip.

Ticket specuators made an attempt to buy up a bloc of tickets at the local offices, Espey said, but were warned away by the police. Espey said that the entire upper tier of the Polo Grounds, except for the tickets which were sent down from New York to the Redskin office, is sold out.

A crowd of 50,000 may witness the Giant's struggle to throw a hitch in the Redskins' Eastern title march. If the Giants beat the Skins and Philadelphia repeats the following Sunday here, the Indians may have to meet Brooklyn in a play-off for the championship.

The Dodgers, who meet the Chicago Cardinals tomorrow, must win this game and their final one with the Giants, however, to even tie the Redskins.

Show Horses Sell For $32,000 Total

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP)—Eighty-one show horses, including many champions and blue ribbon winners, brought about $32,000 today at the first sessions of the annual two-day fall auction conducted at the International Amphitheater at the stockyards by Harry McNair, dealer and auctioneer.

Chief Counsel, a 3-year-old gelding saddle and harness horse owned by W. Walter Martin, of Spring Lake, N. J., brought the top price of $1,500, paid by George Mahoney, of Baltimore.

Many of the 210 prize winners offered for sale from 11 States will be exhibited at the International Horse Show held in conjunction with the forty-first annual international livestock exposition at the stockyards beginning November 30.

The remaining 129 animals to be auctioned tomorrow.

LaSalle High Closes With a 13-0 Victory

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 22.—La Salle High School Explorers closed its football season in a night game at Fort Hill Stadium with a 13-0 win over Romney Deaf School before 1,000 fans. La Salle's season record is six wins one loss and three scoreless deadlocks. The West Virginia State school crew had been undefeated up to this time. Cavanaugh and Minke scored following long drives.

La Salle defeated Allegany in a city scholastic championship game, but lost to Fort Hill High.

Cornell-Penn Game Tops Eastern Card

Big Red Hopes to Regain Some of Lost Prestige; Badgers Block Gophers' Path To Perfect Season; Vols Battle Kentucky

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 22.—Defeated and deflated in the famous "recount" of last week-end, Cornell's slick football team has its final chance tomorrow to regain prestige as a national power in its game with Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

Because of the great publicity attending the mix-up at Hanover, from which Dartmouth finally emerged the 3 to 0 victor 48 hours after the closing gun, the affair at Franklin Field probably will command wider interest than such standbys as Ohio State-Michigan, Yale-Harvard, Minnesota-Wisconsin, Notre Dame-Northwestern and Tennessee-Kentucky.

The Big Red, its long string of victories finally broken, will have to beat Penn decisively to win back the acclaim it enjoyed up to the Dartmouth fiasco and to gain final standing among the country's four or five "great" teams. That will be no easy job, for Penn has lost only to Michigan and showed tremendous power in overrunning Army, 48 to 0, last week.

Minnesota on Spot

Of the few remaining unbeaten and untied "big" teams, Minnesota finds itself in the most trying spot in its tussle with Wisconsin on the latter's field. By winning this one the mighty Gophers can round out a record of eight straight victories in gaining the Western Conference championship. But Wisconsin has won its last three conference battles

Miami Eleven Beaten, 7-2, By Gamecocks

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Nov. 22.—South Carolina's Gamecocks broke loose with an explosive 57-yard touchdown drive in the first quarter and staved off several desperate Miami surges tonight to defeat the Hurricanes, 7 to 2, before 11,104 spectators.

Al Grygo, South Carolina halfback, sparked the winning drive and pounded over from the 1-yard line for the touchdown. DeWitt Arrowsmith kicked the extra point.

Miami collected its 2 points early in the second immediately after failing to cash in on a touchdown opportunity. The Hurricanes, with Russell Coates leading the way, moved 38 yards, but South Carolina took the ball on its 2. Arrowsmith grounded the ball in the end zone for a safety.

Cornell, Penn Game to Draw 78,205 Fans

Ithacans to 'Shoot Works' in Defense of Ivy League Crown

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—Franklin Field's largest crowd in a decade and a record crowd for this rivalry will be packed into the University of Pennsylvania's big double-decker stadium tomorrow when Penn battles Cornell for the Eastern Ivy League football championship.

All seats—78,205 of them—were sold ten days ago, with Cornell alone accounting for 18,500.

For 18 of the 22 Cornell first and second stringers, this will be their farewell appearance. With the added incentive of making up for last week's much-publicized upset by, Dartmouth, the Ithacans are expected to "shoot the works" from the starting whistle to retain their Ivy League crown.

Penn, beaten only by Michigan and tied surprisingly by Harvard, never has operated as a unit but will field a starting backfield that packs a double-barreled offensive threat in Halbacks Francis Reagan and Paul Wexler. Both can pass and run, and they are fast enough to be breakaway threats on pass interceptions.

With a weather forecast of cloudy and colder, the teams should have a dry field. This favors Cornell, which has banked heavily on its aerial game, featuring Hal McCullough and "Pop" Scholl.

6 Million Fans Interested in Texas' Masonic Home Club

By the Associated Press

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 22.—Texas' most colorful football team has a following of 6,000,000 fans and one of the outstanding records of schoolboy history, yet it never has won a State championship.

In nine years Masonic Home has won 71 games, lost 15 and tied 5, scoring 1,628 points to 484 for the opposition. There are but 73 boys in the school.

Yesterday, they won their sixth district championship, remaining undefeated and untied.

Once they battled to a scoreless tie in the State finals only to lose on the penetration rule. Often they have been in the semifinals and quarter-finals, and yet that State title eludes them.

But they remain the No. 1 football attraction of Texas. If they win their coach, H. N. Russell, is flooded with telephone calls and telegrams from all over the State. If they lose, it's the same.

They're even cheered by the followers of a team that takes a beating from them.

This year in their march to the district title and another chance at the State crown, the Masons have played before close to 87,000 fans despite miserable weather conditions for several of their games.

Yesterday they had 19,000 in the stands. The Masons usually weigh about 20 pounds to the man less than the opposition. But this year the team averages about 158 pounds to the man and has two capable substitutes.

For that reason, the fans think Masonic Home may get that coveted State title.

D. C. Minnesota Society Host to Rivals Today

The weekly get-togethers of Minnesota State Society members with alumni of Minnesota University's gridiron opponents will be concluded today when Wisconsin football boosters are guests at 2400 Sixteenth Street. A broadcast of the game at Madison, Wis., will headline the program, beginning at 2:45 p. m. A dance will be held at the same site at 9:30.

Cavaliers Close Season in 45th Clash With N. C. U. Today

12,000 to See Dudley Face Jim Lalanne

Tarheels Will Try For Eighth Victory; Elevens in Excellent Shape for Rivalry

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 22.—The Old Dominion's "never-a-dull-moment" football season closes here tomorrow when the Universities of Virginia and North Carolina renew their celebrated rivalry for the forty-fifth time.

A crowd of about 12,000 is expected to assemble in Scott Stadium for the 2 o'clock kickoff, then watch Virginia's Bill Dudley and Carolina's Jim Lalanne match strokes in what looms as the most brilliant offensive display seen here this year.

The powerful Tarheels, fresh from last week's victory over Duke, are favored to increase their consecutive string of triumphs to eight in the historic series, but they will have to settle it with a determined band of Cavaliers.

D. C. Player to Start

With the exception of one replacement in each line-up, both teams are slated to appear in their usual starting order. Coach Frank Murray nominated Francis Crenshaw, 178-pound sophomore from Washington, to start in the Virginia backfield in place of the limping Harry McClaugherty, and Coach Ray Wolf planned to call on Bob Smith to begin at center in the Tarheel line as a replacement for Carl Suntheimer, injured regular.

Leroy Neustedter, 190-pound fullback, and Eddie Bryant, 167-pound halfback, probably will join Dudley and Crenshaw. The Cavalier line regulars, playing as a unit for the last time, are Jim White and Nick Gianakos, ends; Capt. Lee McLaughlin and Al Frerotte, tackles; Ervin Dickey and Jack Sauerbeck, guards and Billy Suhling or Jack Murden, center.

Tarheels Top in Weight

The backfield supporting cast for Lalanne will be Harry Dunkle, 200-pound blocker and long-distance kicker; Don Baker, 175-pound crack receiver of Lalanne's passes, and Sid Sadoff, 185-pound pile-driver, at fullback.

The weight advantage will be with the Tarheels, both in the line and backfield. Headed by Paul Severin, All-American end, the 192-pound Carolina line scales only a slight margin over the Cavaliers, however, with a wider difference in the backfield.

Hockey Eagles Open at Home Tuesday Night

Washington Team Host to N. Y. Rovers at Riverside Stadium

The Ice Follies move out of Riverside Stadium today and ice hockey moves in Tuesday night when the red, white and blue Washington Eagles entertain New York's swift skating Rover Boys in their opening home Eastern Amateur Hockey League match at 8:30 o'clock.

The Eagles, who last night inaugurated a three-match road invasion of Atlantic City, River Vale and New York, will conclude their road hop tomorrow afternoon at Madison Square Garden and two victories in three matches will enable the Eagles to take the ice here Tuesday night in undisputed possession of the Eastern league's lead.

Washington, incidentally, enters the second lap of its three-match road trip when it meets the River Vale Golfers in River Vale, N. J., tonight.

The Eagles and Rovers waged some of the finest duels of the Eastern league season a year ago as Washington barely nosed out New York for second place in the final match of the season against Baltimore. The Rovers currently are one of the nigh-scoring teams of the Eastern league and one of the most colorful.

The Eagles, manned by eight new players and seven returning stars, thus far have proved themselves one of the biggest and most aggressive sextets in the circuit and one that should find instantaneous favor here.

Tickets for Tuesday night's match are on sale at Riverside and reservations are being made through REpublic 2950.

N. Dakota Sinks In Mud as Wichita U. Triumphs, 19-0

By the Associated Press

Wichita, Kans., Nov. 22.—The combination of a muddy gridiron and a charging Wichita University line sent North Dakota State to defeat today, 19 to 0.

Playing the entire game in a steady drizzle, the visitors had to rely principally on the fine punting of Cecil Sturgeon and neglect their stout passing attack.

Burt Hayes, veteran Shocker halfback, went 10 yards around end for the first tally minutes after the game started. In the third quarter, Hayes scampered 20 yards to the Bison 4, then went over in four tries.

The final score, followed by the only conversion of the game, came on a 31-yard pass from Cecil Grandy to Morton, who loped into the end zone just before the gun.

Army Battles Tigers Today At Princeton

Crowd of 20,000 to Watch Dave Allerdice Close Grid Career

By the Associated Press

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 22.—Army's hot-and-cold football team, one eye cocked on their November 30 clash with Navy, bivouacked at nearby Peddie School in Hightstown tonight on the eve of tomorrow's test against Princeton.

Eleven seniors on the Tiger squad, including the star pass-heaver, Dave Allerdice, will be playing their collegiate finale, all anxious to atone for that 19-7 defeat the Army handed Princeton in 1938.

Some 20,000 spectators are expected to file into Palmer Stadium and see Allerdice's swansong as a college gridiron luminary. The Noblesville, Ind., flash, son of an All-America halfback at Michigan, comes up to his last game with a season completed pass mark of 51.6 per cent. Eight of his aerial rockets have resulted in touchdowns.

Army's victory last year was its first over Princeton in the ten-game series which began in 1893. The Soldiers' main offensive power is built around Hank Mazur, triple-threat fullback.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 22 (AP).—The South's end corps for the third annual Blue and Gray gridiron classic here Dec. 28 was completed today with an acceptance from Dinkey Darnell, 200-pound Duke wingman.

Other ends chosen for the Dixie outfit are Paul Severin, North Carolina; Buddy Elrod, Mississippi State, and Hal Newman, Alabama.

Darnell is the third Duke standout selected to compete with the 22-member club being picked from the sunny side of the Mason-Dixon Line. Others are Alexa Winterson, tackle, and Jap Davis, fullback.

Cardinal A. C. Beats Congress Heights, 24-0

W.-L. Back's 60 Points Lead Eckrich, of Little Hoyas; Martin Tops Interhigh Individual Point Getters

Except for a charity game involving Gonzaga High and Washington-Lee over in Arlington, the scholastic gridiron season came to an end Thursday, and to the Little Generals' Russ Arnaud went the uncontested scoring championship of this vicinity with 60 points.

Converted from a blocking back this year with the graduation of his speedy mate, Wally Legg, Arnaud carried the burden of ball carrying throughout the W.-L. schedule. He scored ten touchdowns to lead Bud Eckrich, of Georgetown Prep, by ten points. The latter's total, however, represented the major portion of Little Hoya scoring, while Leo Urbanski and Eddie DeCelle also ranked high among the schoolboys for W.-L.

Harry Martin, of Central, led all interhigh scorers, being tied for fifth place with John Boteler, Landon, and Buddy Speiss, St. John's, with 30 points. Jake Hilleary, Western's ace quarterback, was next with 27 of his club's well-distributed points.

In the matter of team records, Tech wound up with the best. It won five of its eight regularly scheduled games, tied in one and lost two. A practice battle with National Training School under game conditions was also won. The worst record of the year in this vicinity went to Episcopal, which was thrashed by various degrees in each of its seven outings.

Secret's Out! Sweet Lelanne Has Flat Feet

N. C. U. Star Romps To Glory on Special Pads From Trainer

By the Associated Press

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 22—Jim (Sweet) Lalanne, who ran and passed North Carolina to an upset victory over Duke, has run on flat feet and footpads for years, but has overcome the handicap to become one of the Nation's bright stars.

"That boy's feet have given me nightmares for four years," said Trainer Chuck Quinlan.

"Quinny can put up with the nightmares," said Head Coach Ray Wolf, "we'll take all the flat feet we can get like Lalanne."

The 170-pound triple-threat back who'll wind up his college career against Virginia tomorrow ran and passed for the 5-yard advance that beat Duke, scored or negotiated all the touchdowns that beat T. C. U. and had Tulane down until the last minute when a blocked punt made it a 13-14 loss.

Carolina coaches consider this Lalane's best year. For the last two years he understudied George Stirnweiss. In the nine games this year he gained 1,100 yards, averaging 5.3 yards a rush, completed 45 per cent of his passes, and served also as a precision punter, kick returner, field general and safety man.

Figures of the University News Service said that in his three years Lalanne carried the ball 248 times for a total net gain of 1,137 yards and an average fo 4.6 yards, has completed 47 per cent of his passes (100 out of 211) for 1,226 yards, has punted 71 times for 2,708 yards, an average of 38 yards, and has scored 13 touchdowns and passed for 13 others.

Ramblers Again Meet Silver Spring Merchants

Bill Bullock Signed to Meet Harry Hurst

Pair Will Fight Here Thursday Night at Riverside Stadium

Bill Bullock, heavy punching local lightweight who recently scored a surprising one-round knockout of high ranking Everett Rightmire locally, yesterday was signed to box Harry Hurst, Jewish-Canadian protege of Al Foreman, in special eight-round support of the 10-round boxing feature bringing together George Abrams and Henry Chmielewski at Riverdale Stadium next Thursday night.

Hurst, one of the best looking young prospects among the little men introduced locally since Joe Archibald and Foreman himself, will be severely tested by the ring-wise Bullock, who stopped Rightmire at a time he was ranked eighth among the world's lightweights.

Foreman, who scored a one-round knockout of Goldie Ahearn before a record-breaking gate here in the 1920s and who later developed into an outstanding featherweight and lightweight championship contender, is completely sold on Hurst's chances of knocking out Bullock and of qualifying for main events locally in so doing.

"Anybody Hurst hits will drop," Foreman relayed from Montreal, Canada, "and he's ready for the best right now. He already has scored two knockouts in Washington, and another over Bullock just now should put him right up on top."

Ahearn, who assists Alvis in his matchmaking and who is at variance over Foreman on many points, agrees with him on Hurst.

"Harry's a great, little fighter," Goldie concedes, "and he punches a great deal like Foreman did when Al was at his best. I should know how Foreman punches—I caught plenty of his pitching here some years ago."

Promoter Alvis hints that the winner of the Bullock-Hurst setto probably will be matched with Rightmire here in the not distant future.

Willow Trees Meet U Street Lions Eleven Tomorrow

The championship of the Washington Colored Gridiron Conference will be decided tomorrow at Griffith Stadium when the Willow Trees square off with the U Street Lions. Starting time will be 2 p. m.

Winners of the South and North sections, respectively, of conference play, the two clubs should stage a hot battle.

The game will bring together two of the finest semipro gridmen of the city in the rival captains, Big Stone, leader of the Willow Trees, is rated high among tackles and Bus Carrington, of the Lions, is just as good.

John Ligon Employes Guests at 'Skins Game

Twenty-nine employes of John Ligon, Inc., will be guests of their employer tomorrow when the Redskins face the New York Giants in a National League game at the Polo Grounds. The trip has become an annual affair for the upholsterers.

Episcopal Loses 8th, 13-0, To Forestmen

Woodberry Takes 1st Victory Since 1934 on Quick Thrusts

Woodberry Forest, Va., Nov. 22.—In a spirited game marked by hard tackling of both teams, Woodberry Forest defeated Episcopal High School here today, 13-0. It was the first victory for the Orange team since 1934, closing out Episcopal's season with a record of eight straight losses.

Lightning thrusts in the second and third periods produced the winners' pair of touchdowns. The first march got under way slowly when two first downs moved the ball to the home team's 40 and three successive runs by Sam Fray, John Cole and Mel Fuller covered the remaining 60 yards. Fuller's touchdown dash came on a spinner between the guards which netted 25 yards. Fuller drop-kicked the extra point.

The second score was set up by a spectacular punt return by Fray which put the ball on the Episcopal 18-yard line. On the next play Fray tossed a perfect pass to Charlie Robinson in the end zone. Fuller's pass to Fray for the extra point was incomplete.

Episcopal's most serious threat came in the final quarter when West's passing and Lee's excellent receiving moved the Alexandrians to the winners' 35 yard line, at which point the ball was lost on downs.

The first quarter was all Episcopal's with Neff's running and West's passing netting two first downs and a recovered fumble giving the losers the ball on the Woodberry 38. The Orange team's defense tightened at this point, however, and West was forced to punt.

Woodberry barely missed a second touchdown in the first half when Thack's pass was batted out of Fray's hands on the goal line.

The winners netted 151 yards by rushing to Episcopal's 54 and 19 yards via the air to Episcopal's 53. The first downs stood 6-4 in Woodberry's favor.

Bob Canter's 152-408 Paces Pin League

Set Score Accounts For All-Time High; Records Five Scores

Bob Canter, Patents, took all the individual highs that turned up in the General Land Office's meet at Penn Recreation last night with high game of 152 and an all-time league record set of 408 to gain more glory, keeping his boys out in front of the loop with 17 wins against 10 losses. The Records quintet took high team game with 598.

BROOKLAND

It was all Josephine Calvagna, Michigan Park Market, in the Brookland Ladies meet with highs for game and set of 134 and 328. The Willie Esso girls apparently were as potent as aviation gasoline for they won team high with 518 and 1,494. The league-leading Gulf Service quints, who had won 12 straight up to last night, were taken into camp by Brookland Garage in all three contests and Federal Litho treated Brookland Recreation in the same manner. Gulf Service, however, still leads the loop.

ARCADIA

Grace Hobbs, Fleischman's Yeast, and Mabelle Hering, D. D. W.'s, were the leading women in the Ladies Independent meet, the first taking high game with 136, as the latter got a count of 341 to take set. The Little Tavern quintet easily captured high game with 534, but had to be content with a tie with Arcade Pontiac for team set, each rolling 1,528. Daly's Food Shop and Shah & Shah whitewashed their opponents of the night.

COLUMBIA

Ann Sundholm and Julia Young were the best individuals in the Bureau of Engraving Ladies meet, with highs for game and set of 146 and 380, respectively. The Section No. 5 lasses rolled 541 to take high team game, with the set honor divided between Section 9-2 and Section 6-1, with 1,513 each. Receivers licked the Stamps No. 2 girls in all three, while Bindery No. 2 tied up the league-leading Section 7-1 girls in the odd contest. Section 6-1 is in second place.

BETHESDA

Jack White and Ben Kosky of the Connecticut Blue Ribbon bowling team, split even in doubles matches with two teams at Bethesda last night. White and Kosky defeated Frank Riley and Chet Lindstrom in their first encounter, 800 to 702, but dropped the second to Jack Perrell and Henry Hiser, 759 to 771.

In the first match, White shot 410, Kosky 390, Riley 379, and Lindstrom 323. In the second, White rolled 393, Kosky 366, Hiser 448 with a high game of 181, and Perrell 323.

LUCKY STRIKE

At Lucky Strike, other Blue Ribbon pin artists scored a sweep of singles and doubles matches against members of the Del Rio team. Bill Tato, Bill Dente and Mike Bogino won doubles for the Connecticutans over Hokie Smith and Ed Blakeney, 1,325 to 1,297. Tato rolled two games for Blue Ribbon and posted 236; Bill Dente relieved him and posted 401, while Mike Bogino, appearing in all five, had 688. Smith shot 632, and Blakeney 665 for Del Rio.

In singles, Steve Dyak of the visitors defeated Astor Clarke, the Nation's No. 1 bowler, 416, to 366. Dyak clicked for games of 130, 144 and 142, and Clarke, a bit off form, made 107, 116 and 143.

Missouri Mines Aim To Crack Grid Jinx

Louise Jones To Coach Girls At Martinsburg

LOUISE JONES

Former Shepherd State Teachers' Player to Handle Basketball

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 22.—The Martinsburg High School girls' basketball sextet, which boasts a record of three seasons without a single defeat, will be coached this year by a new mentor, Miss Louise Jones, who is taking over duties held for 11 years by Mrs. Helen Bentz, forced out of work this year by illness.

Miss Jones is a veteran player with outstanding work at Shepherdstown (W. Va.) High and three years as a member of the sextet of Shepherd State Teachers College at Shepherdstown, on which she played a guard position. She finished her college work last year and is teaching English at the high school here.

The high school combination here comes into this season with a string of 34 consecutive victories. In her first five years as coach Mrs. Bentz turned out a series of champion teams, including capture of the Cumberland Valley Athletic League title for four years. In her full 11 years of coaching her teams never lost more than two games in a single season except in 1937 when five were lost.

Four of the six regulars on the team last year were lost by graduation in June.

Golf Hall of Fame Plans Announced By Fred Corcoran

New York, Nov. 22.—Plans for a golf Hall of Fame were announced today by Fred Corcoran, tournament manager of the Professional Golfers Association.

Tom Walsh, president of the P. G. A., appointed Grantland Rice, sports writer, to head a committee which will name the members of the Hall of Fame. Amateurs and women golfers who have achieved outstanding successes and contributed to the game's history also will be included.

Corcoran said that the plans call for a building to be constructed on a site yet to be selected and modeled along the lines of baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y.

Brewers Open Cage Schedule Tomorrow

Face N. Y. Jewels Out of Town; Kramer Expected to Start

The Washington Brewers make their season's debut tomorrow night in the American Professional Basketball League against the N. Y. Jewels in New York City. The Jewels conquered the defending champion Philadelphia Sphas last week.

Ben Kramer, former All-American forward from Long Island University, has joined the Brewers and is expected to start in tomorrow night's game. Kramer, a teammate of Phil Rabin at Long Island for three years, was All-Metropolitan for four years and climaxed his college career by being chosen All-American in 1935.

The Brewers have been drilling nightly for the forthcoming inaugural. Manager Abe Rosenfield expects the local club, which was barely nosed out by the Sphas last year after a three-game playoff, to do as well or better this season.

Coach Mack Posnack has been impressed with the work of Nat Frankel, newly acquired cager from Detroit, in practice. Frankel has been teamed with Art Zahn at the forward posts, with Bloom at center, and Rabin and Posnack guards. Moe Dubilier, Ben Goldfadden, Kramer and Whitey Wilson round out the local roster.

Hoya, Colonial Coaches Modest In Forecasts

Speaking at Smoker, Neither Predicts Victory Tomorrow

Coaches Bill Reinhart of George Washington and Jack Hagerty of Georgetown were reluctant last night to give out optimistic predictions on tomorrow's football game between their schools at Griffith Stadium.

Said Reinhart:

"It is not for me to say that my boys will go out there and beat the daylights out of a great Georgetown team. However, I believe that we will make a good game of it, as we did last year when Georgetown won only, 7-0."

Said Hagerty:

"Until Wednesday I wouldn't have given a plugged nickel for our chances because the kids were downhearted over the Boston College loss. Lately, however, they have perked up quite a bit and yesterday they showed plenty of spirit in a short drill. I believe they'll be ready for a good ball game."

Catholic U. Eleven Favored Over Providence Here Today

12 Cardinals End Careers At Brookland

Pete Sachon, C. U.'s Ace Back, May Not See Action Today; Kickoff at 2 P. M.

Seeking to finish the season on the winning side of the ledger, Catholic University plays host to Providence College's Fighting Friars at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Brookland Stadium.

The Cardinals, with three victories, three defeats and one tie on their record, will be strong favorites over the Friars, who won three of eight games and were defeated by St. Anselm, a team C. U. defeated.

Today's meeting will be the fourth between the two schools, with the Cardinals holding a two-game advantage. In 1923 the teams battled to a 7-7 stalemate, but C. U. came back in 1931 and 1932 to score by 13-7 and 6-0.

Quarterback Pete Sachon, rated one of the greatest players in C. U. history, heads the list of 12 Cardinal players who will bow out in this game. The others are Captain Hank Brostek, Charlie Moutenot, and Hank Sant' Ambrogio, halfbacks; Joe Carrig, Leo Kane and Gerry Strang, ends; Julius Stanges and James Conlen, tackles; John Reidy and George DuBois, guards, and Morris Shulman, center.

Sachon, however, is not expected to play today in deference to injuries received last week against Hardin-Simmons. Montenot will take over Pete's kicking and passing assignments, while little Huck Hughes will call signals from the quarterback post.

The Providence College squad of 32 players arrived here last night at 9 o'clock.

Sellout Crowd Seen for Irish, Wildcat Game

20th Annual Grid Rivalry May Draw 48,000 Spectators

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 22.—One of football's most intense duels will be renewed at Dyche Stadium tomorrow when Notre Dame and Northwestern come together before a sell-out crowd of more than 48,000 spectators.

The battle will be the twentieth between these gridiron rivals and will mark one of the few times that Northwestern has entered the contest the favorite. The Wildcats have won only two games and tied two others as against 15 Irish triumphs.

Notre Dame should start the game in vengeful mood after last Saturday's encounter with Iowa, which knocked the Irish from the nation's list of unbeaten, untied elevens.

Northwestern, loser of two games in seven starts this season, was conceded an edge in the line, with matters about even for the attacks of each eleven.

N. Y. Yankees Awarded Grid Game Forfeit

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 22.—President W. D. Griffith, of the American Professional Football League, tonight declared forfeit to New York its scheduled game with Buffalo there last Sunday and disallowed the Yankees' protest over their defeat here yesterday by the Columbus Bulls in a game which gave the Ohioans their second consecutive league championship.

Of the Buffalo game, Griffith's formal statement said:

"Through no fault of the Buffalo Indians, the snow and tarpaulin coverinz the field at Buffalo was not removed by game time. All officials and both teams were on hand and ready to play but sufficient help to remove the field covering was not provided by those in charge of the Buffalo Stadium. Due to schedule complications, the game could not be played at a later date."

The Yankees' protest was lodged by Coach Jack McBride. It stemmed from a half-time agreement, Griffith said, whereby the third and fourth periods would be shortened to 12 minutes each if field lights could not be turned on. Columbus won, 17-16, on a last-period touchdown and conversion.

"The Yankee protest was based on the fact that the lights were not available and they stated the game should have ended with the score 16 to 10 in favor of the Yankees," Griffith's statement said.

Navy to Leave Thursday for Army Battle

Squad of 40 to Go To Philadelphia for Annual Service Game

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 22.—Navy's football warriors held a short defensive drill today as the athletic department announced the varsity squad would leave Thursday for the Army-Navy game at Philadelphia next Saturday.

The varsity group, composed of about 40 players, will stay at the Manufacturers' Country Club until game time. The entire regiment of Midshipmen will attend the annual service clash, leaving here in special trains the day of the game.

A long scrimmage session is on tap for tomorrow, but only light drills are in prospect for next week.

Tulsa Meets Aggies Of Oklahoma

Tulsa, Nov. 22 (AP).—Tulsa University's Golden Hurricane and the Oklahoma Aggies, two well-conditioned, evenly matched football teams, meet tomorrow to decide the Missouri Valley Conference championship.

A victory for Tulsa, predicted by a majority of the experts, would put the Hurricane on the Valley throne for the fifth time in six years. The crown was captured by Washington, of St. Louis, last season.

Both teams are all-victorious in conference play. In nonconference engagements, Tulsa has fallen before Baylor and the Texas Aggies, while the Cowboys were beaten by Oklahoma and Arizona and tied by Texas Tech.

A steady rain was falling tonight.

Armstrong Rallies To Beat Howard, 20-7

Wilmington Challengers Trounced In Clash for Colored High School Championship of Eastern Seaboard

A smart comeback Orange-and-Black Armstrong High School eleven, before a crowd of 3,000 at Griffith Stadium, performing brilliantly when the breaks came their way, defeated Howard High School, of Wilmington, 20-7, yesterday for the colored scholastic championship of the Eastern Seaboard.

The Delawareans, winners of the championship of the Eastern Scholastic Conference, had challenged the Armstrong city and South Atlantic champions.

A scoreless first period against the Armstrong second string made Howard look dangerous. But when Coach McIntyre sent in his first string, the Delaware boys began to toss them around. Bill Brooks smashed through their line for 10 yards to first down on the Armstrong 54, McAllister lateraled to Lewis for 4 yards, and a pass, McAllister to Ruffin, was good for 13 yards to the Armstrong 20.

Then it was that McAllister hurled to Lewis good for 15 yards, and went off tackle and converted on the play following for a 7-point lead.

It was McAllister's fumble in the third period, as he attempted to pass, which set the Wilmington team back to their 18-yard stripe. When Lewis attempted to punt out of danger, Duckweiler broke through, knocked the punt down, recovered on a dead run, and went 10 yards for a touchdown. Montague tied the count by rushing off tackle.

Kenny Freeman set up the next touchdown, grabbing one of "Ace" Lineberger's long passes and racing 27 yards to the Howard 21. Montague made a first down off tackle on the Howard 9, then skirted left end to the Howard 6, from which point Lineberger went over the goal line. Montague failed for the extra point.

Yale Underdog In Harvard Game Today

Elis' Worst Record Would Result From Loss in Year's Final

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 22.—Yale and Harvard meet on the gridiron here tomorrow for the fifty-ninth time, and it's a game Yale must win to prevent writing a new and disastrous chapter in Eli football history.

A victory for Harvard, quoted an 8-to-5 favorite, would mean a season's record of seven defeats and one victory for Yale. No previous Yale team failed to win at least two games. The 1938 eleven won two and lost six and the next worst record was in 1915—five defeats and four victories.

Harvard's record for the current season could stand some bolstering, too—two victories, two defeats and three ties.

Two of the teams Harvard tied, Penn and Princeton, defeated Yale, the former by a tremendous score, whereas Yale's lone victim, Dartmouth, beat Harvard, 7 to 6.

Cleveland Park Wins

The Cleveland Park Y. M. C. A. eleven defeated McLean, 21 to 12, yesterday on American University's field. Bob McCally starred for the winners.

2 Pitt Backs To Miss Clash With Lions

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Nov. 22.—Edgar Jones, flashy Pitt halfback, will be in the line-up tomorrow for the fortieth meeting of the Panther against Penn State's undefeated Nittany Lions, but Bob Thurbon and Mike Sekela will watch the game from the sidelines.

Coach Charley Bowser announced tonight Reserve Backs Walter West from Atlasburg, Pa., and Ernie Bonelli from nearby Blaw Knox would replace Thurbon nad Sekela at quarter back and right halfback, respectively. Sprained leg muscles have benched both Thurbon and Sekela. Jones suffered an eye injury last week.

The undefeated but once tied Lions arrived here 3-2 favorites for the first time in many years and worked out in the stadium where a crowd of 25,000 was expected tomorrow. Rain was predicted.

State, winner over Pitt last year, 10-0, has not defeated the Panther in Pittsburgh since 1919, when Bob Higgins, now the Penn State coach, was a Lion star.

Eagles Stretch Victory Streak To Four in Row

Newcomers Tally All Points to Defeat Atlantic City, 4 to 2

Atlantic City, Nov. 22.—Three newcomers to the Washington Eagle hockey team accounted for all the points, as the Eagles won over the Atlantic City Seagulls, 4-2, in an Eastern Amateur League game here tonight, before some 4,000 spectators.

Norm Burns and Jack MacBeth accounted for three of the goals while Defenseman Jimmy McCurry scored the fourth and final marker.

The game was a rough and tumble affair, marked by numerous penalties and several threatened battles amongst the players. It was the league-leading Eagles' fourth straight win.

The Eagles spotted the Gulls a 1-point lead before getting under way, to take a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period. Leo Richard put the Gulls ahead when he scored the first goal of the game at 10:18. But at 11:32 of the stanza, former Gull Norm Burns tied the score for the Eagles, taking a rebound off Goalie Lyle Porter and shooting fast for the score. Young Jack MacBeth accounted for the Eagles' second score at 19:20, to give them a 2-1 lead.

At the end of a penalty marked second period, the Eagles still clung to a slim one-point lead, as each team scored one point. Washington received a total of 24 minutes in penalties during the rough and tumble stanza. McCurry was penalized 2 minutes for playing without a stick. When he protested he was penalized an additional 10 minutes for misconduct. Paul Courteau took a dose of the same, when the officials objected to his strenuous pleading of McCurry's cause.

Norm Burns accounted for the Eagle marker at 11:47 of the period, assisted by Jimmy MacBeth, while Harry Dick scored the Seagulls' goal, at 13:14, unassisted. Score: Eagles, 3; Seagulls, 2.

While the Seagulls tried desperately to tie the score and throw the game into overtime, Washington clung to its slim one-point lead. And but 53 seconds before the game ended, Rookie Jimmy McCurry threw in the clincher, to give the Eagles a 4-2 victory.

Santini Heads Record Field In Dixie Meet

60 Ace Bowlers Compete Today in Rich Stake Event

Tony Santini, Washington's nationally ranked No. 3 duckpinner, will be the defending champion when a record field of more than 60 foremost bowling stars of the East shoot it out this afternoon and tonight in the tenth annual Dixie Classic, richest of the South's numerous stake events.

The 15-game attraction gets under way at Arcadia at noon, shifts to the Lucky Strike for the second five-game block at 3:30 p. m., and winds up at Convention Hall, where the final round is carded at 8 p. m.

Triumphing last year with 2,106, an all-time record for the tournament, Santini's chances of being the first to retain the coveted championship are particularly bright. Runner-up in the Howard Campbell and winner of the American Classic in Baltimore already this season, the Convention Hall howitzer is in top form for his difficult task.

Pacini Entered

Only bowler to annex the championship twice, Ollie Pacini, the Northeast Temple wizard, will be among the more than two dozen Washington pinmen seeking victory and top prize of $500. Winner of the first tournament in 1931, Pacini again triumphed in 1937. After Ray Barnes, of Richmond, won in 1932, Astor Clarke won the second of Washington's six conquests the following year. Next came Bill Arnold, of Annapolis, with the title coming back to the Capital in 1935 with Joe Freschi the winner.

The illustrious Nick Tronsky, of Connecticut, bagged the title in 1936. After Pacini's second victory, Hokie Smith, of Lucky Strike, walked off with the 193 top prize.

Lured here by the more than $1,500 in prizes will be the finest shooters from Connecticut, Richmond, Norfolk and Baltimore, Roanoke and other pin centers of the South.

Big Oriole Squad

The Orioles big squad will include the entire Recreation Center team of Bill Guerke, Nova Hamilton, Bill Brozey, Willie Stitz and Doc Pickus, while the Franklin Center will send Lee Seim, Earl Campbell and Ray Fiorentino. From Norfolk will be Jimmy Wallace, recent winner of the Capt. Frank Jett, Richmond's big yearly stake classic; Billy Gauer and Tick Thumm.

The New England contingent, bigger than ever, will include such notables as Jack White, Ben Kosky, Mac Carboni, Ralph Russo, Bill Therrien, Steve Witkowski, and the Blue Ribbons—Tronsky, Bill Tato, Mike Bogino, Steve Dyak, Joe Gacek and Bill Dente.

20,000 Fans Expected to Watch Hoyas Meet Colonials Today

Bowl-Conscious Georgetown Will Go 'All Out' In Game at Stadium; Kickoff to Be at 2 P. M.

proved that he can shake a leg and twist his hips with the best of the broken field runners. McFadden was on the scoring end of the bewildering double reverse that scored against Boston College to the accompaniment of ahs from the press box.

Colonials in Good Shape

George Washington, in much improved physical condition and with everything to gain and nothing to lose, is expected to come up with its best performance of the season. Conceivably, the Colonials could win. But actually they don't appear to have anything but spirit with which to score on Georgetown.

Lacking a first-class forward passer, the Colonials are forced to rely chiefly on a ground offense which, though it has gobbled up more than 1,500 yards in eight games, has only produced 12 touchdowns. The Colonials have been held scoreless in three games, two of which were against strong major opponents, Kentucky and Wake Forest, and the other against impotent Bucknell.

That Georgetown, with a pair of great lines averaging about 206 pounds to a man, is stronger defensively than any of George Washington's previous foes is undeniable and, therefore, it is hard to see how the Colonials can score without a decided break.

Today's game will mark the final appearance of outstanding stars of both schools. Among Georgetown's 18 departing players are Lou Ghecas and Jules Koshlap, among the school's finest halfbacks; Augie Lio and Mark Ostinat and Joe Mickey, splendid guards; Joe McFadden, possibly the smartest quarterback in Hilltop history; Jim Castiglia, a hard-plunging fullback, and a group of powerful linemen, including Tackles Earl Fullilove, Bill Nealon and Joe Daniels, Ends Bill Wixted and John Lascari, and Centers Al Matuza and Jim Reichey.

Trio May Not Play

Three of the Georgetown seniors, Mickey, Nealon and Ostinato, probably won't play today because of injuries. Ostinato is accounted definitely out, and there is scant chance that either Mickey or Nealon will see action. Neither has practiced all week.

George Washington stars in their last game number Murphy Booth, one of the greatest blocking backs to wear the Buff and Blue; Sam Babich, quarterback and formerly an exceptionally good end; Tom Grady and Ken Batson, both halfbacks; John Kokoski, guard, and Tony Barauskas, tackle. Babich has been chosen George Washington's captain for the game. Koshlap will lead the Hoyas.

The Colonials will be sorely handicapped by lack of backfield replacements as both Burrell Martinson and Walter Welc are sidelined with injuries. In this emergency both Grady and Batson have been groomed to play two positions—halfback and quarterback.

Jockey W. L. Taylor Scores Triple on Bowie Race Program

Texas Youth Aboard Victors of Daily Double; Handicap Winner Pays $9.20

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., Nov. 22.—Jockey W. L. Taylor gave Maryland fans some samples of his energetic handling of horses here this afternoon as he booted three winners on the seven-race program home. The Texas youth, whose every appearance in the saddle seems to add speed to a horse, carried his successes for the day into the feature race, the Cherrystone Handicap. Taylor had the mount on Housework, an aptly named daughter of Brooms and a hunch after all those Thanksgiving Day parties. He drove the 4-year-old filly to the wire a length and a half in advance of J. H. Miles' Play House. A length farther back came Howard Bruce's General Mowlee to be third in the field of eight going a mile and a sixteenth.

Although most of the housewives were home busy with their duties, many of those present backed the chances of Housework with the presence of Taylor aboard, a factor in the selection. Despite Taylor's popularity, Housework paid a $9.20 mutuel. The winner was clocked in 1:47 1-5 for the mile and a sixteenth over a fast track and under a warm sky that had some of the boys and girls believing they were at Hialeah.

Taylor rode an excellently judged race on Housework. The filly had speed from the start and might have taken the top at once. However, Taylor chose to bide his time and he allowed Play House and General Mowlee to do their stuff in the early stages. He kept Housework on the outside and out of trouble. It was not until the field left the backstretch that Taylor put Housework to a drive. The filly responded on the outside and moved up abreast of Play House. There was a tussle between the two that lasted past midstretch and then Taylor's mount began to draw out gradually.

Taylor's other two successes came in the daily double. He made the twin wager a personal proposition. In the first race he climbed aboard Tenth Legion, a 2-year-old owned by Walter M. Jeffords, was the winner after showing little or no form in higher priced company. Taylor rode the son of Mars with plenty of confidence. When he asked for speed, the youngster had it and drew out in the final drive. Jump Bid, which set most of the pace, was second with Tarhoy, a paddock tip third in the group, of eleven non-winners. Tenth Legion paid $12.10.

He came back in the second race with Balkan War. This time the customers piled the betting money on him. The Balko gelding had to feel the whip and Taylor sent him between horses approaching the wire to win in masterful fashion. See See, the pacemaker, and Taperwine were second and third in this field of a dozen. The winner paid $4.60.

High School Teams Let Coaches Call Signals—It Works

Murphy, N. C., Nov. 22 (AP).—The football problem of coaching from the bench seems to have been solved here by two high school teams which permitted their coaches to follow them on the field and call signals.

The system worked admirably for players and spectators as Murphy High's 12-man team defeated Hall High, of Knoxville, Tenn., 20-0. Opposing coaches directed their teams' play on offense, relieving quarterbacks of mental burdens. In the 48-minute contest 114 plays were run, considerably above the average.

BILL K raced in first flight from beginning and closed with good courage.

BALKAN WAR, not hurried while within striking distance, responded when shaken up and came between leaders under punishment to win going away under good handling. SEE SEE went to front at once, set good pace and held on gamely at end. TEPERWINE was closest to pace while hard ridden and weakened right at close. DOROTHY POMP, off poorly, worked way to contention and showed good effort.

WISE BRAVE, taken up repeatedly when in close quarters early, obtained racing room in stretch and responded to punishment to wear down McHENRY. The latter raced STAR CHARTER into defeat to take command and was kept to pressure to end. STAR CHARTER had some trouble getting to front, dropped back and came again under punishment. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SACK, $21.40, $10.00, $6.60; BOW LOW, $17.30, $10.60; GOOD RECEPTION, $19.40.
SACK, first away, opened good lead, but had to be placed to pressure in final stages to stave off closing bid of BOW LOW. The latter, in first flight from start, rallied gamely and then hung nearing finish. GOOD RECEPTION came with good energy in closing test. MINGLING closed ground. RED MEADOW, in thick of contention, forced pace and then tired. CANTERUP was in first flight early and faltered.

HOUSEWORK, well rated while following pace of PLAY HOUSE, came around leader entering stretch and drew clear under intermittent punishment. PLAY HOUSE was sent to lead going to first turn, held on gamely when placed to pressure, but could not resist winner. GENERAL MOWLEE raced with pace throughout, but weakened slightly in final eighth. IRON SHOT reached contention after a quarter and ran evenly thereafter. SON ALTESSE appeared to be anchored by the weight. OVERSIGHT stumbled leaving gate.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:58. Off at once. Winner, G. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GINO THOR, $9.10, $5.30, $4.20; CANDLE ENDS, $6.90, $6.20; ACE CALL, $4.00.
GINO THOR saved ground while close to pace, came through on rail entering stretch to reach leader and just got up in driving finish. CANDLE ENDS took lead when KING'S COLORS faltered, held on gamely and just missed. ACE CALL made move entering stretch, was blocked and could not better his position. IDA ROGERS was not good enough. AMNESTY was hard ridden to reach contention and weakened. KING'S COLORS was used up setting pace and stopped to a walk in stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:27. Off 4:27½. Winner, Miss Alice T. CHERRY'S CHILD, trailer early, improved position steadily on outside, responded to pressure and came with good energy between horses to be up in the concluding strides. JOLLY FLAG, in thick of contention, came willingly when put to pressure and closed with rush. ACTRESS went to front in opening furlong, set good pace, shook off ANN MOWLEE and WAR NOISE, but weakened right at end. PART ONE closed boldly.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

One of the remarkable things about the 20,000 crowd here on Thanksgiving Day was the fact that there was not an accident or a case of illness during the afternoon. Dr. Lancaster, in charge of the track hospital, usually has his hands full with such a big gathering. However, he just sat around. The only official action he got was when Jockey No Boy Jacobs came in for two aspirins for "Dynamite" Kerr. Just to keep the record straight, that "Mrs. Art Brown" featured in a local ad recently, is not the wife of Art Brown, of WOL. The holiday betting here totaled $584,210 as compared with $548,003 last year. The daily double totaled $33,546, just about a record for this State. The fifth race, the feature, drew $97,254, a pleasing hour's work for Mutuel Manager J. Donald Hay. By the way, the handle might have gone to $600,000 had there not been a foul claim in the first race which delayed action for 10 minutes. Among the jockeys at Charles Town now are Buddy Root, Sammy Palumbo, Woodrow Kirk, Carson Kirk, F. A. Martinez and H. Gower. They are being kept busy working horses. The track is in excellent shape. Henri Mora returns to the saddle today, having served out his suspension. Shot Put is going well in training and will start in the Bryan and O'Hara Handicap, closing day feature here. The race is at a mile and three-sixteenths. Some of the boys and girls had the W. L. Taylor Blues yesterday. When they bet he didn't and when they didn't bet he did. William Cox, who has Mr. and Mrs. V. Wyse's horses here, will ship Orcades, Miss B. B., Be Prepared, Fencing, Panaking, Radio Wave, Short Measures, Pirata and High Arch to Charles Town. This will be one of the strongest stables on the grounds, particularly with Taylor to do the riding. Incidentally, a pretty fair horseman wants to bet that Palumbo rides more winners up there than Taylor. Today's feature is the $5,000 added Prince Georges Autumn Handicap and it has drawn a good field. In all, 12 have been named for the test of a mile and one-sixteenth. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Kings Blue is a speedy sprinter as evidenced by consistently finishing in the money when running with such top notchers as Bill Farnsworth, Allegro and Skin Deep. Moving down, he receives the call. The Bedwell entry of Rawson and Fogoso rate as the principal contenders. O. Play is another which figures to have a good chance.

Second race—His Highness was no match for Bryan Station in his start at Laurel but was still game enough to snare fourth money. He meets a mediocre field of platers in this heat and should be graduated from the maiden ranks. Running Lights finished well behind Meadow Dew at Pimlico and figures next in line. Lone Sentry should go well.

Third race—Quaroma was forced to race on the outside when competing against Maydig and Ace Call at Pimlico but stuck it out for fifth place. Dropping down to meet these cheaper grade platers, he should win. Phone Dijon likes his track and might surprise at a price. Charming Herod has shown improvement in recent races.

Fourth race—Cape Cod was a lucky winner last outing beating out Curious Coin when the latter was left at the post. However, he fell into a good spot in this allowance affair. Pirate won his last but his time does not compare favorably with that of the top horse. Dawn Attack beat Pirate in an upset at Pimlico and might do it again.

Fifth race—Dusky Fox didn't care for the mile and five eighths of the Bowie Handicap at Pimlico where he bowed to Second Helping. Meeting again over a shorter route, he figures to reverse that order. The Smythe entry Second Helping and Sir Marlboro provide a hard-hitting team as the latter won the opening stake at Bowie. Birch Rod can better his last race and is a money factor.

Sixth race—Sweet Willow was a length and a half winner over Clyde Tolson at Pimlico running six furlongs in 1:12 flat. As Clyde Tolson came back to defeat Early Morn and Jessie Gladys at Bowie it makes Sweet Willow appear well placed. Oasis has won her last three heats and shapes up as the most formidable contender. Thorn Apple has speed but stops.

Seventh race—Grebe turned in a surprise performance to whip Maydig and True Knightess recently but indicated that his previous second at Belmont in fast time was in line with consistent performance. Sting Pal was third to Son Altesse and Bright View last start and shapes up as the one to beat. Blacant won his last but moves up in class.

Best bet—Cape Cod.

DISTRICT LADIES' LEAGUE: NO. 1

Meet the Penn Recreation Pinwomen

(Note: This is the first picture in a series of ten devoted to the Ladies' District League. The Ladies' District League is composed of the leading women duckpin bowlers of Washington and vicinity and many of them have national ranking as recognized by the National Duck Pin Bowling Congres, whose headquarters are in Washington.)

Mary Magnotto, who currently boasts of an average of 107.16, and outside of her District League activities also bowls in the Maryland-D. C. Ladies' loop at Silver Spring. This is only her second year of league competition.

Jessie Sacrey, whose average at present is 111.9; who ranks tenth in the District among woman bowlers; bowls in the Washington Ladies' League and has been in the District League two years.

Eleanor Bark, present average 103.4; also bowls in the What's in a Name loop; has had three years of league competition with two of them in the Ladies' District.

Mabelle Hering, national singles champion in 1938-39; ranks thirtieth in national standing among women and ninth in the district. Also bowls in Ladies' Independent League. Her current average is 112.2.

Marie Spates, captain of the Penn Recreation five; placed eighth in the District and just missed national ranking by a few pins; bowls in the Ladies' Independent League at Arcadia and whose present average in the District League is 106.13.

Change in Yule Clubs

To save bookkeeping expense, some of the Washington banks will change the payment plan on Christmas Savings Clubs. Instead of requiring weekly payments, the banks will accept the savings on a twice-a-month basis. New clubs for next year generally will start about December 2.

Store Votes Dividends

Directors of Woodward & Lothrop have declared regular quarterly dividends on two stock issues. The 50 cents a share on common stock and the $1.75 a share on preferred stock will be payable December 27 to holders of record December 14.

Puzzled About Banking?

There's no mystery in banking. And to prove there isn't, have a qualified speaker address your organization. That is the invitation of Willard G. Barker, chairman of the speakers' unit of the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

Talks on banking and related subjects will be made to civic and trade organizations in the city, upon request. Schools and colleges also are invited to make use of the speakers. Among the speakers available, Mr. Barker, president of the Morris Plan Bank; W. T. Vandoren, vice president of the Liberty National Bank; Thomas J. Groom, president of the Bank of Commerce & Savings; John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank; Frederick P. H. Siddons, secretary of the American Security & Trust Co., and David Bornet, vice president of the National Savings & Trust Co.

The public relations program of the banker's group was inaugurated in 1935 and since then many organizations have called upon the association to furnish speakers.

Accountants Hear Stempf

Thought-provoking views were given recently by Victor H. Stempf, president of the National Association of Cost Accountants, on a visit to the Washington chapter. Condensed highlights of his talk follow:

"Vague provisions of the Conscription Bill provoke serious economic complications. . . .

"75 per cent of the people buy only bare necessities . . . the only way to reach these buyers is to offer something within their means. . . .

"We must be diligent and aggressive in opposing unduly complex measures which may substitute rules and regulations for the free play of initiative, freedom of contract and business judgment. . . .

"An intelligent understanding of costs is essential not only for profitable operation, but vital also to compliance with regulatory laws. . . ."

Mr. Stempf was accompanied here by Dr. S. C. McLeod, national secretary, and J. J. Hastings, a director of the national group.

U. S. Lead Stocks Decrease in Year

New York, Nov 22 (AP).—Stocks of lead in the hands of refiners dropped to 35,386 tons at the end of October, or about two weeks' supplies at the current rate of shipments, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reported today.

Butter Futures Rise To Three-Year Highs

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP).—Butter futures on the mercantile exchange rose ½ cent today to the highest levels in almost three years, stimulated by an unusually good consumer demand. Gains were recorded in the egg market also, futures rising ¼ cent and spot prices 1 to 1½ cents a dozen.

November butter, selling at 32.75 cents a pound, showed a gain of almost 4 cents since the first of the month and 5¼ cents over a year ago levels.

American Export Lines Reports Net Of $5,892,955

By the Associated Press

American Export Lines, Inc. in a report for the nine months ended September 30 yesterday showed net profit of $5,892,955 compared with $216,630 in the first nine months of 1939.

These earnings were after charges and Federal income taxes but "before adjustments as provided in the Marchant Marine Act."

The management estimated the final quarter earnings "to be fully as good as those of the last quarter of 1939 which amounted to $1,241,994."

"The serious dislocations to the company's business caused by the closing of the Mediterranean and Black Seas to United States vessels," said the report, "have, in part, been offset by the inauguration of a weekly service from New York to Lisbon, increased sailings to India and the chartering of surplus boats.

Foreclosures in D. C. Show 15.9% Drop

Favorable Trend In First 6 Months Reported by FHLB

By Thomas M. Cahill

The Federal Home Loan Board yesterday reported that foreclosures on homes in Washington decreased 15.9 per cent during the first six months this year, as compared with the corresponding period last year.

Progress of sales of properties acquired by the Home Owners Loan Corporation was reported as excellent, with 94.6 per cent of all properties acquired having been sold by the end of June, this year.

Comulative total of insured Federal Housing Administration mortgages on new construction for the first half of 1940 increased 23.5 per cent over the aggregate for the first half of last year, estimated nonfarm mortgage recordings of all lenders for the first half of the present year gaining 5.5 per cent over the initial six months of 1939.

The adjusted tax rate for Washington (as reported to the Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research) on a 100 per cent basis of assessment in 1939 was $15.75 per 1000 valuation as compared with $28.34 for 256 cities. In ratio of Home Owners Loan Corporation collections to billings (95.8 per cent) for June, 1940, the District of Columbia was nineteenth among the States, reflecting considerable improvement in rank from thirty-eighth place a year ago.

All of Canada's Wheat Crop to Go To Government

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 22 (Canadian Press).—The government intends to take delivery of all of the 1940 wheat crop during the present crop year which ends July 31, 1941, Trade Minister MacKinnon announced in the House of Commons today.

The minister said plans for the 1941 wheat crop would depend upon circumstances, but from the standpoint of the trade department that policy would "have to be decided upon with a knowledge that apart from domestic consumption only between possibly 140,000,000 and 175,000,000 bushels can be exported in the crop year ending July 31, 1942."

Meanwhile, the government is making arrangements, the minister said, "so that all the wheat deliverable from the 1940 crop will be accepted by the wheat board prior to the end of the present crop year."

At the approach of the 1940 fall harvesting season, MacKinnon said, the wheat on hand was 273,086,845 bushels. The new crop apparently will now amount to 520,000,000 bushels.

Day in Wall Street

Stocks Turn Weak After Early Advance; Selling to Establish Tax Losses Is Factor

New York, Nov. 22.—The stock market got a good start on the rallying side today but many leaders subsequently stumbled and failed to go the distance. Selected steels, motors, rails, rubbers, aircrafts and specialties were up fractions to 2 points at one time. Weak spots among "blue chips" developed after mid-day and early gains were well trimmed at the close.

The Associated Press average finished off .1 of a point at 44.5 after being up as much at noon. After a fairly fast get-away sluggish intervals were frequent. Transfers totaled 714,050 shares compared with 813,760 Wednesday.

Traders returned from their Thanksgiving Day recess with a slightly more optimistic view of the war news. Business developments, including another flow of favorable dividends and roseate prospects for the steelmakers, proved a bolstering influence in the forenoon.

Year-end selling to establish losses for income tax statements then started, especially among stocks that are well down from their levels of last spring, and price irregularity ruled to the end of the session. Labor difficulties here and there attracted some attention.

Among items receiving market attention were: retail spending continued substantially above a year ago; motor output this week registered a drop owing to the holiday shutdown, but October sales were placed at a record peak, and last week's freight loadings were off no more than seasonally on the basis of the Associated Press index.

Portions of their morning upturn were retained by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Yellow Truck, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Great Northern, American Telephone, American Smelting, U. S. Rubber preferred, Paramount, Warner Bros., International Paper common and preferred and Certain-teed preferred.

American Can dropped 3 points to a new 1940 bottom and declines of 1 to 2 or so were shown for Dow Chemical, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville and Eastman Kodak. Lesser losers were Montgomery Ward, N. Y. Central, Standard Oil of New Jersey, General Electric, Chesapeake & Ohio and United Aircraft.

Modest improvement in the curb was registered for American Gas, Jones & Laughlin, Glen Alden Coal, Brewster Aero, Bath Iron Works, American Gas and Aluminum of America. Slipping were Creole Petroleum, Humble Oil, Midvale and Phoenix Securities. Turnover here was around 133,000 shares against 119,000 in the previous session.

A fair number of bonds singled out for special attention pushed forward in the face of reactionary trends in less active parts of the corporate list.

Showing good post-holiday activity, volume totaled $8,329,400 face value against Wednesday's $8,871,200.

Switching operations in rails accounted for numerous gains of fractions to a point and some moderate declines. Alleghany Corp. stamped 5s of '50, closing at 60. Erie 5s of '75 at 16¾, Illinois Central 4½s at 37⅝, Nickel Plate 4½s at 58⅝, Southern Pacific 4½s of '68 at 58¼ and M-K-T 5s of '62 were among the leaders.

Other issues on the plus side included American & Foreign Power 5s at 53¾, Loew's 3½s at 104⅞, Portland General Electric 4½s at 78 and Third Avenue Railway Adjustment 5s at 19¾.

Commercial Mackay income debentures jumped 5¼ points, closing at 41. Rumors in bond circles said the company's business was improving.

Denmark loans recorded wide swings in the foreign sector. The 6s of '42 dropped 7 while the 5½s of '55 picked up 4¾. Italian loans were strong. Australians lost ground.

U. S. Governments were mixed in quiet trading, closing 11/32ds lower to 6/32ds higher.

Early Yule Trade Reported Good During Week

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Turkey, cranberry sauce and other "fixin's" were bought this year more plentifully than last in the States celebrating the Thanksgiving holiday this week, the weekly trade survey of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., revealed today.

Retail merchants also saw early nibbling at Christmas gift offerings, although most stores have not yet started to push Yule merchandise.

The review said in part:

"Cold weather gave impetus to the seasonal upswing at retail, enabling many merchants to chalk up sales gains over the preceding week despite the inclusion in that period of exceptionally good Armistice Day results.

"Although the holiday shopping season was not yet officially opened, city stores reported strong early interest in gift purchases; buying extended over a wide variety of merchandise including handbags, lingerie, costume jewelry, hosiery, and occasional furniture pieces. . . .

"Compared with the corresponding period last year, the total volume of trade was estimated 7 to 10 per cent higher. This was a broader margin of gain than a week ago despite the fact that the automobile trade, now against the peak sales period of 1939, was no longer chalking up the exceptional year-to-year increases of October and early November."

Business Highlights

(Prepared for The Post by Standard Statistics.)

Raw Material Stocks

Evidence that manufacturers are buying heavily of raw materials is shown by the fact that stocks of raw commodities in the hands of primary producers have been holding stable for several months. The Standard Statistics' index of raw materials in the hands of the producers was 159.3 for September, which compares with 160.5 for August, and 161.5 for July. A year ago it was 162.6. Inasmuch as the production of these raw materials has been considerably increased it follows that processors must be buying freely; otherwise, supplies in the hands of the original producers would be rising.

Aircraft Deliveries

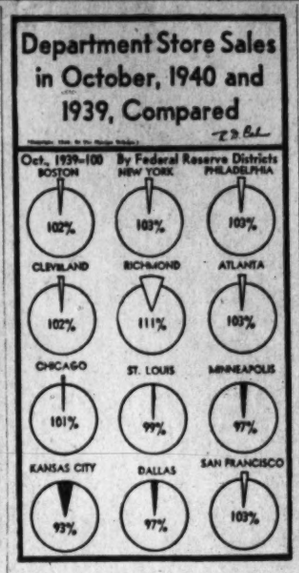
Output of aircraft and engines is steadily rising and monthly deliveries, now averaging at least $55,000,000, compared with $30,000,000 early in 1940, probably will reach $80,000,000, or more by the first of next year. The industry's orders backlog is around $3,500,000,000 at present, not counting the $3,000,000,000 of United States and British orders which are still in the discussion stage. The drop in September exports to $22,940,000 (British sources say they received 250 American planes in that month) from $37,330,000 in August, is not to be regarded as reversing the trend. By next June, the British say that they expect to be getting not fewer than 600 planes per month from us.

Retail Inventories

Even though retail inventories are increasing, the rise thus far has been very slight. Stocks in department stores were 67 in June, 68 in July, 69 in August and 70 in September, after adjustment for the usual seasonal changes. Expressed another way, we had an increase of less than 5 per cent in retail inventories between June and September, but sales during this same period increased 9 per cent. The ratio of retail inventories to retail sales is the most favorable on record. So with prospects favoring higher national income and higher retail sales, it follows that the increased selling must be promptly reflected in heavier orders for consumers' goods of all types, thereby stimulating production and pay rolls.

Copper Price Curbs

The fact that the Western miners' unions are strong supporters of the present 4-cent tariff on copper imports is a good reason for doubting that Congress will act on the suggestion that it be replaced by a sliding-scale duty in order to prevent runaway prices. However, two other courses of action are open. The President might cut the present tariff by 50 per cent, or to 2 cents, under the powers given him by the reciprocal trade pact legislation. Or the Army and Navy might declare foreign copper essential for strategic purposes, and thereby open the way to duty free importation for the manufacture of military equipment. Even if these powers are not employed, the mere fact of their existence should act as a deterrent to price advances.



Reserve Banks Cut Holdings Of U. S. Bonds

Further Decrease Of $23,000,000 Noted in Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that the 12 Federal Reserve banks reduced investments in Federal securities by $23,000,000 in the week ended November 20.

Selling $15,000,000 of bonds, and $8,000,000 of notes, the 12 banks reduced their investments in Government securities to $2,231,000,000. Similar gradual liquidation of Government securities has occurred almost weekly since the middle of September, when the banks' Government holdings totaled $2,434,000,000.

The board also said that last week lendable excess reserves of banks remained unchanged at $6,800,000,000.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended November 20 member bank reserve balances increased $75,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from decreases in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $23,000,000 in Treasury cash, and increases of $79,000,000 in gold stock and $4,000,000 in Treasury currency, offset in part by increases of $41,000,000 in money in circulation and $62,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $24,000,000 in reserve bank credit. Excess reserves of member banks on November 20 were estimated to be approximately $6,800,000,000, unchanged for the week.

"The principal change in holdings of bills and securities was a reduction of $23,000,000 in United States Government securities, direct and guaranteed; holdings of bonds decreased $15,000,000 and of notes $8,000,000."

Loadings Slump 4.2% in Week

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 745,295 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 33,023 cars, or 4.2 per cent, compared with the preceding week; a decrease of 21,692, or 2.8 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 88,229, or 13.4 per cent, compared with 1938.

The decline was led by miscellaneous freight and ore and was of normal seasonal proportions.

The Associated Press Seasonally Adjusted Index of Loadings, based on 1929-30 as 100, was unchanged at 75.9. A year ago it stood at 78.6.

Brokers' Loans Climb $4,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $324,000,000. The week ended Thursday and the total represented an increase of $4

Palestine Ban On Refugees Protested

U. S. Zionists to Carry Appeal to British Embassy in Capital

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Nov. 22.—Protests against the British government's refusal to admit 1,771 Jewish immigrants to Palestine, based on a report from Jerusalem on Thursday, were made today by organizations engaged in the support of Palestine as the national homeland of the Jewish people.

The emergency committee for Zionist affairs, an organization composed of representatives of all Zionist groups in America, announced that a delegation would call at the British Embassy in Washington on Monday to appeal for the refugees. After a meeting today to consider the situation the committee issued the following statement:

"The Emergency Committee for Zionist Affairs in America views with amazement the shocking action of the Palestine government in its inhuman deportation of 1,771 helpless men, women and children who in these terrible days of overwhelming suffering have reached the shores of the Jewish national home.

"The American friends of England and supporters of the cause of Britain must appeal to the conscience of the English people to protest and prevent such flagrant acts of appeasement and violation of basic human and moral law. The Zionists of America will do everything in their power to achieve the repudiation of the action of the Palestine government."

At the opening session of the Eastern conference of the Pioneer Women's Organization, comprising 200 clubs in the Atlantic area, who met in the Hotel Astor, the following resolution was proposed and approved by the delegates:

"Whereas, In response to the yearning of the Jewish people for Palestine and as a direct result of their having been driven out of central Europe by the German government, about 1,800 are now waiting outside of the port of Haifa to enter into Palestine and that the Palestine administration is preventing these immigrants from entering that haven of refuge;

"Therefore, Be it resolved that the Pioneer Women's Organization, at its Eastern conference assembled, protest the action of the Palestine administration, and further, call the attention of the British government to the fact that the Jewish community in Palestine is cooperating to the fullest extent in this war against forces of evil."

$231-for-$1 Checking Plan Is Investigated in New York

By Herbert K. Lewis

United Press Staff Writer

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 22.—A new scheme to "increase" buying power by establishing a $321 checking account for anyone with a $1 bill had merchants, bankers and New York State authorities here in a dither tonight.

The trouble was that checks issued to patrons of the National Depository of America began to bounce—in an apparently legal fashion.

The checks in general appear similar to regular bank checks, but differ in an inconspicuous but legal and practical way. Instead of the words "pay to the order of," they state the "transfer to the order of" and at the bottom stipulate "and charge account number——." They also bear the words "transferable by check only."

Representatives of the State Banking Department and the State attorney's office said that their financial-minded experts in New York were investigating legality of the scheme. Bankers were scheduling conferences with the 24-year-old manager of the National Depository's office here, the first in a proposed Nation-wide chain.

The Better Business Bureau was endeavoring to see that merchants who accepted the checks in payment for goods either received the goods back or cash from the buyer.

Meanwhile, Frank O'Hearn, retired Toronto broker, and his son, Douglas, 24, sponsors of the scheme, remained unflustered. They said difficulties encountered thus far were mere "misunderstandings," and prepared newspaper advertisement designed to clarify the situation.

In the absence of the Elder O'Hearn, who was prevented from entering the United States by immigration authorities this week, his son said that in five days of unadvertised operation the depository has assigned approximately $1,550 in cashless accounts. The staff is being enlarged tomorrow to take care of the rush.

"It works like this," he said. "You open an account with us by agreeing to pay a $1 fee to handle our expenses. We credit you with a $231 deposit and give you a book showing it. We also give you checks to issue against your account. When one of your checks is brought in, we'll credit the person who brings it with whatever amount it calls for.

"This credit will be given on our books in a new account assigned to the person who brings in the check, and he can issue checks against his account with us."

"You can see we'll not make any money on $1 a month from our patrons," young O'Hearn asserted. "This project is a public welfare work of the utmost importance—my father has been working on it for years."

The idea, he said, is based on the O'Hearn theory that "check currency deposited with commercial banks has become decirculated through deficient accounting and banking procedure." The "decirculated" funds, according to O'Hearn, amounts to over $30,000,000,000.

"Thus, on the basis of 130,000,000 population in this country, there's enough money in the banks in unclaimed deposits to give every person $231. The National Depository of America has commenced the restoration of this deflated buying power in the form of free checking accounts."

Listen!
with Glynn

(WJSV's Bob Baker today pinch-hits for Paul Glynn.)

You've failed to live that full, well-rounded life people are always recommending unless you're a regular customer on Charles Daly's "Magic Carpet" . . . aired 8:30 almost any morning you care to listen. It's then Charley conducts his forum of gags, questions, laughs and gleanings from Joe Miller's Joke Book—first printing, 1866.

The other day, Charley started his show into its third year. Principally because it's a good show and gets results for the sponsor. During its two years our WJSV statisticians have compiled certain information so valuable that for an additional 10 cents it will get you a bowl of soup at any local lunch counter.

Anyway, the "Magic Carpet" has bounced Washingtonians but of bed with varying reactions for 550 consecutive weekdays . . . played in person before 15,000 good folk, 2,800 of whom participated and received a loaf of that bread.

This fellow Daly is nice to look at, and very funny. His forte is making people feel at home while threatened by one medium-sized microphone. We recall the day when a guest defined an Irish bull as a Brooklyn policeman, and the newly married chap who said the plural of mother-in-law was "trouble." Then there was the kind lady who reckoned as how a polygon was a dead parrot.

All of which brings us to this . . . if it's good fun you're after, a call to WJSV will bring the "Magic Carpet" to your meeting or party . . . free. Hand me that phone, Miss McGrain!

The Post Radio Time Table

FOOTBALL GAMES: 1:45, WRC—Georgetown-George Washington; 1:45, WJSV—Penn-Cornell; 2, WMAL—Notre Dame-Northwestern; 3:15, WOL—Ohio State-Michigan.

9:15 a. m., WJSV—The Post's Mary Haworth offers the third in her series of informal—but always applicable—advice. Her radio column is much like her daily printed one.

11:05, WJSV—Benedetto Marcello, the eighteenth century Venetian composer, is represented by his Concerto for Oboe and Strings in the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music program, which continues from three movements from Haydn's String Quartet in D major, Op. 64, No. 5, "The Lark."

12:00 noon, WMAL—Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, is among those speaking on the Education Forum.

1:30 p. m., WMAL—Do women dress to please men or to please themselves? This ageless question is tackled by two noted stylists, Omar Kiam and Elizabeth Hawes, with Ilka Chase as referee.

5:30, WRC—Clarence Snyder, organist, and a Chamber Orchestra feature Handel's Concerto for Organ and Orchestra in F major on Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music broadcast. Mozart's Divertimento in D also is programmed.

7:00, WJSV—"The Influence of the Press Today," a matter which very nearly started a riot on last Sunday's American Forum of the Air, is the subject for the People's Plattform. Herbert Bayard Swope, sr., editor of the old New York World, and Raymond Clapper, columnist, Regan McCrary of the New York Mirror, and Samuel Grafton, of the New York Post, discuss the functions of the press.

7:45, WRC—Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York.

8:15, WMAL—Dedication of "The Transparent Woman" as a permanent exhibit of the Chicago Museum of Science and Industry before a group of notables.

9:35, WMAL—Arturo Toscanini returns to conduct the NBC Symphony Orchestra for his fourth season. This opening concert will be held in the maestro's well-loved Carnegie Hall and will be a performance of Verdi's "Requiem" with Metropolitan Opera soloists and the Westminster Choir in the choral passages. Zinka, Milanov, soprano; Bruna Castagna, contralto; Jussi Bjoerling, tenor; and Nicola Moscona, bass, are the soloists. The concert is a benefit for the Alma Gluck Zimbalist Memorial Fund and will also feature Verdi's "Te Deum."

opening lead meant the difference between a 2,840-point win for the declarers and a 1,400-point defeat. Had East elected to lead a diamond instead of a heart, his adversaries' unhappy contract of seven no trump would have been set five tricks, doubled, vulnerable. With the heart lead which he made, they won 13 tricks easily.

At a time like this a player will have to count ten before he makes a grab for his partner. In view of North's weird bidding, East can hardly be blamed for not leading a diamond; although, had he waited for his partner to double, he might have fallen upon the right opening lead.

British Shipping 'Difficulty' Created By U. S. Generosity

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Nov. 22.—To conserve valuable shipping space for food and munitions from the United States, the British government announced yesterday the formation of a special committee with power to sanction or prevent shipment to Great Britain of war relief cargoes assembled by such voluntary organizations in the United States as the Red Cross and the British War Relief Society, now merged with the Allied relief fund.

The committee will have Sir Ronald Lindsay, former British Ambassador at Washington, as chairman and it will include representatives of various organizations engaged in war relief for this country.

The generosity of the American public has been so lavish, it was said, that it has created a shipping problem "of no little difficulty." The danger is that humanitarian cargoes, however welcome to this country, might crowd out the essential engines of war and overtax transport facilities at British ports.
